Draft Holdover Plan Agreed On; Overseas Service Move Shelved

Barkley Confident Retention Will Win; Leaders to Support Proposed Program

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Administration yesterday decided to press for the immediate passage of legislation to extend the service of selectees, National Guardsmen and reservists beyond one year, despite prospects of strong opposition in Congress.

At the same time, leaders indicated that a companion proposal, urged by the Army high command, which would empower President Roosevelt to send selectees and Guardsmen outside the Western Hemisphere, had been shelved, at least for the present.

The decision to go ahead with legislation authorizing the citizen-soldiers to be held in service was made at a two-hour White House conference attended by Senate and House leaders and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff. Authoritative sources said that House leaders advised President Roosevelt that the proposal to retain the selectees was opposed by a majority of Representatives but that the Chief Executive backed up Marshall's stand that their retention was essential to American security.

Barkley Convinced

Senator Majority Leader Barkley, however, declared that the picture presented by the Army chief of staff as to the need for the measure was "convincing" and foresaw its approval.

"When the facts of the situation and the need for the legislation become apparent, Congress will not shirk its duty," he told reporters.

"I think it is essential in the interest of national defense that the Army be not disintegrated by withdrawing soldiers from units in which they have been trained. When the question of national defense is concerned, the wise thing to do is to use the best men in all branches so the best Army that can be obtained shall be ready if and when needed."

Barkley said that the Army proposal to remove the present restriction on sending selectees or Guardsmen outside the Western Hemisphere was not discussed at yesterday's conference. He indicated that the immediate program did not include this measure, and Senator Hill, of Alabama, Democratic whip and a member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, said that it "probably would not be considered at any time in the near future."

Those Present

Besides Barkley and Hill, those attending the White House conference were Speaker Rayburn, House Majority Leader McCormack, Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the chairmen of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees, Senator Reynolds and Representative May, Senator Austin, assistant Senate minority leader and a member of the military committee, and Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York.

House leaders are said to have suggested a compromise plan when they advised President Roosevelt that the proposal to retain the selectees faced probable defeat. This would be to keep the Guardsmen and Reserves in service and encour-

A Government of Laws

Legislative Program Grows, Dimming Prospect of Recess

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Heavy additions to an already formidable legislative program yesterday dimmed prospects of a late summer Congressional recess.

Following yesterday's White House conference, Senate Majority Leader Barkley said there was no hope of adjournment and practically no chance of a recess.

House leaders still clung to the possibility of some respite for House members following passage of the tax bill next month, but a rapidly expanding program presaged a full calendar.

Besides Selective Service extension, now definitely on the list, measures were piling up with at least tacit Administration backing. These included:

The War Department's draft property bill, modified to specify items needed for defense, due to be reported by the Senate Military Committee early next week.

The $4,770,000,000 supplemental Army appropriation and another $3,323,000,000 for the Navy and Maritime Commission, on which House hearings are now being held.

Additional appropriation of approximately $7,000,000,000 for the second portion of the lend-lease program—estimates not yet prepared.

Price control legislation, now being redrafted by Defense Price Administrator Leon Henderson for submission to Congress "soon."

Prospective recommendations by the Securities and Exchange Commission for technical changes in the Securties Act to aid the capital market and to stimulate financing for defense.

Excepting defense appropriations, slated for swift approval, bitter controversies appeared brewing on many of the other measures.

Henderson's preliminary price control draft was summarily rejected by leaders, and a compromise is expected to be evolved combining features suggested by Bernard Baruch, freezing prices, rents and costs as they stood on a given day.

First version of the property requisitioning bill met similar opposition. Pigeonholed at the outset by the House Military Committee, the Senate Military Committee has since worked out a compromise

5-Cent Milk Sales Reach New Peak

Attributed to WPA Cut, and Campaign; Decision Is Due On Price Increase

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Sales of low cost milk to needy Washington families are at the highest point since the program was started in August, 1940.

On Saturday 5,097 nickel quarts were purchased at the 11 milk depots scattered over the city, it was revealed yesterday by David Miller, surplus commodity director for the Department of Public Welfare.

This was a new one-day record, yet one which is expected to be broken within a week, so brisk is the demand for low-priced milk.

The increase is attributed by Miller and other officials to this month's WPA pay roll slashes, which made more than 3,000 additional individuals and families eligible to apply for nickel quarts, and to the eight-week-old campaign by The Post to improve and expand the Capital's relief milk program.

1,242 Apply in Month

Miller said that up to yesterday 1,242 applications for milk cards had been received this month. Approximately 900 have been granted. Requests are coming in faster than the applicants can be certified and their cards mailed to them.

Meantime, word as to whether milk producers will receive a price increase was awaited by dairies and consumers, as well as the farmers themselves. It was reported at one source of official information that Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard will hand down his decision before the end of this week.

Informed quarters, both governmental and private, believe that an increase in the price of surplus milk for the needy will not be granted, whatever Secretary Wickard decides as to regular Class I milk.

Would Impair Program

It is apparent that chances of expanding the 5-cent program to provide milk to more needy families and of establishing a penny project in elementary schools to benefit undernourished children would be impaired if the Federal Government had to pay more money for this surplus milk.

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association is asking a 1-cent per quart increase in the price of relief, as well as regular Class I, milk.

Charles I. Dunn, Federal milk marketing administrator for the Washington area, reported yesterday that producers shipping their product into the Capital received an average composite price of $2.77 per hundredweight (46 quarts) in June, 2 cents above the May figure.

13 Loaded Nazi Troopships Sunk, Reds Say; Kiev Shelled, Its Fall Near, Berlin Reports

Key City on Road To Moscow Taken, Leningrad Pincers Closing, Nazis Say

Bulletins

Rome (Tuesday), July 15 (U.P.).—The newspaper Messaggero reported in a dispatch from Amsterdam today that a German spearhead had driven to within 130 miles of Moscow.

By International News Service

Berlin (Tuesday), July 15.—German capture of the Russian fortress city of Mogilev on the east bank of the upper Dnepr River was announced in Berlin early today, as the Ukrainian metropolis of Kiev rocked under siege bombardment and while Leningrad was threatened with encirclement.

Occupation of Mogilev, 50 miles south of previously captured Vitebsk and deep inside the fractured Stalin belt of fortifications, was declared to have paved the way for opening of a wide "corridor to Moscow" via the vital road-rail junction city of Smolensk.

Smolensk, gateway to Moscow which lies 250 miles farther east, was already being subjected to constant air bombardment and artillery fire in preparation for a complete break through to the Soviet capital.

Smolensk, described in Berlin as the "last remaining barrier on the road to Moscow," was threatened with blitz envelopment by rampaging German tank and motorized forces swinging around from Vitebsk, northwest of Smolensk and looping out beyond Mogilev on the southwest.

Pincers Aim at Leningrad

As a vast German-Finnish pincer offensive on the northern front menaced Russia's second city of Leningrad with the danger of encirclement, that drive was further advanced by a fresh break through in the upper section of the Stalin Line, scored Sunday when a concrete fort in the Opochka sector was blown up by "concentrated explosive charges."

Two "strongly fortified" Soviet field positions near the bunker were said to have been stormed and seized, opening a gap nearly 2,000 feet wide in the Russian line. This gap, it was said, was quickly widened by German reinforcements rushed into the fray.

Opochka lies east of the Latvian border and just south of the giant

Japanese Close Kobe to Aliens; Drive on Indo-China Expected

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, July 14.—Closing of the Japanese port of Kobe to foreigners for ten days from tomorrow was reported today and word ran through the Far East that a new Japanese move was pending, probably against French Indo-China.

Word filtering out of Japan said also a number of reservists had been called to active duty in the Japanese army. Kobe is a likely point of embarkation from Japan for any troop movement to the south.

(London sources predicted a Japanese attack on Indo-China and Thailand as preparation for a drive against oil and rubber-producing islands of the Netherlands East Indies. They expected Japan to try to catch Britain and the United States involved in the Atlantic and establish sea and air bases at Saigon and Bangkok from which to threaten British Singapore.)

Japanese military and naval quarters in Shanghai appeared to be deliberately letting reports spread that Japan intended to attack Russia in Siberia—either on the day Moscow falls or on August 15.

Foreign military men, however, were convinced that this was a combination war of nerves on Russia and smoke screen. They said Indo-China would be the object of the next Japanese move.

A dispatch from Saigon said tension was apparent there, with all quarters expecting a sudden Japanese thrust. The Japanese press raged against what it termed persecution of pro-Japanese Annamites, and the Indo-China government was silent on the charges.

Although foreign military quarters discounted rumors of isolated clashes between Russian and Japanese forces along the Manchukuo frontier, they said Japan might risk tackling the Red army in Siberia if European Russia collapses. Soviet forces in the East are estimated at about 39 divisions. A number of Red submarines are based at Vladivostok.

Heavy activity has been reported along the railway from Mukden, southern Manchukuo, to the Soviet frontier. Foreign quarters in North China said the Japanese had withdrawn two divisions of troops from the Peiping-Tientsin area to Tsingtao, where they embarked, presumably for Manchukuo.

Stories that Japan is about to attack Russia are current in Kobe and Osaka, persons arriving from Japan reported.

Coastal Guns Help

By the United Press

Moscow (Tuesday), July 15. An annihilating Russian naval and air victory in the Baltic in which 30 German troopships, tank-laden supply vessels and destroyers were sunk or set ablaze was reported today in an official Soviet war communique.

For the third day the Red Army "resisted the enemy's offensive" on the vital fronts protecting Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev and struck out in repeated counter-assaults that inflicted heavy losses on the Germans, the communique said, referring to Monday's operations.

Thirteen Transports Sunk

Indicating a staggering loss of life among the German troops en route by sea to the northern front, the communique said that 13 transports and a supply ship loaded with Nazi tanks and other mechanized equipment were sent to the bottom by Russian shells and bombs.

Two German destroyers escorting the convoy were sunk and a third was left in flames, it was stated.

Thirteen other German transports were left afire after the battle, which was said to have occurred Saturday evening when the Baltic squadron of the Russian fleet and Soviet planes encountered the enemy convoy.

Russian coastal artillery was said to have aided in wrecking the convoy of troopships and supply vessels "escorted by a strong patrol of destroyers, patrol boats, sloops and fighter planes."

"We suffered no losses either in ships or planes," the communique asserted.

(The German radio, heard by C. B. S., told of an "attempted attack" by Soviet motor torpedo boats and bombers in the Baltic near the Russian coast which was said to have been beaten off Sunday by "fierce defensive fire" of German mine sweepers. The mine sweepers later were shelled by Russian coastal batteries.)

Battle in Three Sectors

The latest communique told of continued heavy fighting on the three main sectors of the 1,800-mile front where the Red Army battled to crush repeated Nazi efforts to smash through in the vital Pskov, Vitebsk and Novograd-Volynski sectors.

The "rout" of a force of 3,000 Germans on the southern wing of the front, presumably west of Kiev at the frontier of the Ukraine, was reported, and on the central sector west of Moscow Soviet land and air

Tipsy Driver Who Kills Held A Murderer

Malice Presumed In Nestlerode Case, Justices Decide

The drunken driver becomes a murderer when his automobile cuts down an innocent citizen, the United States Court of Appeals here declared yesterday.

In sharp, scornful phrases, Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner denied the appeal of Richard S. Nestlerode, 27, from a prison term of 15 years to life for killing two persons in a drunken joyride here last June 22.

Nestlerode ran down Mrs. Edna Mitchell, 34, Negro, at Twelfth and H Streets Northeast. Without stopping he sped away, dodging through the heavy Saturday afternoon traffic at 65 miles an hour. In his flight he fatally injured Joseph Nappo, 50, hit several other cars and was not caught until he rammed a street car.

Nestlerode's defense was that he was too drunk to know what he was doing. He testified that his memory was a blank, that he recollected nothing that happened before he woke up in a cell and wondered why he was under arrest. A defense psychiatrist called this insanity.

Drunkenness No Excuse

But the jurors called it murder, second degree.

Chief Justice Groner confirmed their verdict in these words:

"The result of his acts was to bring to their deaths a woman and a man.

"It would be a sad reflection on justice and a menace to society to hold that, because he has chosen to get stupidly drunk, he should escape the punishment of the law."

House Passes 7 District Bills In Half Hour

Recreation Board And Child Actor Measures Approved

The House yesterday, in 30 minutes, gave its unanimous consent to seven District bills, including legislation to permit employment of minors in licensed theatrical performances, to place a seven-member citizen dominated board in charge of District recreation facilities and to create an Industrial Accident Prevention Board to promulgate and enforce safety regulations.

Republican members asked less than a half-dozen questions as Chairman Jennings Randolph of the District Committee explained and the House swiftly accepted bills which would also:

Safeguard the records of the Board of Public Welfare.

Amend the District License Act to relieve out-of-town sightseeing companies operating occasionally in the District from payment of license tax.

Increase by $50,000 the $450,000 Public Works authorization for the new recorder of deeds building.

Permit Steuart Bros., Inc., to construct oil-carrying pipelines in the vicinity of Thirteenth and M Streets Southeast.

Meanwhile, Randolph introduced a bill to increase the District gasoline tax 2 cents a gallon and thereby raise revenue for financing over a period of eight years the $44,000,000 highway improvement program of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director.

The 2-cent increase is necessary, the District Commissioners said in a letter to Randolph urging approval of the tax bill, if the highway pro-

Bill for Uniform U. S. Promotions Passed by Senate

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved the uniform promotion bill that will ultimately raise the salaries of approximately 350,000 Federal workers. The bill now goes to conference where minor Senate amendments will be ironed out. The House previously gave the bill its unanimous support.

The uniform promotion plan was drafted by the Budget Bureau last fall at the request of the House Appropriations Committee. It has the approval of President Roosevelt and his signature to the bill is a certainty. The plan will cost an estimated $29,000,000 over a 10-year period but after that time it is supposed to be financed from "lapse" money.

Report of Hitler And Goering Tiff 'Bunk,' Say Nazis

Berlin, July 14 (INS).—Berlin officials today took cognizance of Moscow reports of a split in the Nazi Party which had resulted in the reported incarceration of Reichsmarshal Goering. Such statements were officially characterized as "bunk," it being asserted that Goering is personally directing the air war against Russia.

Bern, Switzerland, July 14.—Newspapermen recently returned from the Reich reported no evidence of a rift between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Reichsmarshal Goering.

The informants consider it would be misdirected speculation to count on the flight of Rudolf Hess being followed at this time by further serious differences of opinion among the Nazi hierarchy.

Civilized Nations to Win War, Bullitt Declares, Citing American Aid

By the Associated Press

Montreal, July 14.—William C. Bullitt, former United States Ambassador to France, told the French people today in a broadcast Bastille Day message that in the end the tricolor "will fly over Berlin."

"If you today know how to listen," he said, "you know that the Nazis will not win. This war will be won by all the civilized nations of the earth. In the end the swastika will not fly over Paris. Your flag will fly over Berlin."

Bullitt received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from the University of Montreal.

His address—in French—was broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the British Broadcasting Corporation and was sent to France and French overseas possessions from Boston. United States networks carried a translation.

"I know that today, the fourteenth of July, 90 per cent of the French people are praying God for the victory of the British Empire and the liberation of France," said Bullitt.

U. S. Course Charted

Bullitt declared the people of the United States had freely chosen their course in the war and "are ready to face any consequences."

Nazis to Suffer As Has Britain, Churchill Vows

Tables Turned, He Says; Italy Faces Bombing As Nights Grow Longer

By the Associated Press

London, July 14.—In two speeches breathing confidence and defiance, Winston Churchill jubilantly declaimed today to cheering thousands of London's civilian defenders that the tables are turned and the time has come for Germany to suffer the terror from the skies she has dealt on Britain.

The prime minister spoke first to 6,000 uniformed members of London's civilian defense services at a great rally in Hyde Park and then again, in even more dynamic tones, at a luncheon of the service organizations in London County Hall.

Methodical Bombing

Five points stood out in the prime minister's messages:

1. "It is time the Germans should be made to suffer in their own homeland and cities something of the torments they have twice in our lifetime let loose upon their neighbors and upon the world. . . .

"We have now intensified for the past month a systematic, scientific and methodical bombing on a large scale of German cities and industries. . . .

"We believe it to be in our power to keep this process going on a steadily rising tide month after month, year after year, until the Nazi regime is either extirpated by us or, better still, torn to pieces by the German people themselves."

2. There can be "no truce or parley with Hitler or the grisly gang who did Hitler's worst . . . We shall

All-Americans Eligible

Officials Envision Police Force Of Muscle-Men and Brains

A Metropolitan Police Department of men with the physical specifications of an All-American tackle, yet thoroughly drilled in crime-detection and law-enforcement problems was envisioned last night by the House Police Subcommittee and the District Commissioners.

High on the list of changes projected to remedy police deficiencies disclosed in more than two weeks of Congressional investigation is upward revision of physical requirements for acceptance of men on the force.

Declaring that some members of the department are "much too small for the job," Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the investigating subcommittee, states that, as one of the results of the investigation, new police appointees would have to be no less than 5 feet 10 inches in height and weigh at least 175 pounds.

The department at present accepts men as long as they weigh no less than 150 pounds and are at least 5 feet 8 inches in height. All rookie policemen are required to pass a rigid physical examination.

"What the department needs," said Schulte, "is men with muscle."

Members of the subcommittee, meeting in a 90-minute executive session with Commissioners J. Russell Young and Melvin C. Hazen and District Budget Officer Walter Fowler, yesterday began a "point-by-point" draft of recommendations for "top-to-bottom" reorganization of the department. These changes are also in the making:

Crickets Too Noisy, Protest Sleepy S. E. Residents

Chirping crickets are keeping the residents awake at night, and eating their clothes, near Pennsylvania Avenue and Thirtieth Street, the Southeast Business Men's Association declared last night in a resolution asking the District Commissioners to eliminate a dump in that area.

The resolution stated that refuse placed in the dump by the District had bred the unwelcome crickets.

Other resolutions at the meeting were to give the businessmen of the city a hearing on reorganization of the Police Department, to equalize taxicab rates in the different zones, and to speed up the appointment of two members to the Public Utilities Commission so it can function.

72% in British Poll Believe U. S. Will Enter Conflict

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, July 14.—Seventy-two per cent of the British people believe the United States, sooner or later, will enter the war, according to an informal poll completed today.

Fourteen per cent do not think Washington will make up its mind to come into the conflict, while another 14 per cent have no definite opinion on the subject.

Almost one-half the sample segment of Britons approached in the test believe that American entry into the war was required if Britain is to emerge on the winning side.

Forty-three per cent of the men and women questioned said that Britain could not win without United States assistance. Thirty-five per cent thought Britain could win.

What Do Wars Cost?

How many U. S. soldiers and sailors were killed in the last war? What was the money cost to us of the war? Do you think the present war would cost more or less—in both lives and money—if the United States got into it? These are the questions Gallup interviewers have been asking all over the nation—the answers to this "quiz-poll" appear in tomorrow's Post.

U. S. Drivers Keep to Right, British Left—Iceland's in Middle

By Arni Thorsteinsson
United Press Staff Writer

Reykjavik, Iceland, July 14.—A minor problem caused by the arrival of thousands of American military men here is whether Icelanders shall drive or ride on the right or left side of the road.

When automobiles first were introduced here, the right hand rule was established. Then the British came and the regulations were changed in favor of the left hand rule. Now scores of American vehicles are careening down the right hand side of the road, causing some confusion and a good deal of anxiety.

American forces stationed at a large camp "somewhere in Iceland" were loud in their praises today of swimming facilities, but complained of the bad roads leading to the capital and its movies and sweets shops.

At the camp, evacuated by the British for the new American garrison, is a river with several good swimming holes. Hot springs feeding the river make its water comfortable in winter. And for those who prefer a brisk, invigorating dip, there is a cold mountain stream nearby.

For news the Americans largely depend on British Broadcasting Corporation programs transmitted for two hours daily, although some of the boys with special radios are able to get American stations. The Icelanders also have started a small daily newspaper for the troops and its circulation is increasing daily.

R. A. F. Hits 5 Ships And Bags 9 Planes

By the Associated Press

London, July 14.—The Royal Air Force went hunting today for German shipping and German planes, found both and, to tabulate the British reports, scored hits on five ships totaling 22,500 tons and shot down nine aircraft.

A tenth German plane, the second bomber of the day, was credited to antiaircraft defenses along the Scottish east coast. The other bomber was destroyed by fighters off the coast of Wales, said the official report.

The R. A. F. made morning raids on the German-held French ports of Cherbourg and Le Havre, rail yards at Hazebrouck, near St. Omer, and in the afternoon big Blenheims of the bomber command, searching for North Sea shipping, attacked a small convoy off the Dutch Frisian Islands, the air ministry said.

The morning attack on Cherbourg was costly, for the British acknowledged loss of two bombers and four fighters. However, seven German fighters were claimed there and at Le Havre.

Light antiaircraft fire as well as German fighters met the British at Cherbourg but the townspeople gave the R. A. F. a different sort of welcome, said the air ministry news service.

Today was Bastille Day and the streets were full of cheering, living people as the bombers roared over the roof-tops, the agency said.

German raiders also struck across the channel by daylight. Three soldiers were reported wounded when an attacking plane machine-gunned a train in southern England.

The Ministry of Home Security reported that only 399 persons were killed in air raids on Britain last month, the lowest of any since July, 1940, and only a fraction of the peak casualties of last September when 6,954 were killed and 10,615 were sent to hospitals.

Turks Await 14,000 Troops From Syria

By the Associated Press

Alexandretta, Turkey, July 14.—Fourteen thousand Vichy French soldiers will cross the border from Syria into Turkey within 48 hours, informed sources said tonight.

They will enter this country at Antioch, these informants announced.

This development was disclosed after Cairo announced formal signing at Acre, Palestine, of the armistice ending the five-week war of British and Free French forces against Vichy troops in Syria and Lebanon.

(British armistice terms, not yet made public, were said to have given officers and men of the Vichy forces in the Levant the option of returning to France or joining Free French De Gaullists, under whom they would retain ranks, salaries and pensions. The troops scheduled to enter Turkey apparently are those who elected to go home.)

Petain Protests

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, July 14.—At the moment when the French forces in Syria have given way before the superior strength of the British, Marshal Petain today voiced France's protest in radio messages addressed to the French troops and to the populations of Syria and the Lebanon.

Marshal Petain asked the troops to show in defeat the same loyalty that they had shown on the field of battle. In other words, he counseled them to decline the offers made to attract them into the ranks of the attackers.

To the peoples of the Levant, he gave the assurance that though momentarily eclipsed in the Near East, France would remain faithful to the bond established by centuries of associations.

In these two messages the French position on the Syrian surrender becomes fully defined. Briefly it is that the British attack was unjustified; that France under the terms of her mandate and under the armistice with Germany was bound to defend the territory to the limit of her forces; that having to give way to superior strength she declines to accept the political terms executed, and instead, lays down her arms under protest.

The French press reproduced a Reuter dispatch to London in which the British correspondent recalled that the signature took place in the Sydney Smith Barracks at Acre, named in memory of the British general who had once successfully defended the city against Napoleon

Soviet Military Experts Back From London With New Plan

By the United Press

London (Tuesday), July 15.—The chief of the Soviet military mission to London and his expert on mechanized warfare were back in Moscow for "consultation" today, following indications that a new Russian-British plan of strategy against Germany has been drafted.

The new plan, calling for close reciprocal assistance of both the Russian and British armed forces, augments the mutual aid pact signed by the two countries in Moscow Saturday.

The fact that the Russian military leader hurried back to Moscow simultaneously with the signing of the pact, after only a week in London, led to predictions of "early concrete action on joint British-Soviet mutual assistance.

Upon their return, it was reported, the Russian leaders will bring specific Soviet suggestions for British and possibly American aid as well as first hand accounts of the bitter battle of the so-called Stalin line.

An official announcement disclosed that the chief of the Soviet mission, Lieut. Gen. Filip Ivanovitch Golikov, had left secretly for Moscow by plane Saturday for conferences, accompanied by Col. V. Dragun, specialist in motorized and mechanized warfare and deputy chief of the External Relations Bureau of the Soviet Defense Commissariat.

Golikov and Dragun are "returning to London within a few days," it was stated and, meanwhile, British-Russian technical talks are being carried on here by other members of Golikov's mission under the leadership of Rear Admiral N. M. Kharlamov, deupty chief of naval staff.

A Soviet-Polish pact to supplement the new Russian-British accord, recognize Poland's right to independence and establish a Polish army of 200,000 men on Russian soil has been virtually concluded, it was understood.

Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador to Britain, and Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, premier of the Polish government in exile, were expected to sign the new agreement within the next few days.

forces destroyed about 100 German tanks and many cars.

The Red air fleet, reported Monday to have wrecked German tank columns and presumably stemmed the Nazis' new offensive, was said to have continued large-scale bombings of German airdromes, troops, tanks and panzer forces.

The communique, describing the Soviet naval-air victory in the Baltic, said:

"On the evening of July 12 German transports loaded with troops and tanks and escorted by a strong detachment of destroyers, patrol boats, torpedo boats and fighter planes were sighted in the Baltic Sea.

"The Red banner Baltic fleet, by a series of successive blows by our aviation, warships and coastal defense guns, inflicted heavy losses upon the enemy, sinking two destroyers, 13 transports and a barge loaded with tanks.

"Besides this, one destroyer and 13 transports were badly damaged and left on fire. We suffered no losses either in ships or aircraft."

The communique did not reveal the size of the Russian naval and air forces attacking the German convoy nor describe the location of the encounter except to say that it occurred in the Baltic.

Monday's morning communique asserted the Russian air force, claimed by official quarters to have achieved "full superiority" over Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe, had inflicted heavy blows on Nazi mechanized forces and German airdromes behind the fighting lines.

Heavy aerial blows were delivered against the enemy bases in Rumania, including the repeatedly bombed Ploesti oil field region just north of Bucharest, the railroad junction of Jassy on the Prut River and the railroad town of Roman, it was stated.

(A Rumanian communique, picked up in New York from the British radio, said that three oil tanks had been set afire by Russian bombers at Ploesti and that there were "a number of civilian and military casualties.")

The Monday morning communique told of the destruction of 31 Nazi tanks in two encounters with Russian land and air forces.

During Sunday, it was stated, the Red air forces destroyed 94 German planes, against the loss of only 12 Soviet planes.

In one sector, identified only as "X," the Germans were said to have been discovered making preparations for a heavy tank attack and at dawn, after heavy artillery preparations, the attack was launched.

The German tanks were allowed to advance to within about 25 yards of the Russian positions where land mines were detonated, blowing up the three leading German tanks. Antitank guns destroyed 16 more enemy tanks at point-blank range, it was said.

A formation of Soviet bombers raided a German tank column concentrated in a forest, diving on the tanks and destroying 12 of them, it was said.

The communique told of fast-spreading guerrilla attacks behind the German lines, as revealed by German prisoners, and said that in one sector on July 9 a large enemy supply train was "completely smashed."

The Soviet guerrillas were said to have captured many machine guns, grenades and rifles and left 98 German dead and wounded at the scene of the attack.

Moscow Government to Stay

Moscow, July 14 (AP).—The Soviet government has no intention of leaving Moscow and has not advised the diplomatic corps to prepare to move, it was stated authoritatively tonight.

Members of the American and British embassies and other missions have stayed at their posts in Moscow. The only evacuation undertaken here has been that of women, children, aged persons and those not working.

'You Made Me Love You' May Honor Moscow

London, July 14 (U.P.).—The British Broadcasting Co.'s ommission of the Russian "internationale" from a program of the Anthems of Britain's allies Sunday was reported tonight to have irritated Soviet quarters.

The Evening Standard suggested that, instead of the Internationale, the B. B. C. should honor Moscow by playing the old tune, "You Made Me Love You, But I Didn't Want to Do It."

Turks, Nazis Plan Pact

Ankara, July 14.—A new trade agreement between Turkey and Germany is now being negotiated, according to official German sources here, who say it will cover all exchange of goods to the extent of 25,000,000 pounds Turkish.

Tables Turned, Churchill Says

not turn from our purpose however somber the road, however grievous the cost, because we know that out of this time of trial and tribulation will be born a new freedom and glory for all mankind."

3. "As the nights grow longer that unhappy province of Germany which used to be called Italy will have its fair share."

4. "I admit when the storm broke in September I was for several weeks very anxious about what the results would be. We were not then prepared, as we are now . . . But there was one thing about which there was never any doubt—the courage, the unfaltering grit and stamina of the Londoners . . . Without that, all would have failed. But upon that rock all stood unconquerable."

"London Will Not Wince"

5. "Will the bombing attacks of last autumn and winter come back again? . . . If the storm is to renew itself, London will be ready, London will not wince, London can take it again."

Churchill brought a tumult of cheers when he recalled the Nazi bombardments of Warsaw, Rotterdam and Belgrade and, addressing Hitler, declared:

"We know too well the bestial assaults you are making upon the Russian people to whom our hearts go out in their valiant struggle."

Churchill anticipated renewed Nzai bombardments of Britain because, he said:

"We shall continue the monstrous discharge of high explosives upon Germany."

"In the last few weeks alone," he added, "we have thrown upon Germany about half the tonnage of bombs thrown by the Germans upon our cities during the whole course of the war. But this is only the beginning. And we hope by next July to multiply our deliveries many fold.

"It is for this reason . . . that I must ask you to be prepared for severest counter-action by the enemy.

"Our methods of dealing with the German night raiders have greatly improved and are steadily improving. They no longer relish their trips to our shores. It is not true to say that they did not come his afternoon because they were all engaged in Russia.

"They have a bombing force in the west quite capable of making very heavy attacks. I do not know why they did not come, but . . . it is certainly not because they have begun to love us more.

"It may be because they are saving up, but even if that is so, the very fact that they have to save up should give us heart by revealing the truth of our steady advance from an almost unarmed nation to a position at least of equality and soon of superiority to them in the air."

Pincers Closing on Leningrad, Nazis Say

Russian fortress of Pskov, now reported under attack as the Germans develop the southern arm of a pincer drive calculated to encircle Leningrad.

(The Finnish high command at Helsinki announced the northern arm of this push had penetrated up to 37 miles east of the Russo-Finnish border. Finnish troops, having opened their assault last Thursday, were declared to be continuing their advance through Karelia and the areas fringing the northern shore of Lake Ladoga. The latter advance threatens Leningrad from the rear.)

Forecast a Debacle

Spokesmen predicted that claimed Russian losses of 1,000,000 men during the "first phase" of the war comprising the last three weeks of conflict will be increased to 2,000,000 during the second phase now under way, and that the third phase will sweep Soviet forces completely out of European Russia.

It was claimed that virtually half the Russian tank and airplane strength was destroyed in the war's initial phase and predictions were confidently made that "a couple of thousand" more tanks and guns will be added to Nazi booty in the present three-pronged drive, "thus laying the Russians wide open for the debacle."

The Russians were acknowledged to have made a bitter last stand fight at Vitebsk, a main gateway through the Stalin line opening the way to Moscow, but were said to have been unsuccessful.

In the north Finn forces under command of Baron Field Marshal Carl Mannerheim were announced to have opened a double offensive along both sides of Lake Ladoga. The German forces were stated to be pushing up from the south, on both east and west sides of Lake Peipus. The strategy was said to be a junction of the German and Finnish forces east of Leningrad so that that key city will be boxed on all landward sides, trapping all troops stationed there.

Stalin Line in Way

The path of the German troops was admittedly not a smooth one, as the northern end of the Stalin Line lies across it, but several bunkers were said to have been destroyed already and mechanized units were assertedly gaining ground rapidly.

The Luftwaffe was reported to have inflicted particularly heavy casualties on defenders of the Stalin Line retreating in the Vitebsk region.

Both Smolensk and Leningrad were announced to be under heavy bombardment by Luftwaffe planes, but apparently the heaviest "preparatory" artillery fire and bombing was directed at Kiev, where warehouses were said to have been set afire and waterworks destroyed.

(The German-controlled Holland radio announced that the fall of Kiev "is to be expected at any moment.")

Soldier correspondents with the German forces reported that Red divisions were being encountered composed of "broken remnants" while scarcely trained rookies were showing up among the increasing number of Russian deserters.

Red tanks captured in the past two days were alleged to have been found being operated by emergency drivers and green crews. In the Leningrad sector parachute troops were reported being used by the Reds as ground forces, indicating a lack of infantry.

The Berlin radio said that on the basis of reports from the front "the dissolution of some Soviet divisions seems to be complete."

The Red air force, despite terrific losses during the first three weeks of war, was acknowledged to be still active, though it was denied that any serious damage had been inflicted by the Russian planes.

The Luftwaffe and antiaircraft batteries were said to have accounted for 167 Red planes Sunday and that four of six Soviet planes heading for the Ploesti Oil Fields in Rumania were downed.

It was acknowledged, however, that bombs have fallen in the Ploesti Fields, accomplishing their mission. The Berlin radio broadcast without comment a Bucharest announcement that on Saturday six enemy planes dropped bombs on the outskirts of the town of Ploesti, setting fire to oil tanks and killing or wounding both soldiers and civilians.

Hitler Seeks Peace, Says LaGuardia

By International News Service

New York, July 14.—Peace proposals drawn up by Adolf Hitler have been presented by representatives of the German government in Washington to the leaders of a peace movement in the United States and will be publicly announced shortly, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia said today.

"Well intentioned, peace-loving" citizens in the United States and in South American countries are to be used as "tools" in seeking to win public approval of the proposals, the mayor said.

LaGuardia made the announcement as he was welcoming to New York a group of educators from Chile and Peru.

As a forerunner to the public announcement of the "Hitler peace proposal" and in accordance with a set plan, the mayor added, statements have been made in France and Italy emphasizing the "blood ties" of those countries with the republics of Central and South America.

When asked his sources of information, the mayor said:

"It is absolutely accurate. I can't name names as yet. But it will all be forthcoming in a few days . . . I am sure that the thinking people of the United States, with their lives, homes and safety depending on it, will not rely on the promise of an irresponsible fanatic."

Wheeler Tells of Plan

By the Associated Press

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said late today that William R. Davis, an oil operator, had advised the Administration after a trip to Germany in 1940 that Field Marshal Hermann Goering of Germany and Premier Mussolini of Italy were willing to visit Washington to "make a peace" in the European War.

Wheeler told reporters that on one occasion Davis had written him "that Goering and Mussolini were willing to call on President Roosevelt and try to work out a peace."

"That was shortly after Poland had been taken," he added. "France and Belgium and other countries might have been saved if the President had followed up that proposal."

Bullitt Addresses People of France

lines against the common enemy," he said, "and recently you have seen our Marines sent to Iceland in the zone of the so-called Nazi blockade, and you know that orders have been given to our fleet and to our air force to keep clear the waters of the North Atlantic from our coasts to Iceland. You have witnessed the approval which our democratic country has given to these acts of President Roosevelt.

"If Hitler wishes to call these acts, or the acts which will follow, 'war,' let him call them 'war.' The flag of our country has never known defeat and we are certain that it will never be lowered before the Nazis."

After declaring that the peoples of the earth would either be conquered by the Nazis or live in peace made by Britain and the United States, Bullitt continued:

"Why do I not include the Soviet Union, which for the moment is fighting Germany instead of aiding Germany as she has aided Germany since the beginning of the war? Because there is no essential difference between the Nazi and Bolshevik regimes. Each is a godless tyranny, the sworn enemy of all free peoples of the earth."

Bullitt was Ambassador to Russia before he went to France.

Bullitt denounced the idea of collaboration with the Nazis, "the insult that certain ministers are inflicting on the captive people of France."

He warned against being deceived by German representations, saying that to imagine that the Nazis will treat the French as equals would require forgetting "the words of hatred and contempt that Hitler has written against France."

"To imagine that Hitler, who has based his career on lies, hatred, cruelty, torture, murder and butchery," he said, "will become suddenly a civilized man, fond of the great qualities of French civilization, is to prepare for one's self the most terrible fate. The end which exists in the means of Hitler is slavery controlled by secret police and firing squads."

Russia Using Gas, Calais Radio Reports

London (Tuesday), July 15 (INS).—The London Daily Sketch today quoted the German-controlled radio station at Calais, France, as reporting that poison gas is now being used in the war between Germany and Russia.

The station, according to the Sketch, cited Berlin reports alleging that the Soviet forces introduced poison gas into the conflict and adding: "The German army is taking drastic counter-measures."

Lindbergh a Nazi Spieler Says Ickes

Copyright by New York Times

New York, July 14.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes charged tonight that Charles A. Lindbergh was a mouthpiece of the Nazi Party line in the United States.

Speaking at a Bastille Day meeting at the Manhattan Center, under the sponsorship of the France Forever Organization, Ickes declared that Lindbergh had waited for his cue from Berlin before making public his views on the breakup of the Nazi-Soviet pact and the German attack on Russia.

The speech was perhaps the most bitter attack ever made on Lindbergh by a member of the inner circle of the Roosevelt Administration.

Referring scornfully to the "Nazi Scuttlefish" who "pour ink on the truth in order to blacken out the light of freedom," Ickes said that "soon after Hitler, once again, had broken his solemn pledge and treacherously attacked his Russian ally, former Col. Lindbergh was asked what he thought of it.

"Sententiously, he replied: 'A very, very unusual development. . . . It is something that required profound analysis.'

"It was clear that Lindbergh did not have his cue. . . . Nine days passed, during which the Nazi Party line was worked out and the official Nazi propaganda was handed out in Germany to Hitler mouthpieces and Nazi fellow travelers all over the world. Then . . . Mr. Lindbergh said that Hitler had gone to war against Poland because the British and French had forced him to.

"He said that Hitler had been forced to attack France and Britain because—believe it or not—the British would not permit him to attack Russia. . . .

"Goebbels was undoubtedly chuckling at this shameless distortion of elementary truth, this pathological violation of the canons of decency. Undoubtedly he enjoyed it all the more because it fell from the lips of a man who had gained fame and riches at the hands of the American people."

War Abroad Is America's, McNutt Says

Milwaukee, July 14 (AP).—The war abroad is America's war, and the United States never will make a negotiated peace with Hitler, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt declared tonight in an address prepared for broadcast.

"It is America's because Nazi aspirations and the deadly logic of events point to America as the future object of a stronger and more ruthless stage of the Nazi battle for world domination," he told a national unity rally held in conjunction with Milwaukee's annual midsummer festival.

"We are engaged in an effort neither to make the world safe for communism nor to make it safe for the British Empire," McNutt added. "We are helping to resist aggression for one reason and for one reason only—to make the world safe for America and for Americans."

"It is to prevent extension of the Nazi way of life to the Western Hemisphere that the Government has committed itself irrevocably to the defeat of Hitlerism," he said.

"The British government gives its solemn word that it will never make a negotiated peace with Hitler. Neither will the United States of America.

"To pursue the path of appeasement, we must be prepared to abandon democratic institutions, one by one, or become resigned to a lonely and hazardous national existence."

French Mark Bastille Day Somberly Here

There was no popping of champagne corks or ripple of conversation yesterday as members of the French Embassy staff and more than 250 persons from the French colony gathered here to observe the 152d anniversary of the fall of the Bastille.

The fall of the Paris fortress-prison on July 14, 1789, which marked the fall of one form of absolutism in France, found no echo yesterday in the Nazi-dominated nation.

Instead, the nation's plight called forth words of hope for a better day for its freedom-loving people from lips of French citizens in Washington.

Led by the French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, they made a pilgrimage to the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University, where a solemn mass was said for Frenchmen who laid down their lives for their country in this war.

In the afternoon the group gathered at the embassy to be addressed briefly by the Ambassador.

He spoke of the suffering of France and the hope for its resurrection, saying, "Keep your hearts full of hope." He emphasized that only by unity on the part of all the French peoples can there be any hope for the return of their liberties.

Col. Donovan Encourages French

New York, July 14 (AP).—Col. William Donovan, newly named coordinator of defense information, told the people of France and her colonies in a Bastille Day address today that "we are confident in the ultimate victory over that man who has devastated your land and who seeks to keep you in subjection."

Speaking in French on an N. B. C. broadcast, Col. Donovan, a World War veteran, reminded the French people that "our coming in the war was a decisive factor in the Allied victory in 1918."

"We made a tragic mistake in withdrawing from the victory in 1919," he said. "We shall not make that mistake again. We see that the war was only interrupted. It has not ended. Today we are assisting those who fight Hitler. It is true that we have been slow in awakening to the common peril. But our support of the common cause is neither too little nor too late."

Col. Donovan told the French people that they had been betrayed and defeated.

"Why and how, you know better than we," he added. "There is no shame in your physical defeat by a superior force. The only shame would be if there was a defeat of your soul."

The President's Day

By International News Service

GRANDPA: The Chief Executive answered to a piping chorus of "grandpas!" early yesterday as his second son's two children, Ruth Chandler and Elliott Roosevelt, jr., 7 and "almost 5," respectively greeted their grandfather. With the two small Roosevelt fry was their mother, Ruth Googins Roosevelt. Capt. Elliott was still in Newfoundland with the aerial map-making division.

GET THIS STRAIGHT: Gen. George Marshall told Congress big league batters the straight of it at the White House 10:30 a. m. conference. For well over two hours, Senators Barkley, George, Reynolds, Hill and Austin; Speaker Sam Rayburn, and Representatives McCormack, May and Wadsworth got a straight-from-the-shoulder, unembellished account of the United States armed forces and the problems thereof. First to leave was Speaker Rayburn, who went out at a fast gallop before noon, beelined for his rostrum on Capital Hill.

BREAK: Original brain-truster Rex Tugwell got a break out of the overtime pow-wow of the President, the capital kings, and Gen. Marshall; was sidetracked, and wound up having lunch as well as a talk with the President in his office. Added to the schedule was Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, who now holds something of a record for frequent visits to the White House.

ALSO RAN: Among the other callers of the day were the Haitian Minister, the Hon. Fernand Dennis, and Gen. James H. Burns.

Isles Must Be Friendly, U. S. Tells Portugal

The United States reminded Portugal again yesterday that its Azores and Cape Verde Islands must remain in "friendly hands."

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, declared that this country was anxious to have the two strategic island groups remain under Portuguese sovereignty, but he coupled with this a plain warning that this sovereignty must be "friendly" toward defense of the Western Hemisphere.

Welles made this statement to a press conference as comment on a statement by the Portuguest Minister, Joao Di Bianchi, who said in New York Saturday that Portugal had received assurances that the United States would not occupy the Atlantic islands.

Welles' warning meant, it was said, that the United States will make no move toward the strategic islands as long as Portugal remains in the "friendly" classification. If the islands should become a threat to American security, however, the United States would feel free to act in its own defense, it was explained.

Welles based his assurances on President Roosevelt's message to Congress last week regarding the occupation of Iceland. He recalled the President's assertion that it was vital to American security that Atlantic outposts "remain in friendly hands" and that the United States could not permit their occupaton by Germany, to be used "as air or naval bases for eventual attack against the Western Hemisphere."

Welles also founded his statement of policy on the recent exchange of diplomatic notes in which the United States assured Portugal that it had no aggressive intentions toward the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands, but that American policy was based "upon the inalienable right of self-defense."

By way of explanaton, Welles reminded reporters that the American Government's opposition to aggression is well known.

empowering the Government to requisition private property needed specifically for defense purposes.

SEC Suggestions

A favorable reception was expected for awaited recommendations of the SEC designed to make it less difficult to market new securities of defense industries.

After nearly a year of conferences with the investment banking industry, a number of suggested changes in the Securities Act are said to have been completed.

Technical in nature, these would deal with such subjects as filing of information with the SEC, cutting down on red tape and reducing the quantity of reports and data now required.

Tax legislation, itself rife with controversy, yesterday was tentatively scheduled to come before the House on July 28. The Senate has laid aside all of August for work on the tax bill in committee and on the floor, but final passage may go over until September.

Keynes Denies Leased Goods Are Resold

Answering charges made by New York exporters, the British government reiterated yesterday that none of the lend-lease goods received from the United States have been re-exported to South America.

John Maynard Keynes, British economist who is advising the Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared at a special press conference that "careful inquiry indicates no instance in which a violation of the Lease-Lend Act occurred in letter or spirit."

His statement followed the lines of an interview granted to The Washington Post last Wednesday.

Keynes was asked about one of the charges reportedly from New York, namely, that the British removed a South American firm from their anti-Nazi blacklist just long enough to permit British exporters to sign contracts for a large sale of wood pulp to the firm.

The economist said he could not comment on that case due to insufficient information and referred questioners to the ministry of economic warfare.

Discussing forthcoming shipments of 20,000 bales a month of lend-lease cotton from the United States to Britain, Keynes said it was conceivable that some of this cotton might be re-exported to Latin American markets in the form of British-made textiles. He explained that Great Britain, while sacrificing much of its export trade, is trying to maintain textile shipments because their manufacture employs female labor and the products take little shipping space.

"Complete abandonment of our export trade" said Sir Owen Chalkley, commercial counsel of the Embassy who also presided at the press conference, "would be an impossible position."

Keynes stressed that "it should not be assumed that the mere fact that we are exporting goods of one sort or another which may be more or less similar in character to goods which we are obtaining from America under the Lease-Lend Act or by cash payment is an indication of any violation of the spirit of the Lease-Lend Act or that it is in any sense a violation of the letter or spirit of our obligations to the United States."

age selectees to volunteer for additional service.

Senator Barkley, however, after the conference declared his opposition to the substitute and it was understood that it was rejected. The Kentuckian declared it "unworkable" and said it would be unfair to the selectees to "put them on the spot" by launching an enlistment campaign among them.

Numbers Limit Not Discussed

Those attending the meeting said there was no discussion of another Army proposal to remove the 900,000-man limit on the number of selectees at any one time. There has been little apparent Congressional opposition to this proposal thus far.

Barkley said there had been no definite determination of the legislative handling of the plan. He pointed out that service of all of the citizen-soldiers could be extended by a Congressional declaration of a national emergency or by simple legislation retaining them indefinitely in service during the Presidentially declared emergency.

The latter method is provided under legislation introduced last week by Chairman Reynolds of the Senate Military Affairs Committee at the request of the War Department. Public hearings on the measures will be opened by the committee tomorrow morning.

Chairman May said he would introduce the bills as soon as the "War Department sent them up."

Soviets Who Flew To California Assail Lindbergh

Moscow (Tuesday), July 15 (U.P.)—Three Russian aviators who flew nonstop from Moscow to San Jacinto, Calif., in 1937, commemorated the fourth anniversary of their flight today by sending a message to American aviators attacking Charles A. Lindbergh as a "despised pro-Fascist."

The fliers—Mikhail Gromov, Andrey Yumashev and Sergei Danilin—proclaimed their common aim with American aviators in a fight on Fascism and expressed hope that the Russian and American peoples would be drawn closer together. The fliers said:

"We are certain that the attitude of such persons like Lindbergh—whose pro-Fascist position had been exposed by Soviet fliers as far back as in 1938—is despised by all honest American fliers who perfectly understand what this person is after."

Roosevelt Asks $300,000,000 For Sea Bases

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to vote an additional $300,000,000 immediately for expanding the Navy's far-flung shore stations, including new air bases in Hawaii and the Philippines and strengthening outlying bases in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

Nearly $10,000,000 was provided for additions to naval stations in this area, including $1,970,000 for enlarging the new Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, $3,518,000 for the Naval Proving Ground at Dahlgren, Va., and $1,720,000 for the Naval Academy.

To provide for possible operations of a much greaer warship force in the Atlantic, the President asked $15,000,000 for the establishment of a large fleet anchorage at the new base at Trinidad, and $21,970,000 additional for improving the new $45,000,000 fleet anchorage at Vieques, Puerto Rico.

Sixteen millions also would be spent for building underground fuel storage facilities for the Pacific fleet in Hawaii, where a new $18,605,000 air base is proposed.

Work in Alaska

The new base would be built at Barbers Point and supplement existing naval air stations at Ford Island and Kaneohe Bay. The new Philippine naval air station would be established at Cavite and would cost $5,510,000.

A large proportion of the new funds would be spent in Alaska and the mid-Pacific for additional submarine and air operating facilities. At Samoa, $1,858,000 additional is provided, largely for gun-implacements and other defense installations. A total of $4,679,000 is provided for a new submarine base at Wake Island, and $4,761,000 for a similar base on Midway.

Four new wards costing a total of $360,000, a $450,000 research laboratory, and storehouses costing $320,000 are asked for the new Naval Medical Center. Two hundred thousand is allowed for roads, $100,000 for a well and sprinkling system, $50,000 for landscaping, $25,000 for a greenhouse and $350,000 for additional accessories.

$500,000 for Boat Basin

The Naval Academy funds would provide a $500,000 boat basin on the East Shore, $300,000 for acquisition of the Fort Severn property and $130,000 for a farry. Railroad construction costing $2,000,000 between Dahlgren and Fredericksburg is asked in the total for the Potomac River base.

Other local projects include: Five "finger" piers and waterfront improvement, Washington Navy Yard, $250,000; storehouses, Bellevue (D. C.) naval magazine, $90,000; five officers' quarters and additional test facilities, naval torpedo range, Piney Point, Md.; extensions to Indianhead (Md.) powder factory, $437,000; naval radio station, Cheltenham, Md., $235,000; Naval research laboratory, Bellevue, D. C., $365,000; enlisted men's barracks, Naval Reserve airbase, Anacostia, $120,000; additional radio facilities, Anacostia, $125,000; additional radio facilities, Quantico, Va., $125,000.

Widow Is Wed To Husband's Slayer in Jail

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

WED IN CELL—Mrs. Edith Garlich and Joe Siracki embrace after their wedding in a police cell yesterday at Kansas City General Hospital. Siracki, accused of slaying Mrs. Garlich's former husband, was swathed in bandages from the waist up

By the United Press

Kansas City, Mo., July 14.—Mrs. Edith Garlich, 35, and Joe Siracki, 31, who killed her former husband in a gun duel, were married today.

The wedding was in the barred detention ward at General Hospital, and inasmuch as Siracki, recovering from four bullet wounds, is charged with first-degree murder, the honeymoon will be postponed indefinitely.

But the ceremony was a complete success to Mrs. Garlich, who for 48 hours has been meeting technical delays in getting married. Even so, it was an hour after the appointed time before the ceremony could begin. Justice of the Peace Louis J. Mazuch, who had spent most of yesterday waiting for the bride-to-be to get the license, was late. Then one of Siracki's two cellmates became ill.

At last, after all but four or five busy nurses were cleared from the ward, and as photographers and newsmen witnessed, Mazuch began reading the ritual. The bride wore a blue dress and picture hat. Siracki, standing beside his bed, wore pajama pants and bandages. His right arm was in a sling.

As the couple was pronounced man and wife the bride said:

"I'm glad the whole thing was finally worked out. "I'm sure we will be happy. We plan a church wedding as soon as possible and everybody will be invited."

Mrs. Garlich was divorced six months ago from her first husband, who quickly remarried. However, he resented her seeing Siracki, and was talking to her by telephone from his garage when Siracki walked in July 5. They shot it out with revolvers.

Meridian Hill Park Concert Tonight

Carlos Salzedo, famed harpist, will bring his concert ensemble to Meridian Hill Park at 8:15 tonight for the third of the Starlight Chamber music concerts. The unusual group includes Salzedo's wife, Marjorie Call Salzedo, also a harpist; Rene LeRoy, noted French flautist, and Jonos Scholz, cellist.

C. C. Cappel, manager of the concerts, yesterday reported requests for ticket reservations for the concert have come from many Virginia and Maryland cities, including Richmond, Fredericksburg and Baltimore. The Salzedos will play again Friday night.

Shipbuilding a Year Ahead Of Schedule, Knox Reports

The United States is going to be the "best armed, the best equipped and the best defended of any nation in the whole of God's world when we get through," Secretary of the Navy Knox declared last night.

To reach this goal the shipbuilding industries and yards are "away ahead of schedule"—about a year ahead, declared the Secretary, about whose head a storm of Capitol Hill criticism broke following his speech at Boston June 29 in which he declared the time had come to use the Navy "to clear the Atlantic of the German menace."

Reviewing the first year of his administration as Secretary, Knox lauded the cooperation of the shipbuilding industries and yards, the workers, suppliers of materials, management.

"The shipbuilding industries and yards have both caught the spirit of this thing and put their heart into the job," he said. "I have never seen a higher morale among shipbuilding workers. Construction is going at top speed in every yard in the Atlantic, Pacific and the Gulf. They are away ahead of schedule—about a year ahead.

"In construction of smaller ships, the time to build them has been cut almost in half. It used to take us from 18 months to 2 years to build a destroyer. The Edison was recently completed in 10 months. And the time is being constantly lowered."

The speed-up has been achieved, Knox said, because of the policy of purchasing large quantities of parts in advance, anticipation of needs, and more efficient management and direction, "mostly attributable to the director of the Bureau of Ship Construction," Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson.

Commenting on reference to him as the leader of the "war party," Knox stated:

"Any man who deliberately seeks to involve this country in war for the mere purpose of precipitating armed conflict would have to be crazy or malevolent to such a degree as to deserve incarceration. No sane man wants war. I happen to belong to a school of thinkers who favor a policy of aiding England at whatever cost to ourselves, to promote both our present security and future national welfare. I do not believe that a free, independent democratic United States could long survive in a Nazi-dominated world."

Senator Lucas Revives Policy Of No Secrecy

Senator Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, yesterday revived a personal "no secrecy" rule once made famous in the Senate by the late Senator Couzens, of Michigan.

Lucas served notice on the Senate he would not in the future be personally bound by executive committee sessions. He reserved the right to make public such information on these meetings as he as a Senator saw fit to release.

The Illinois Administration Democrat voiced surprise that details of the testimony of Secretary of the Navy Knox before an executive session of the Senate Naval Committee appeared in print after committeemen agreed on secrecy.

Lucas, a member of the committee, said he withheld information from friends in the press corps on the meeting, but since others divulged data, he would do so in the future. He will make public no military secrets, he said, but will use his discretion on other information.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee meanwhile conferred again in executive session with Chairman Walsh, discussing the nature of the public report it will make on the Knox testimony.

Walsh said he would, with committee approval, prepare a statement on facts disclosed at the hearing, without attempt at interpretation.

Following Friday's hearing, Knox was reported to have denied categorically published charges that naval units have engaged in combat with Axis craft, or convoyed British ships, but to have said that on one occasion a United States destroyer dropped a depth bomb to warn away an approaching submarine.

Boat Ride Will Honor Beauty Contestant

Jean Cavanaugh, recently chosen to represent Washington at an Atlantic City beauty contest, will be guest of honor tonight on the annual boat ride of the Federation of Business Men's Associations.

Accompanying Miss Cavanaugh on the S. S. Mount Vernon, which will leave the Wilson Line pier at 8:30 p. m., will be several other Washington beauties, who will stage a floor show under the direction of Al Stern.

Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something WRONG with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Va. Troops Forego Rifles for Fists

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

A. P. Hill Military Reservation, Va., July 14.—The Battle of Mica Postoffice sputtered to a stalemate today after the 176th Combat Team twice missed an opportunity to make it a second Chickamauga.

Two times Company L, 176th Infantry, found a wide gap in the line of the 116th, attacking from a little ridge it captured yesterday. Twice Company L thrust through between two battalions of the 116th, just as Longstreet in "a masterpiece of battlefield tactics" thrust through a gap in the Union line at Chickamauga. Neither time was it followed by a force sufficient to develop and exploit its advantage.

Today's battle followed a night of a thousand alarms in the solid blackout, when machine guns and rifles blazed unexpectedly in the darkness, men shouted sharp warnings up and down the lines which lay so close together in places that sporadic fist fights broke out now and then among the bellicose Virginians.

Fierce Attack

At 11 p. m., Company L, 176th, the same which twice punctured the enemy line this morning, jumped off in a fierce attack toward the northeast, the second battalion, 176th, attacking at the same time toward the north. Their objective was a road junction a few hundred yards southwestof Mica, which they reached but failed to hold when the third battalion, 116th, rushed machine guns and riflemen into the fight to throw them out.

Two platoons in the night attack gained a momentary triumph when they felt their way around the left flank of the third battalion and captured its command post, complete with staff. The capture was ruled out after an umpire's conference when it was decided the two platoons had moved through territory swept by fire of their own troops.

For a half-hour of this the 176th held the battle in its hand and failed to close it. An hour before dawn, the 116th pulled out its third battalion, which had borne the brunt of the fighting yesterday and last night, and replaced it with the fresh second battalion from reserve. Then, at daylight the 116th attacked.

Maps Inaccurate

The second battalion pushed south; the first was ordered to move southwest on a compass course, joining its right flank with the second's left on the battle line. Map inaccuracies led the first astray, so that when it reached the line, a gap of several hundred yards separated it from the second.

Through this gap, Company L, 176th, carried its bayonets, striking the second battalion, 116th, in the right flank and rear. The umpires threw it out, ruling it to be in insufficient force to hold so percarious a position against a battalion. Less than a half hour later it was thrusting again through the same gap, needing only a strong supporting force to roll back the enemy's line and get into his rear with its rifles. The umpires held it again in check.

At 6 a. m., with battalions opposed by battalions of equal strength, umpires ruled the battle had reached a stalemate and a halt was called by Brig. Gen. George M. Alexander, commanding the Eighty-eighth Brigade, comprising the two infantry regiments in the combat teams.

Men Praised

"The spirit and initiative, especially of the men in the ranks, was magnificent," Gen. Alexander said after the battle. "The need for training was obvious, but that is what we are here for. The mistakes in this exercise will be profitable in the end, preventing such mistakes occurring again in future problems.

"I was particularly impressed by the willingness of the non-commissioned officers and men and by their ability to grasp a situation and improve on it. They already are excellent soldiers."

Tomorrow, after a day of rest today, the 116th Combat Team, commanded by Col. E. W. Opie, of Staunnton, and the 176th, commanded by Col. Edwin P. Conquest, of Richmond, will meet again in another day and night problem before returning Wednesday and Thursday to Fort George G. Meade. Each combat team includes a regiment of Infantry reinforced by a battalion of the 111th Field Artillery, commanded by Col. E. Sclater Montague, of Norfolk, and deachments of the 121st Engineers and the 104th Medical Regiment.

We Aren't Able To Rate Gable, Wife Laments

The Post is offering $25 for the best idea on what to do about the wives and girls the selectees have left at home.

Here are yesterday's suggestions:

Post Puzzle Editor:

Dear Editor:

Girls by Powers, earn our glowers.
Soldiers are kissed by LaMarr.
We aren't able to rate Gable.
Boys make whoopee; we make soupee.
Hear the "Yoo Hoo!" from the igloo.
Be a dear. Send 'em—Lear!

MRS. S. R. D.
Bethesda, Md.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Why not register all of the girls who are left behind by the boys who will be in this current fuss and then assign each girl to a World War veteran for entertainment for the duration of the emergency. The boys will not have to fear being "cut out" permanently or definitely because by the time they get back home we World War vets will be too old to be interested in girls.

J. A. S.,
Silver Spring, Md.

Dear Editor:

Perhaps the wives of those husbands who have been deferred would like to help out the wives of those husbands who were not so lucky. If so, let them come forward and offer their husbands as escorts of honor one night each week for the "draft widows."

The deferred husband could take the draftee's wife out for a dinner, dance or movie, and pay the freight as an expression of appreciation for not getting $21 a month. This arrangement, of course, first receiving the approval of the husband who has been drafted.

As for qualifications for membership in this Honor Escort Bureau, the escorts must be husbands who have been deferred and the ladies must be wives of draftees. However, the most important qualification of members should be that they enter into the spirit of the thing without a fear of the "eternal triangle" developing out of a little fun.

British Will Get 42-Ton Flying Boat

Baltimore, July 14 (AP).—A $1,000,000 Boeing flying boat, weighing 42 tons, was being given final conditioning at the Pan American Airways base today before being put into active transatlantic service by British Overseas Airways.

The four-motored, clipper type ship, camouflaged in slate blue and olive drab, arrived at Municipal Airport yesterday from New York.

The plane, the Bangor, is the last of three planes purchased from Pan American Airways by the British firm for non-commercial service between the United States and parts of the British Empire.

23 Trucks With Legionnaires, Scouts to Collect Aluminum

"POT O' ALUMINUM" IS HER SLOGAN—Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman of the Committee on Volunteer Service, District Defense Council, last night announced the drive to collect scrap aluminum in Washington. Mrs. Bernton, as you can see, didn't come empty handed to the meeting of civilian defense volunteers in the District Building

Twenty-three trucks blazoned with American flags, carrying Boy Scouts and American Legionnaires as attendants, and broadcasting microphoned messages to the public, will tour the streets of Washington July 23. Their purpose will be to collect all the aluminum they can get.

Announcement of the drive for aluminum in the District was made last night by Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman of the committee on volunteer service of the District Council of Defense.

Mrs. Bernton, speaking at a meeting of the Planning Board in the District Building, read a joint letter from William S. Knudsen and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia in which the defense chiefs said, in part: "The Nation is appealing to all its citizens for their active assistance for the first time since President Roosevelt's declaration of a full national emergency."

"The Nation needs aluminum for planes and for other vital items in its defense program more rapidly than existing facilities can produce it. The people of the Nation can help by donating all used aluminum that can be spared from their households without being replaced."

At last night's meeting, plans were made for a door-to-door canvass of the city the day before the collection. Officials hope that people who will not be home will leave aluminum articles on their front steps the morning of July 23. Pick-ups by the trucks will be from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. that day.

Plans also are being made to have large bins on the grounds in front of the District Building and near the various police stations where aluminum may be left July 23 and July 24.

Tomorrow night Mayor LaGuardia is scheduled to address representatives of the various committees who are taking part in the aluminum collection campaign.

Chairmen of the committees are P. Y. K. Howat, Arthur Sundlun, Fred A. Smith, Harry S. Wender, Edgar Morris, Arthur Heaton, Mrs. Harry Bernton, James E. Colliflower, Norman Kal, Maj. Ernest W. Brown and J. Blake Gordon.

Woman, 19, Missing From Home 3 Weeks

Police have been asked to search for a 19-year-old woman missing from her home, 455 H Street Southwest, for the past three weeks.

Clay A. Lawson, 33, the woman's husband, said his wife, Phebea, left home while he was at work. He said she took no luggage with her and had only $3 in her purse.

Mrs. Lawson is 5 feet tall and weighs 100 pounds. She was wearing a red and white waist, a navy blue skirt and blue shoes. She has blue eyes and light brown hair.

OPM Approves 7 Aluminum Plants, Almost Doubling Output

Obviously angered at a National Association of Manufacturers statement tending to minimize stringencies in defense aluminum, OPM officials answered last night by recommending five companies to build and operate seven new plants which would almost double present production of the vital metal.

Although they declined public comment on the statement issued by N. A. M. President Walter D. Fuller, defense officials released a letter from Fuller, written last week, in which he acknowledged an "aluminum shortage" and announced that the N. A. M. had already "given thought to the desirability of cooperating . . . to alleviate this situation."

Fuller's statement, it was also learned, provoked a telephone call to him from John D. Biggers, OPM production chief. Biggers is known to have felt that the statement, although possibly accurate in finding no "present" defense shortages, had the effect of discounting the serious scarcity problem for production in the immediate future.

Privately, OPM officials said that Fuller's statement might have a disastrous effect on the success of the scrap aluminum collection campaign, scheduled to begin next Monday throughout the country.

The companies named to participate in the production expansion program followed an OPM statement at the end of June, setting the goal of aluminum output at 1,600,000,000 pounds a year by 1943. Present production is at the rate of about 720,000,000 pounds. The new plants would produce an additional 600,000,000 pounds and Canadian imports will bring in 200,000,000. The balance will come from expansion already planned.

The five companies, the locations of the recommended plants and their output are:

Aluminum Co. of America, three plants; one of 100,000,000 pounds capacity in Arkansas, one of 90,000,000 pounds capacity in the Bonneville-Grand Coulee area, and a third of 150,000,000 pounds at Massena, N. Y.

Union Carbide & Carbon Co, one plant, 60,000,000 pounds, at Spokane, Wash.

Reynolds Metals Co., one plant, 100,000,000 pounds at Lister, Ala.

Olin Corporation, one plant, 30,000,000 pounds, at Takoma, Wash.

The plants are to be financed by the Defense Plant Corporation, owned by the Government and operated by the private concerns under a leasing agreement still to be worked out.

Doctor Will Fly To Iceland to See Rescued Nurses

Dr. Paul Beeson, of Boston, physician-in-chief of the American Red Cross-Harvard Hospital in England, has flown to Iceland to check up on the condition of 10 Red Cross nurses rescued from torpedoed vessels.

The Red Cross said four of the women might be returned to the United States. They had been adrift 10 days after a British ship was sunk. The other six, rescued from a former Dutch vessel, are expected to go to England.

Those who may be returned to the United States are: Rachel M. St. Pierre, Amesbury, Mass.; Marion Blissett, Kallaska, Mich.; Victoria M. Pelc, Auburn, N. Y., and Lillian Pesnicak, Albany, N. Y.

Seven Red Cross nurses and Mrs. Ruth B. Breckinridge, of Winston-Salem, N. C., house mother for the nurses, are still missing from the two ships.

A the same time, the Red Cross announced that a 25-bed emergency hospital has been established in Columbia, Ky., to serve as an isolation hospital in the shiga dysentery epidemic there. There are 100 cases now reported with 12 deaths.

Gibraltar Repels Two Italian Planes

Gibraltar, July 14 (AP).—Gibraltar's ground batteries drove off two Italian planes attempting a raid on the rock fortress early today and a short time later bombs were reported dropped near Ronda, Spanish town some 40 miles to the west.

A report from nearby Algeciras, Spain, said an Italian plane crashed a short distance from Los Barrios station, 12 miles from Gibraltar.

More important than ever, thanks to the "boom for brown" furs, dyed China mink is all the more to be cherished, as it becomes more difficult to import.

Luxuriously soft pelts in shades of brown that so closely resemble true mink, are worked, supple skin-on-skin—flattering your figure. And, this year, half the fashion news is up your sleeves—pelts in swirling treatments or border effect. There are even push-up sleeves (far cry from their college sweater inspiration), to give your coat a more formal look after-dark. Softer, larger "little" collars than last year—swaggers with the new high yoke or the slightly fitted front. Remember, your purchase is protected, too, by Woodward & Lothrop's insistence on fine fur, fashion and fashioning.

Other Dyed China Mink Coats, $358 to $658.

Army Gets 100 Pilots a Week, Gen. Brett Says

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 14.—Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, of the Army Air Corps, said today the Army is turning out pilots at the rate of 500 every five weeks, but that combat plane production was far too slow.

Gen. Brett accompanied William S. Knudsen on an inspection tour of the Vultee Aircraft plant.

Pleased with the showing on training planes, Gen. Brett commented:

"The training program is turning out 12 times as many pilots as it did a year ago. We're getting about 500 more pilots every five weeks. They're going into these trainers, of which we're getting plenty.

Knudsen Stresses Cooperation

"But combat plane production is far too slow as yet. If we could get combat assembly lines like these trainer setups it would be wonderful."

Asked about recent Congressional criticism of the Office of Production Management, which he heads with Sidney Hillman, Knudsen snapped:

"You can't accelerate defense with legislation. You have to work with manufacturers, industry, labor and so on. Cooperation all along the line, you might say."

Women Praised

Noting Vultee's employment of nearly 200 women on assembly lines, Knudsen commented:

"Women can play an invaluable part in the defense program. I saw lots of them in an instrument plant in Minneapolis, and on intricate fitting and handling of materials, I presume they are better than men."

At the Norris Stamping Co. President Kenneth T. Norris handed Knudsen a shiny brass 105 millimeter Howitzer cartridge case, the millionth turned out since the plant was built less than a year ago.

"You're doing a real job here," Knudsen acknowledged.

Funeral Services For Mrs. Miller To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary W. Miller, 79, will be held at her home, 3335 Eighteenth Street Northwest, today at 3 p. m. The widow of Caleb S. Miller, she died Sunday after a six-week illness.

A member of All Souls' Unitarian Church for more than 40 years, Mrs. Miller once served as president of its Women's Alliance and as a member of the board of trustees. At the time of her death she was chairman of the admissions committee and a member of the board of the Unitarian home.

She was an early member of the Twentieth Century Club, an organization of Unitarian women, and also belonged to the Home Interest Club. She leaves a daughter, Helen Miller, and a sister, Clara Wilson, both of whom lived with her at the Eighteenth Street address.

Man Slugged, Robbed Amid 7th St. Crowd

A theater manager was slugged and robbed in a daylight holdup in the 1000 block Seventh Street Northwest yesterday as many persons looked on.

Charles F. Crawford, 47, manager of the Gem Theater, 1131 Seventh Street Northwest, was approached by two Negroes while on his way to a bank as scores of persons were nearby. One of the bandits struck Crawford and knocked him to the ground. As he fell, part of the money spilled from a money bag he was carrying. As a crowd gathered, the thugs grabbed the money bag and fled with $45.

Homicide detectives have arrested one man and are seeking two other suspects in the murder of Leslie K. Mann, Coast Guard auditor, who died yesterday in Emergency Hospital after being severely beaten. He had remained semiconscious since last Thursday at the hospital after being found in an apartment he shared with Charles J. Bolton at 1318 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Although Mann told detectives he knew one of the men who assaulted him, he refused to reveal any identification.

Put Up Hard Fight

Tall and powerful, Mann, a second lieutenant in the motor transport division during the first World War, apparently had put up a terrific struggle with his assailants. That was evidenced by the wreckage police found after being called to the apartment by Bolton, who came in sometime after the fight.

In an attempted holdup yesterday, Henderson Moon, proprietor of a grocery at 2036 Twelfth Street Northwest, told police a man entered his store and, at gun point, demanded his money. Moon said that when he ducked behind the counter the man fled, apparently thinking he had a gun there.

J. Henry Leopold, 60, 1300 block Chapin Street Northwest, was cut on the neck, face and hands in a fight late last night at Fourteenth and H Streets Northwest. He was removed to Walter Reed Hospital.

Turner A. Seaton, 60, of Delaplane, Va., was arrested and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

According to police, the two men met accidentally and an argument ensued.

Lengthening of the period of training for rookie policemen beyond the present three months, to be integrated with a regular program of retraining and specialized courses of instruction for detectives. One of the chief aims of the new training program would be improvement of the detective bureau which Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, admitted during the investigation to be inefficient.

Abolition of Civil Service examinations for promotion, but retention of the examinations for entrance.

A new District vagrancy law "with teeth in it" and drafted so that it will stand up in court and give the police department power to "pick up undesirables and men in the Capital with no particular business in view."

Close Cooperation

District officials are clearly working in closest cooperation with the subcommittee in drafting recommendations. Maj. Beverly B. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, yesterday was named chairman of the Commissioners' investigating committee. Maj. Snow told reporters that he is especially interested in improving the police training program. Fowler and Maj. James R. Lusby, disbursing officer, are the other committee members.

The Commissioners yesterday announced addition of 43 privates to the force. Congress has approved a 75-man increase in the department during this fiscal year.

In reporting subcommittee progress in drafting recommendations, Schulte said the task would "take a little longer than we expected," but added he was "confident of good results because Commissioners Young and Hazen sat throughout the hearing and it is the first time we have had full cooperation from the District Building under these circumstances."

Schulte added that as far as he is concerned the investigation developed "enough information to justify a complete shakeup of the department."

He cited the fact that last year Dr. MacDonald and his deputy, Dr. Richard Rosenberg, were responsible for examination of 2,400 bodies at the District Morgue. He pointed out that both physicians have private practices.

Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, with Schulte, a stern critic of civil service, replied to the Civil Service Commission's protest by stating:

"The civil service may be a sacred cow to some people, but to me it is just a fatted calf which needs dieting.

Two Policemen Face Charges In Beating Case

Assault charges against two policemen were authorized by District Attorney Edward M. Curran yesterday, after he had investigated a brawl which occurred in the Tenth Precinct Station the night of June 26.

Curran said he had authorized informations against Detective Sergt. Harry E. Hamilton and Patrolman Calvin N. Green. Lisle T. Lipscomb, 34, who claims the officers beat him, was convicted of disorderly conduct Saturday after the brawl was reviewed in testimony before Police Judge George D. Neilson. Convicted with Lipscomb was Graham Weigle, Kensington, Md., who was with him at the station.

Returning from a bachelor party in honor of his approaching marriage, Lipscomb was arrested on traffic charges and taken to the precinct station. Convicted on the traffic charges, Lipscomb was fined $16 by Judge John P. McMahon.

Lipscomb complained that while he was being questioned several policemen attacked him and later placed the disorderly conduct charge against him. He asked for the arrest of several officers.

Curran made an extensive investigation of the charges, in which he conferred with Inspector Edward J. Kelly and Adgate Lipscomb, a lawyer, brother of the complainant.

Seven District Bills Passed by House

gram is to be completed within eight years. The Commissioners took the view that the improvements should be made "with reasonable dispatch" and that, therefore, the tax should be increased 2 cents, rather than 1, as originally proposed.

Acting also on a request from the Commissioners, Randolph introduced a bill to relieve abutting property owners of assessment of one-half road paving costs, leaving them liable for payment of one-half the cost of curbs and gutters.

"This change, together with an increase in the gasoline tax rate, would more properly place the burden of the cost of highway improvement," the Commissioners said.

At the same time, the Commissioners asked the District Committee to expedite favorable action on a bill to permit allocation of parking meter revenues to the highway fund.

Juke-Box Tax Up

Randolph asked District Budget Officer Walter Fowler to consider suggestions from Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and Representative Copeland (Republican), of Nebraska, that pin-ball machines and juke-box record playing machines be licensed at $25 a year and that a small merchandise tax be levied against vending machines. The suggestions were made during a short meeting of the District Committee.

House action on the recreation bill brought near a close years of controversy over control of play facilities and programs in the Capital. The principal agencies involved in the controversy—the District Commissioners, the superintendent of National Capital Parks and the Board of Education—are either members of or represented on the board.

A superintendent of recreation with a salary of $6,000 a year would be directly responsible for recreation functions of the Community Center and Playgrounds Departments now under the joint control of the Commissioners and the School Board.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee that drafted the bill after hearings, yesterday urged the House to pass it "as a tribute to" the late Representative Stephen Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, "many of whose ideas it embodies."

Actors to Be at Least 14

The ban on child actors in the District's child-labor law may require the National Theater to remain dark next season, Randolph told the House. He explained that five New York plays scheduled to be brought here—including "Life With Father" and "Watch on the Rhine"—have minors in the cast.

The bill would amend the labor law to authorize the School Board to issue work permits to actors "at least 14 years of age."

Sidney Simpson, legislation expert in the office of Leon Henderson, Federal price administrator, will be the principal witness at the resumption of rent-control hearings at 10 a. m. tomorrow, Randolph announced. A subcommittee, headed by Randolph, is considering a bill, drafted by Simpson, which would give full rent-control powers to an administrator appointed by President Roosevelt.

At the same time, Randolph announced that Representative Harris (Democrat), of Texas, would succeed Bolles as chairman of a special subcommittee considering a new District fire safety law. Representative Copeland has been added to the subcommittee and a hearing on the bill will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday.

Beat Hitler, Free Browder, Minor Asks

Robert Minor, acting secretary of the Communist Party of the United States, called on Americans last night for national unity to defeat Adolf Hitler, and added a plea for the release from prison of Earl Browder, the party secretary.

In an address prepared for delivery over a local radio station, Minor declared that the defeat of Hitler was the all-important issue before the American people and especially American labor.

"The common issue that should and can unite all sections of the population is the security and defense of our American Nation and the defeat of German fascism," he said.

The Communist Party, he asserted, was gratified at the decline in the number of strikes and said much "nonsense" had been uttered concerning the Communists' relation to the strikes.

At a press conference earlier, discussing strikes in defense industries, Minor said that the Communist Party had been in sympathy with the strike of the Congress of Industrial Organizations' United Automobile Workers at the North American Aviation plant during June. He insisted, however, that the party's role in the strikes did not go beyond sympathy.

Minor made it plain that in the future the party would encourage support by the workers of all-out defense production.

"Every worker must be jealously on guard to see that every industrial plant in America is free of the taint of defeatism and appeasement toward Hitlerism," he said, "and that proud American organized workers, carrying union cards, make themselves the best guardians of the democratic cause of America."

Drunken Driver Ruled a Murderer

Vinson concurred in the opinion.

As he rejected one by one the contentions made in Nestlerode's behalf, the chief justice pronounced legal principles which are sure to have far-reaching effect upon law enforcement in Washington.

The Nestlerode case is believed to be the first here in which two homicides committed at different places and times, were charged in a single indictment. Yet this was entirely proper, said Chief Justice Groner, and Justice James W. Morris of the District Court was right in refusing to order separate trials for the two deaths. "The killings," the chief justice commented, "were closely connected in time, place and continuity.

Malice Presumed

Accordingly, the opinion continued, it was proper that Nestlerode should have only the ten challenges of jurors which Justice Morris allowed him, instead of the 20—10 for each victim—which he sought.

When he came to deal with the assertion that Nestlerode's offense lacked the "malice" which would make him guilty of murder, the chief justice outlined his views at length.

"The wonder of the case," he said, "is that in this four-mile drive through traffic lights and at a reckless speed over the busiest thoroughfares in the City of Washington there were not more than two victims. For if ever there was a case which presented every aspect of complete and reckless disregard for the rights of others this is it. If there are mitigating circumstances we have failed to find them.... Malice is presumed under such conditions."

Nestlerode was prosecuted by Arthur B. Caldwell, then an assistant district attorney and now a member of the Department of Justice criminal division. In arguing the appeal, he was joined by Assistant District Attorneys Charles B. Murray and Bernard Margolius.

Presenting Nestlerode's defense were Attorneys Levi H. David and J. Benjamin Simon.

What good is a BLIMP?

THE slow speed at which lighter-than-air ships can be flown is their outstanding advantage in coast patrol and convoy duty. Their ability to hover practically motionless in the air enables them to detect lurking submarines and mines—at depths invisible to swift-flying airplanes. At their slow speeds blimps consume far less fuel than five-mile-a-minute planes—can remain aloft hours longer. America today commands the most efficient and air-worthy of these aerial "spotters"—because Goodyear is the only organization on earth that has been continuously building, operating and improving its own fleet of blimps since the first World War.

Army Studies Cochran Corps Of Eaglettes

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

The War Department soon may announce an addition to the Army Air Corps with the induction of pretty Jacqueline Cochran as chief of a women's auxiliary of the Army Air Corps.

Fresh from first-hand knowledge of bomber-ferrying and the role English women are playing in the Royal Air Force, Jacqueline Cochran has presented a workable plan to the War Department on the use of women in wartime. The American sorority of lady fliers, would be trained to fly bombers and other planes from aircraft plants to operation bases, pilot transports and supply planes. After ferrying an American-made bomber to Britain, Miss Cochran spent several days with the Women's Auxiliary Air Force, and made detailed notes of the outfit in action before flying back to America.

How Could Pilot Bombers

The chief function of the Cochran fledglings would be much the same as that of the British force, to release pilots for tactical and combat training by taking over the routine ferrying and ground duties.

Unfortunately America's supply of women pilots qualified to handle "the big stuff" such as bombers and fast pursuits and fighter planes is extremely low.

Of the 2,469 girls who have received instruction and passed their solo tests only a handful have reached the high rating status demanded of bomber and transport pilots. Twenty-one of the thousands have instrument rating virtually necessary to ferry a bomber.

Excluded in CAA Program

More encouraging is the number of women holding commercial pilot licenses. At the last census, 140 members of the United States' Flying Sorority rated commercial licenses privileging them to carry passengers for pay. Forty-four women hold instructors' ratings and of the total, four are now employed by the Civil Aeronautics Authority to train the opposite sex for possible cadetship in the Army, Navy and Marine Air Forces.

Women were excluded from the $37,000,000 CAA flight schooling July 1 at the suggestion of the War and Navy Departments which felt that the training should be given to those whose use in national defense was broadest—men.

The number of women who could be called upon to take over ferrying and transport duty immediately is far less than 100.

Of the 2,469 women who can get a plane on and off the ground, the largest number are still in the puddle-jumper division; 1,803 hold private licenses qualifying them only to fly a type of plane somewhat less tricky than the most fundamental service trainer. Another 202 are still in the solo division which means few hours on the log book and the private license test still quite a way in the offing.

Machine Gun Practice Improves at Belvoir

They're shooting straight at Camp Belvoir these days. Capt. William Watson reports that in last week's machine-gun practice, a score was reached higher than any in five previous courses for instructors.

Shooting at a 2-inch target from 50 yards away, Capt. D. Christianson made 76 hits out of 80. Second was Lieut. W. Keller with 73 hits. Other high scores were 71 for Lieut. L. Fuller, 70 for Lieut. D. Ehrhardt, and 66 for Lieut. B. Robertson.

Buck to Offer Move to Kill Joint Tax Bill

A motion to rescind the tax bill requirement that husbands and wives file joint income tax returns will be submitted at the next meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee by Representative Frank H. Buck (Democrat), of California.

Buck, representing a State that has community property laws, said he has already served notice on the committee that he will make such a motion. He said he had made no canvass of committee sentiment but understood there had been numerous protests against the provision.

Some other ranking members of the committee, who asked not to be quoted, expressed doubt that the committee will alter its action.

The joint return requirement, forcing many couples into the higher surtax brackets by combining their incomes for tax purposes, would raise approximately $304,000,000. To raise the same amount elsewhere it was said the committee would either have to jack up the general income surtax rates, or vote higher excises on gasoline, beer and tobacco.

Although the joint return provision applies generally to residents of all States, it would reach for the first time so-called community property States which permit couples to divide their income for tax purposes.

California, represented on the committee by Buck and Representative Gearhart (Republican) would be particularly hard hit by the bill which in addition to the joint return requirement raised excises on wines, one of the State's chief industries.

A meeting of the committee, which had been tentatively scheduled for yesterday, was postponed until legislative draftsmen had reduced the proposed taxes to bill form. The bill is tentatively slated for House consideration July 28.

Bishop Opposes Plan

New York, July 14 (U.P.).—Bishop William T. Manning of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York said today that the proposed joint income tax for husbands and wives would penalize the state of marriage, encourage divorce and immorality and tend to bring about a lower birth rate.

Sub Sinks Italian Supply, Transport Ships

London, July 14 (INS).—The admiralty announced today that submarines had sunk the 5,232-ton Italian tanker Stombo, a 5,500-ton supply ship and a large sailing vessel loaded with troops and military stores in the Mediterranean.

One submarine on the surface was said to have shelled an enemy anchorage near Bengasi and it was believed a trawler and a supply ship had been sunk.

Md. Man Held In Slaying of Wife's Friend

By the Associated Press

Snow Hill, Md., July 14.—Avery Melson, 41, charged with the shotgun slaying of Harry Adams, jr., 31-year-old fisherman, is being held without bail in the Worcester County Jail, State's Attorney William G. Kerbin said today.

Adams' body was found yesterday aboard his motor launch in the Potomac River. Kerbin said the Snow Hill boatman was killed between 4 and 5 p. m. Saturday by a shotgun charge through the abdomen.

The State's attorney said no date had been set for a preliminary hearing.

Sheriff William Hall said Melson admitted the slaying after an 18-hour questioning which ended at 5 a. m. today at the county jail.

Hall said that alleged attentions of Adams to Melson's wife led to the act. Adams was not married.

The shotgun used in the killing has been recovered from the bottom of the Potomac River, the sheriff added.

Dr. John L. Riley, deputy county medical examiner, said Adams was killed while preparing supper. Harry Adams, sr., the victim's father, found the body when he visited the launch, anchored near the Highway Bridge. The dead man was in a crouching position, a coffee cup clutched in his hand, authorities said.

2 Fined $15 Each For Severe Beating Of Detective

Two men were fined $15 each yesterday in Police Court for assaulting a member of Capt. Earl Hartman's special police squad Sunday night.

The detective, John L. Sprague, was asked to deal with a couple dancing indecently, according to police, on the floor of a restaurant in the 800 block of Fourteenth Street Northwest. When he heeded the manager's request to intervene, Sprague was beaten severely and sent to a hospital with bruised face, hands and ankle. The accused men were Nathan E. Epwarth, 34, of Flushing, Long Island, and Ralph Mishkin, 21, of the 3900 block of Blaine Street Northeast.

Junior Nature Outing Today

The weekly Junior Nature Outing today and tomorrow will follow the Rock Creek Park Nature Trail, concentrating on the study of ferns. A National Capital Park naturalist will tell the juniors of the time, millions of years ago, when ferns once formed gigantic forests and assumed many strange forms.

Juniors arriving by bus will meet the naturalist at Sixteenth and Underwood Streets Northwest at 9:15 a. m., while others will assemble at picnic area No. 9 at 9:30. Today's exploration will be for children under 12 and tomorrow's for children over 12.

Boys and girls are urged to bring picnic lunches.

White House Secretary Dies 3 Days After Hospital Wedding

Mrs. Aubrey C. Mills, 37, the former Margaret Durand of the White House secretarial staff, yesterday took her bridal trip with death, as she must have known she would do.

Last Friday, near death and under an oxygen tent at St. Joseph's Hospital, Asheville, where she had hoped to recover from tuberculosis, Miss Durand was married to Wills, her sweetheart of years. He had sat by the bedside, in a straight-backed hospital chair, holding her backed hospital chair, holding her between their vows the oxygen machine rythmically counted her hours away.

They had been engaged since 1936. Three years ago Miss Durand was stricken with the malady and their marriage, in the interim, was held up by North Carolina law forbidding marriage to tuberculous persons. Mills, now employed by the Inland Waterways Commission in St. Louis, was sent for by physicians when Miss Durand's condition, after a relapse a week ago, turned critical.

Her body was sent to Astoria, Long Island, her home and that of Mills. Burial will be Thursday. White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said yesterday that the President would write a note of sympathy to the bride's mother. He will send flowers. Mrs. Mills was secretary to the late Louis McHenry Howe, who was secretary and adviser to President Roosevelt. She had worked with him in the 1930 Roosevelt gubernatorial campaign and in 1932 helped James A. Farley at the Chicago National Democratic Convention. She continued with Howe when he came to Washington with the President. Mills, in those years, was in Government service here.

Crime Problem

There is no need to wait for the report of the Congressional Committee to conclude from the evidence that a shakeup in the detective bureau is overdue. Indeed, such a necessity required no evidence. The Strieff crime, the perpetrator of which is still at large, brought into shocking relief the inadequacy of crime investigation in the Capital. There was no gainsaying the case for reorganization. And none of the witnesses, except the chief of the homicide squad, made the attempt. In fact, the Police Department itself, in the testimony of its representatives, announced plans for its own shakeup. The heart of the recommendations is that better men can be attracted to the detective bureau only by the provision of better jobs. Only in that way, also, can good detectives be retained. Accordingly the plan is to put the homicide squad under a captain, instead of an inspector. There will also be a cleaning out of incompetents, and the introduction of new men. Perhaps the plan will not go far enough to satisfy the Congressional committee. We hope not. The mushroom growth of Washington calls for an increase in the force commensurate both with the city's development and with the problems provoked by that development. There should likewise be room for higher officers in the homicide squad. This can be done only by law, and it is to be hoped that the committee will make the recommendation. One of the Police Department's suggestions calls for the assignment to the detective bureau of a full-time criminologist or microanalyst to help with technical and chemical work. If there had been such a specialist on the force, we might have been nearer a solution of some of the crimes which caused the Congressional inquiry. As to these crimes, the hearing took the spotlight away from them, but now it must be kept there by public opinion.

Imperiled Jobs

Stockholders in the Woolworth Co. received an unpleasant surprise last week when the directors announced a cut in the next quarterly dividend below the regular rate which had been maintained throughout the depression years. They were surprised because of the continued advance in the company's sales. The management took this action, as a precautionary measure, "in view of the uncertainty caused by increased taxes and the war situation." The incident calls attention to the fact that the defense program is giving rise to difficult adjustment problems for industries and trades that primarily minister to civilian needs. Those problems will become increasingly serious as the defense program expands and shortages of men or materials make it necessary to curtail production of less essential, nondefense goods.

Aware of the gravity of the situation, the National Association of Manufacturers has appointed a special committee to study methods of mitigating the dislocation of normal peacetime industry. Suggestions are to be made for meeting them "in a manner which will best serve the interests of consumer, labor and employer." A recent survey by the National Industrial Conference Board indicates that a considerable proportion of concerns engaged in manufacturing durable consumer goods, such as refrigerators, radios, and vacuum cleaners, have already been compelled to reduce their output of goods for civilian use. The reason in part is that raw materials are being preempted for defense purposes; in part that plants and equipment are being adapted to defense work.

Such a situation inevitably means a good deal of localized, temporary unemployment resulting from production shifts. The Governor of Michigan, for instance, is greatly worried over the prospect of further cuts in automobile output and has appealed to President Roosevelt to use his influence to cushion the effects of such curtailment. It is estimated that the 20 per cent voluntary reduction in automobile output already in effect will deprive 96,000 Michigan automotive workers of jobs during the next six months. An estimated 36,000 workers have been taken on by defense industries. That would still leave 60,000 automotive workers without jobs in Michigan. Though this may be an unduly pessimistic forecast designed to avert further cuts in automobile production, nevertheless it underlines the gravity of the problems we are up against in shifting almost overnight from a peacetime to a wartime economy.

Sacrifices, of course, must be made by both labor and capital to put our industries on a defense footing. But it is essential to avoid violent dislocations of productive programs in the name of defense. Our defense efforts would, in fact, be retarded by a planning policy that forced large numbers of men on public relief rolls by depriving them of nondefense jobs before work could be supplied them in defense industries. The N. A. M. is, therefore, aiding our defense preparations as well as assisting our peacetime industries by considering how to effect industrial changes required for defense purposes with a minimum degree of dislocation of normal business activity.

Confident Note

The speech which Winston Churchill delivered to the civil defenders of London yesterday was the most confident he has made since he took office in the dark days following the Norwegian debacle more than a year ago. Yet he made no promise to his listeners that Britain's long and fearful ordeal is over. It is, in fact, far from over. "We must expect," he said, "that the enemy will renew his attacks upon us." Indeed, the coming autumn and winter might see the British people subjected to an even more severe test than that which they have gone through these last ten months.

But the world now needs no assurance that the British are braced for such an attack. That they will not flinch from any further test of courage and stamina and determination to see the battle through is the lesson of hard experience. The conduct of the people of London and of the other British cities blitzed by Germany's Luftwaffe during these ten months will constitute one of the brightest pages in the history of human fortitude. And now they are better prepared than ever to meet any further assaults that Hitler may launch upon them. What is equally important, the British are now in a position to strike back, and have been doing so—an ability which will strengthen their capacity to take it. During the last few weeks the war has been brought home to Germany with increasing vigor and growing effectiveness. "It is time," said Mr. Churchill, "the Germans should be made to suffer in their own homeland and cities something of the torments they have twice in our lifetime let loose upon their neighbors and upon the world." Asking no quarter, the British, he made it clear, would give no quarter. There will be "no truce or parley with Hitler or the grisly gang who do Hitler's worst."

This is by way of notice in advance that even if Russia is defeated, the main obstacle to a total victory for the Third Reich will still stand in Hitler's way. "You do your worst," Churchill challenged the Fuehrer, "and we will do our best." And Britain's best in the months that lie ahead is likely to give the German people an increasing headache, no matter how many more victories they may win in the field, how much additional territory they conquer, how rich their loot. Mr. Churchill can afford to be confident.

Gains In Syria

In his broadcast announcing the conclusion of the armistice with the Vichy forces, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson described the war in Syria, now happily concluded, as both "painful and necessary." It was necessary because the British could not brook having the mandated area taken over and used by the Nazis as a base of operations. It was painful because the struggle was one in which erstwhile allies were arrayed on opposite sides. Gen. Wilson went out of his way to avoid acrimony in dealing with this phase of the war. "We have had the feelings of the French army at heart," he said, "and have done our best to spare their honor without prejudicing our own security."

For the time being the possibility of a German thrust on Suez from the north is more academic than real. Germany is busily engaged elsewhere. But should Hitler succeed in smashing the Red army and in making himself master of Russia, the Germans would again be in a position to attack the British in the Middle East. Whether they will be able to do so, even assuming a Nazi victory over Russia, will depend in no small measure on how long it will take Hitler to achieve such a victory. Should the struggle in Russia be prolonged, the British might be able to make their Middle Eastern position impregnable.

The Syrian victory establishes them along Turkey's southern flank, and also strengthens their position with respect to a possible German attack on Iran. The Syrian air fields provide them with new bases for bombing attacks on the Axis-held islands in the Aegean. And with Tripoli in their hands, the British now have secured an additional naval base and pipe line terminus which should materially ease the task of the Mediterranean fleet.

The most important immediate consequence of the occupation of Syria and Lebanon, however, may be a strengthening of the British offensive position in Egypt. Men, planes and supplies that were being employed against the Vichy forces in Syria and Lebanon can now be diverted to the army of the Nile for an assault on the Axis columns extending from Bengazi and beyond to a point within Egypt. With seasonal conditions what they are, and the mechanized strength of the German-Italian forces in Libya such as to have prevented Gen. Wavell from following through his recent offensive action, the attempt to recapture Libya is likely to prove no walkover. Nonetheless, with Germany occupied in Russia, it is doubtful if conditions for such an offensive will ever again be so favorable as they are now.

Congress Must Choose

Walter Lippmann declared recently that the President's proclamation of an unlimited emergency is a tremendous imitation of an act—not the prelude to action but the substitute for it. This week Congress will have a chance to disprove Mr. Lippmann. For Gen. Marshall's Army service proposals are slated to come up for debate. That the debate will be a decisive test of our foreign policy is obvious from the nature of the proposals. For they would lift the ban on the sending of draftees and Guardsmen outside this hemisphere, allow the President to retain any Army man during the emergency, permit the induction of new selectees without the present twelve-month limitation on service, and extend present and future Regular Army enlistments until six months after the end of the emergency.

Not even in its most optimistic mood could the Administration anticipate wholehearted Congressional approval of such broadside powers. Moreover, in recent weeks a restiveness has been in evidence in Congress in connection with the President's actions which in itself may make for squalls. However, national unity has never been more necessary than it is today, and the mainspring of unity lies in the Government itself, and the Administration should always try to keep it in repair.

The trouble is that the Army proposals are not likely to be examined in that objective frame of mind which the times demand. Here is an opportunity for a political inquisition. And for skilled obstructionists it ought to be relatively easy to rally support back of the charge of broken promises. Selectees, they will point out, originally expected to serve for a year and to stay in this country; now the Army wants to keep them indefinitely, and to possess the right to send them anywhere in the world. True enough, of course, but the country is not living in the world of a year ago. If promises made then in good faith now interfere with the Nation's dominant concern—that is, with our preparedness effort—there is no choice but to abridge them.

The plain truth is that from the standpoint of national defense, we shall suffer a critical reverse if selectees are permitted to return in large numbers to civilian life when they are really only half-trained soldiers. This should be the first consideration of Congress. Throughout the impending debate there must be no deviation from our single concern: security. If, in the interest of political opportunism, there should be such a deviation, then we shall have proof indisputable that to some members of Congress, at least, the unlimited emergency is, as Mr. Lippmann declares, nothing more than a substitute for action.

OPACS And OPM

The need for coordination in our emergency administration is like the weather—everybody talks about it, but nobody seems to do anything about it. Almost every other day some new committee or activity is announced which does not seem to be welded into the common organizational setup. Take, for example, the essay into priorities upon which OPACS is now embarking. Priorities are orders to industry that certain customers must have favored treatment over others. They are issued from the OPM, and hitherto have had to do with defense orders. But OPACS has now announced a priority program for nondefense work—such as the output of maintenance and repair materials and equipment for commercial transport, power, gas, water service, hospitals, schools, food processing, etc. Clearly such orders are essential. For the maintenance of the type of service listed by the OPACS is obviously just as essential to defense as the execution of the actual defense orders themselves. Indeed, in some respects such work is more essential, since adequate defense is dependent upon the perpetuation of an efficiently functioning community life. But industry will be hopelessly at sea—and it has been at sea several times in connection with OPM priorities—if there is not the closest cooperation between OPACS and OPM.

PICKET FENCE CULTURE

Picket fence grows fastest in a soil
Where chickens cluck and scratch and children toil
Coaxing collie dogs to play at pony
Through the thick grass apple-stained and stony.

Picket fence grows intricate and pretty
Out of dooryard gravel of a city,
Neat and white and dainty like the lawn
But never tall enough to talk upon!

Military Secrets

We who stand behind the Administration's foreign policy have hitherto been tolerant of the fulminations of Wheeler and Lindbergh and their ilk, feeling that in a democracy the stupid and short-sighted also have their opinions and should not be denied the right to express them, however much the use of that privilege may give aid and comfort to the enemy.

However, when it comes to actually divulging military secrets, that is something else again, and we are justifiably outraged by Senator Wheeler's revelation concerning the proposed occupation of Iceland.

Senator Wheeler says, in effect: "This is still a democracy; the people have a right to know of acts that may lead to war." Yet in this case what possible useful purpose could have been served by publicizing this information? The troops were already en route at the time Wheeler came forth with his diatribe, and they landed in Iceland only a few days later.

Only harm could possibly have resulted from revealing this information, and no doubt harm would definitely have resulted had Hitler not been busily engaged in Russia and unable to take advantage of the assistance so generously volunteered by our vociferous Senator.

Heretofore we have attributed to Wheeler and Lindbergh patriotic motives, however misguided, but the actual divulgence of military secrets certainly transcends the right of free speech. It appears now to be (and to have been) their purpose deliberately to hamstring this Nation's defense effort. There remains only to find the ulterior motive.

One of Hitler's great advantages has been the ability to make sudden and dramatic surprise moves, since he is under no compulsion to take the people into his confidence.

The people of the United States have given their overwhelming approval to the Administration's foreign policy, and if those charged with the carrying out of the defense effort are to operate successfully, they must not be hamstrung by the necessity for advertising in advance their intentions and the delay that would be occasioned by long drawn out debate in public forum on every move the military may wish to make in the furthering of our defense effort.

Our patience has worn out. It is high time to silence Wheeler and Lindbergh and their ilk.

DAVID KAHN.

Winant's Words

The writer has just received a copy of Ambassador Winant's speech delivered at a private luncheon in London on May 14, in which he observed that in the early morning hours of the preceding Sabbath Nazi bombers destroyed the House of Commons room of the Parliament and smashed the altar of Westminster Abbey. "These two hits," he declared, "symbolize the objectives of the dictator and the pagan."

The terms used by Ambassador Winant are perfectly descriptive of Hitler and his party, to whom representative institutions and religions are equally hateful and doomed to destruction should his Nazi hordes beat Britain now, the main bulwark of defense for the Western Hemisphere.

I commend the thought to Mr. Lindbergh, who may be prepared to welcome the "wave of the future"; also to Messrs. Wheeler, Nye, Walsh, Clark and company, who would repudiate the thought, but who are doing what they can, wittingly or stupidly, to hinder help for the defenders of political liberty and freedom of conscience.

'Long Live Pegler'

Mr. Pegler's article entitled "America for Americans" in The Post of July 3 should meet with unqualified approval of every American.

It is probably true that many native-born Americans are unworthy of the glory of the name of the country in which they are fortunate enough to be born. It is also probably equally true that many naturalized citizens value their affiliation with the greatest democracy in the world to a sufficient degree really to give their allegiance to it under any circumstances and to be loyal to its Constitution, its way of life and its traditions. But the sad fact remains that insufficient care is administered in conferring upon the other variety this marvelous privilege and that numberless cases exist throughout the country where this gift of citizenship is exploited.

The rottenness brought to light in Mr. Pegler's column regarding the uses to which racketeers have put the unions should rouse the ire of every American. It has long been the contention of the writer that any so-called American who is not content with our form of Government and way of living, if naturalized, should have his citizenship revoked and be deported to the country from which he came, and if a native-born American, be incarcerated just as any other criminal would be. Too much unconcern is demonstrated in such cases and too much attention is given minor details while these poisonous snakes are allowed to crawl about at will, injecting their poisonous venom into the veins of our youth and into the minds of otherwise loyal citizens.

Keep up the good work, Mr. Pegler. There are those of us who loudly applaud your commendable efforts to expose the activities of these scum of civilization. Long live Pegler! AN AMERICAN.

USO For Girls, Too

The answer to the plea from a "Stranger Within Thy Gates" in a letter in The Post of July 6 for a USO for girls is that the USO is for girls and women as well as for the men in uniform. In almost all of the six organizations included in the USO you will find some emergency work being done for girls. This is especially true in Washington. Traveler's Aid is continually busy helping wives and sweethearts of service men in camps as well as girls who are in Washington for the first time. The Jewish Welfare Board and Catholic Charities are doing work with girls as well as service men.

The Young Women's Christian Association has a program this summer which is almost entirely geared to the needs of girls who have recently come to Washington. Through this agency it is possible to secure a room, to make new friends, to swim, to dance, and to enjoy many other activities.

In addition to all this Washington churches maintain a lively program for young people.

If you really want to be busy and popular, you might volunteer your services to any of these agencies and I am sure you will be in great demand and will shortly be making many new friends.

Good luck and remember that the USO campaign is for girls as well as for men.

Congressmen!

When the Twelfth Field Artillery of the Second Regular Army Division of World War No. 1 arrived in Winchester, England, we were amazed at the unwelcome reception and the bad treatment we received at the hands of the civil population in that town.

We couldn't enter a store or public building—we couldn't even get a drink of water. People who saw us coming would run into their places of business and lock themselves in. They would rush into their homes and pull down the shades. I say we were amazed but for only a short time for after an inquiry, we found their actions were quite justified.

Our arrival was preceded by the passing through of a regiment of infantry, consisting of National Guard and drafted men (I could be more specific) who, because they lacked individual pride in their uniform and the proper mass discipline, pilfered stores, ordered things and walked out without paying the storekeepers for their merchandise and even stole the 700-year-old key to the Winchester Cathedral.

What point is in this? Well, just that it has to do with military discipline. The kind of discipline Gen. Ben Lear wanted to maintain in his troops about which you make so much fuss, and threaten an investigation of his actions because he disciplined a small unit of unruly soldiers for a breech of discipline and soldierly conduct which is so vital to an Army in peace or war time. A soldier who lacks discipline on maneuvers or on a march through a town in peace, lacks discipline under orders in the front line under fire in war or any other emergency. The same soldiers who "yoo-hooed" the general's girls would be the same men who would pilfer stores, steal keys and refuse to pay for merchandise. The same rowdies who "yoo-hooed" the general's girls would make it tough for a good regiment of soldiers whose misfortune it might be to follow them through a town to get even a drink of water, yet, they would be the first ones to squawk to a Congressman when disciplined for it.

Knowing the general as I do, I know he does not need my defense. I am sure he can handle the situation in which he finds himself very capably but, Mr. Congressman, may I suggest that you run the Congress, provide funds for the services but leave the generals, Lear and others, to run the Army. Your political meddling in the internal affairs of the services only tends to damage the prestige of those who are trying so hard to mold an Army out of nothing equal to the task which will soon confront each and every one of us.

"31 YEARS IN THE ARMY."

Hitler's Karma

There is a butcher in Washington who never cuts a slice of beef without thinking he may be cutting an ancestor. This man is a good religious man, fair and square in his dealings. Born on the continent of Asia, he has strange ideas about life. Yet, I think some of the wisest of men live in India, and in other of the Asiatic countries. Not the wealthiest men, by any means, but the wisest. To be able to do without health is health indeed, say these men. To be able to do without what men call happiness, is real happiness.

And about Hitler, currently bogged down in Russia? Well, according to their ideas, Adolf Hitler has been piling up a tremendous load of bad Karma.

That will have to be paid!

But it's too much to be paid off in the span of a lifetime, so what? So the spirit of Adolf Hitler will be forced back into the world again sometime, but in a lower form. Perhaps, in the form of a despised snake—which would seem the next step lower to his current personality. A POST READER.

St. Swithun's Day

St. Swithun's Day, July 15, is a day to be carefully observed, for it is a time-hallowed weather forecaster. If it rains on St. Swithun's Day, it will rain for 40 days or six week thereafter. For 1,000 years that fact has been remembered by English-speaking peoples. Indeed, a proverb resulted from that tradition of torrential rain on the good saint's fete day, when, to honor him, the great people of Britain disregarded his expressed wish to lie buried among the poor and lowly and prepared to enshrine his bones in the magnificent, newly built Winchester Cathedral. He wept, and Nature wept with him, and for weeks those tears drowned the earth, and those who experienced it told the story to their children and each generation repeated it, even until our time.

London was but a village on the Thames of little import when Caer Gwent was a city of importance to the Britons, lying safely inland from the southern coast harbor which is now Southampton. Mallory calls it Camelot, of the era of King Arthur and his knights. Then came the Romans who made of it a residential as well as a military center and renamed it Venta Belgarum. The Saxons called it Wintceaster, the capital of Wessex.

Kynegil, King of Wessex, ruled there, as did his son Kenwahl. His daughter was married to Oswald, the Christian king of Northumbria, and it was doubtless at his request that Bishop Birinus, consecrated at Genoa in 634, headed a mission to preach the Gospel in Britain. Birinus settled at Dorchester, but Kynegil began to build a church at Winchester and Kenwahl completed it and Birinus consecrated it in 676 A. D. Shortly thereafter, St. Haedda removed the See from Dorchester and so raised Kynegil's foundation to cathedral rank, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul.

Swithun, born in Wessex, became Bishop of Winchester from 850 to 862, and few bishops of that famous cathedral have been more beloved than he, nor have left a greater heritage to the future of good deeds and a godly life. He cared for the poor and built the first bridge over the river to benefit the city and its markets.

Egbert, who had been crowned there "King of all Britain" entrusted the education of his younger son, Ethelwulf, to Bishop Swithun. The boy loved his master, and, unexpectedly raised to the throne, gave to the church a tithe for the provision of pastoral ministrations. The charter conferring the endowment, witnessed by St. Swithun, was placed by him with solemn ceremony on the high altar of the cathedral. That charter still exists and is in the custody of the British Museum today.

St. Swithun had for a scholar from boyhood still a younger son of Egbert's, Alfred. Undoubtedly the child's stepmother, Judith, descendant of Charlemagne and Lothair, imparted to him much of the culture of European court life, but it was from Bishop Swithun's example in daily living and doing that Alfred received those endearing qualities of gentleness and humility with the religious faith which flowered so beautifully, but which St. Swithun did not live to see—a flowering which enriched the history of the world.

St. Swithun died in 862, and by his own desire was buried among the poor in the churchyard to the north of the cathedral. Pilgrims came to his church, so great was the legacy of spiritual value he left behind.

With the growth of the city, the old church soon became too small, and a builder, in the person of Bishop Aetholwold, came. If any part of the old edifice was kept it is not known, but the magnificent cathedral rose upon the old site and with it the desire to make in the retro-choir a shrine for St. Swithun, whose name had been added to those of St. Peter and St. Paul in its dedication. This was in the year 971. The King was there, and with dukes, lords, and bishops, many foreign visitors, and pilgrims to form a great processional and with choral singing, the cathedral was to be consecrated and the bones of St. Swithun to be removed and placed in the shrine behind the high altar.

July 15, the fete-day of the saint, was chosen for the event and all was in readiness the night before. Everything and everyone had been considered but the wishes of St. Swithun himself, and apparently he had not been taken into account, for his wishes that he desired to rest with the poor and humble, were no longer remembered. And so the good soul wept, and Nature wept with him, and clouds hid the heavens and sun from view. This was no ordinary shower, but a torrential cloudburst, it did not stop with nightfall, but, for 40 days, some say six weeks, rain continued to fall in Winchester. No one ever forgot it, and now almost a thousand years have come and gone, but July 15 each year recalls that day of long ago. If it rains on St. Swithun's Day, you may be sure a rainy season will follow. But often blue skies and brilliant sunshine fall in Winchester on the saint's fete-day.

Winchester's Dean Selwyn has written of Alfred the Great: "Nothing is more astonishing in his character than the versatility of his genius. From boyhood when he watched the fortifications rising around the cathedral precincts and Wolvesey, and saw the Danes turn back baffled from them after setting fire to the whole city, he was inured to war; and in manhood he proved himself as well versed in the use of ships at sea as in the command of armies on land. But to have combined these martial gifts with a steadfast and infectious love of learning; to have translated some of the best works of antiquity in order to bring them within the reach of his people, and in doing so to have founded English prose; to have been the patron of song and music—these things indeed give him a rare pre-eminence among men. Tradition says that, when he could not sleep at night, he used to repair to the cathedral to pray. Kenwahl's Church never served "a nobler cause."

That was the spirit of England in St. Swithun's Day, and that is the spirit of England today.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Lag

IT IS CERTAINLY true that the country is not well-informed about the progress and the prospects of the defense program. But this is not due to any policy of official secrecy which prevents Congress, or even the newspapers, from getting at the statistics of appropriations, contracts, production and delivery. Such secrecy as is imposed for military reasons on certain details, for example, as to types of planes or ships completed, is not in itself a barrier to the kind of understanding which the conscientious layman needs and is entitled to have. There is an immense amount of information available about the defense program. The real trouble is that this information is being presented to the country in a form which does not enable the country to reach useful and necessary practical conclusions about it.

LIPPMANN

Thus, for example, we know from the reports of the OPM that in the 12 months from May 1940 to May 1941 the output of airplanes has been trebled, of powder the output has been increased tenfold, and so forth and so forth. We know also that the program of OPM for the rest of 1941 calls for doubling the present output of planes, quadrupling the tanks, trebling powder and small arms ammunition and so forth and so forth. But information of this sort still leaves us in the dark. For it does not make clear, or even sketch out in general terms, what effort and what sacrifice the program will really require, nor does it throw light on what most needs to be done to get the country organized for defense. The whole thing is still seen by the people generally not as a national undertaking but as a commercial job, like a contract to build a house, which is being carried out for them by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Knudsen and others.

THE FACT IS, however, that the commitments already made and those which must certainly be made are on a scale—now that we are passing out of the phase of authorizations, contracts, blueprints—which is beyond anything the people generally have realized, beyond by a great deal what most of Washington has realized. The most serious internal danger that confronts us is the general slowness of official Washington to realize and to make clear to the country the immensity of the task which has to be done.

We can perhaps get some conception of our problem by fixing certain broad facts in our minds. The best over-all measure we have of work actually done is the monthly figure of actual expenditures for defense. This represents the achievement, whereas the much larger figures of the appropriations and the contracts represent what is planned for the future. Now in the year ending this July we have succeeded in raising the monthly expenditures from less than $200,000,000 to about $1,000,000,000; from December to July the monthly expenditure was gradually doubled. Now consider this: it has taken six months to rise from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 a month, but in the next 12 months the program calls for a rise from $1,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 a month.

WE ARE ALL so drugged by figures that it is not easy to imagine the scale and scope of the effort this will require. But we can begin to get some notion when we remember that already there are shortages in many materials, in power, in transportation, in skilled labor and in managerial ability. To rise from a defense output of $1,000,000,000 a month to $3,000,000,000 will require a reduction of civilian consumption on a scale which has not yet been even partially explained to the people.

This is the sense in which the public is not being adequately informed about defense: no one in authority in Washington has begun to make clear how before the year is out the defense program will require, unless it is to fail, a really drastic reduction not only in all such things as automobiles, refrigerators, radios, residential building, except for defense workers, perhaps of many services, but even some reduction in the consumption of certain foods. In the next 12 months this country will be moving rapidly toward devoting nearly half of its real national income to defense: that cannot be done without a radical reduction of the income devoted to civilian consumption.

THE BASIC TROUBLE in Washington is that with some notable exceptions, until recently voices crying in the wilderness, neither the President and his Cabinet, nor the New Dealers, nor the businessmen have fully faced the fact that a defense program on this scale is impossible without serious sacrifices by the individual consumer and by private business.

It is obvious enough why the real problem has been so slowly appreciated. We are facing a period of shortages, and practically everyone in the country, and most of the men in Congress and in the Administration, have spent the past ten years worrying about surpluses, excess capacity, and unemployment. A few months ago it seemed incredible to almost everyone in Washington that there was not an endless capacity to produce everything we could want. Had we not spent ten years of depression closing down plants, paying people not to produce, shortening the hours of labor, subsidizing unemployment, and generally trying not to be choked by the productivity of the country? Then suddenly we find ourselves in a position where everything is reversed. It is not strange that our minds have not adjusted themselves rapidly enough to the new facts.

YET THIS LAG in our thinking, this lag by which we still have the views of the depression, is the real reason why Washington is not yet ready to do adequately what it has promised to do this year. The real problem is not, as Congressman Martin seems to think, that the Government is not letting contracts fast enough: the real problem is that the Government is not ready to take the great decisions by which many private industries are diverted from civilian to military purposes.

Until there is an organ of decision on this—the crucial problem of the defense effort—the President may talk about total defense but we shall not be getting total defense. On what other ground can one explain the well-nigh scandalous fact that in the first six months of 1941 as compared with the same months of 1940 there were sold to civilians 35 per cent more automobiles, 42 per cent more refrigerators, 51 per cent more electric ranges? For until the materials, the machines, the labor and the management that went to produce this boom in luxuries are diverted to defense, we are trifling with defense.

EVERYONE in Washington knows this and admits it. But because it is not urgently enough and fully enough appreciated by the President and his advisers, by Congress, or by the rest of us, nothing is really done to set up officials with authority to take the necessary measures. The greatest problem of defense is really nobody's business in Washington because the problem has not been clearly grasped. But it will have to be grasped. For now we are entering the period when the defense industries are able to produce on a large scale, and they will be stalled for lack of materials and services unless the obstructions of civilian consumption are resolutely cleared away.

Churchill Speaks

Britain's Turn to Rain Havoc

New York, July 14.—The partial text of Prime Minister Churchill's address as heard here by the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System follows:

Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen: It seems to me odd that it should have taken the catastrophe of the great World War to bring me for the first time to this hall, and I am very glad indeed to find that by the time the call came, the hall had not already ceased to exist. You have taken in this building some of the blows and scars which have fallen upon London, but, like the rest of London, you carry on.

How varied, complex, sensitive, sincere is the society we have evolved over centuries in this island, how capable it is of withstanding the most prodigious, the most unexpected and the most fractural strains:

The first thing we saw this morning were the representatives of nearly a quarter of a million organized staff, servants in the defense of London, who in one way or another stand at their posts and take an active part in the maintenance of the life of London and of Greater London under an attack, which when it began and while it was at its pitch was unexampled in history. And what we saw today in Hyde Park was only symbolic of what can be produced, though on a smaller scale, throughout the length and breadth of this competent and embattled island.

In September last, ladies and gentlemen, having been defeated in his invasion by the Royal Air Force, Hitler declared his intention to raze the cities of Britain to the ground.

And in the early days of that month, he set the whole fury of the Huns upon London. None of us quite knew what would be the result of a concentrated and prolonged bombardment of this vast center of population. Here in the Thames Valley, over 8,000,000 people had a very high level of modern civilization. They were dependent from day to day upon light, heat, power, water, sewage and communications of the most complicated character. The administration of London in all its branches was confronted with problems hitherto unknown in London.

Recalls Fear of Panic

Indeed, before the war, when imagination painted the pictures of what might happen in great air raids of our cities, plans were made to move the government, to move all the great controlling services which center in London and disperse them about the countryside. And also it was considered a very great danger which had to be met that some wave of panic would send millions of people running out into the countryside over all the roads.

Well, ladies and gentlemen, when you are doing your duty and you are sure of that, you needn't worry too much about the dangers or the consequences.

We are not moved in this war, except by the promptings of duty and conscience and, therefore, we did not need to be deterred from our action by the picture which our imagination and which careful thought painted of what the consequences were, and in the long run, as so often happens in grave times, the evils were found not to be insurmountable or unmanageable, and so, far from having to control the panic rush out of London, one of the principal difficulties of the municipal bodies represented here has been to deter an undue return of those who had already been evacuated in order to share the ups and downs, the dark and the bright fortunes of this mighty gathering.

Were Not Prepared

I must say, however, I admit when the storm broke in Setember, I was for several weeks very anxious about what the results would be. We were then not prepared, as we are now. Our defenses had not the advantages they have since the raids. I must admit I feared greatly the injury to our public utility services; I feared the ravages of fire; I feared the dislocation of life and the stoppage of work; I feared the epidemics of serious disease or even pestilence among the crowds who took refuge in our by no means completely constructed or well equipped shelters. I remember one winter evening driving to a railway station, which still worked, on my way north to visit the troops, but it was cold and raining; darkness had almost fallen on the blacked-out streets. I saw long queues of people, among them hundreds of young girls in their silk stockings and high-heeled shoes, who had worked hard all day and were waiting for bus after bus which came by already overcrowded, never reaching their homes for the night, and when at that moment the doleful wail of sirens betokened the approach of German bombers, I can tell you my heart bled for London and for Londoners.

This for Four Months

This sort of thing went on for more than four months. I used to hold a meeting of my ministerial colleagues, all the ministers, every week in Downing Street, in order to check up and see how we stood. Sometimes the gas had failed over large areas, the only means of cooking for great numbers of people, sometimes the electricity. . . . The water was cut off, railways were cut or broken; large districts were destroyed by fire; 20,000 people were killed and many more thousands were wounded. But there was one thing about which there was never any doubt—the courage, the unfaltering, unconquerable grit and stamina of the Londoners showed itself from the very outset.

Without that, all would have failed. But upon that rock all stood unconquerable; all the public services were carried on and all the intricate arrangements, far-reaching details, involving the daily lives of so many millions were carried out, were improvised, elaborated and perfected, in the very teeth of the cruel and devastating storms.

I have no doubt whatever, as I said to the forces, the civil defense forces in Hyde Park this morning that the behavior of the British people under this trial gains them progress in the minds and spirits and sympathy of the United States of America, which sweeps into ignominy all the finest tricks of Goebbel's propaganda.

They Will Return

We have to ask ourselves this question, will the bombing attacks of last autumn and winter come back again? Mr. Chairman, we are proceeding on the assumption that they will.

Our success is the result of making many mistakes and learning from experience. In the lull many new arrangements have been made, and if the lull is to end, if the storm is to renew itself, London will be ready, London will not wince, London can take it again.

We ask no favors of the enemy. We seek from them no compassion. On the contrary, if tonight the people of London were asked to cast their votes as to whether convention should be entered into to stop the bombing of all cities, an overwhelming majority would cry, "No! We will mete out to the Germans the measure and more than the measure they have meted out to us."

No Truce or Parley

The people of London with one voice would say to Hitler, "You have committed every crime under the sun. Where you have been the least resisted, there you have been the most brutal. It was you who began the indiscriminate bombing. We remember Warsaw in the very first few days of the war. We remember Rotterdam. We have been duly reminded of your habits by the hideous massacre in Belgrade. We know too well the bestial assaults you are making upon the Russian people, to whom our hearts go out in their valiant struggle. We will have no truce or parley with you or the grisly gang who have worked your wicked will. You do your worst and we will do our best."

Perhaps it may be our turn soon, perhaps it may be our turn now. Ladies and gentlemen, we live in a terrible epoch of the human story. But we believe there is a broad and sure justice running through its theme. It is time that the Germans should be made to suffer in their own homeland and cities something of the torments they have let loose upon their neighbors and upon the world. We have intensified for months past the systematic, scientific methodical bombing on a large scale of the German cities, seaports, industries, and other military objectives. We believe it to be in our power to keep this process going on a steadily rising tide, month after month, year after year, until the Nazi regime is either extirpated by us or, better still, torn to pieces by the German people themselves.

A Share for Italy, Too

Every month as the great bombers are finished in our factories or sweep hither across the Atlantic Ocean, we shall continue the monstrous discharge of high explosive upon Germany. Every month will see the tonnage increase and the nights lengthened and the range of our people also grown to that unhappy, abject, subject province of Germany which used to be called Italy, they will have their fair share, too.

In the last few weeks alone, we have thrown upon Germany about half the tonnage of bombs thrown by the Germans upon our cities during the whole course of the war. But this is only the beginning. And we hope by next July to multiply our deliveries manifold.

It is for this reason, ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Minister, Mr. Home Secretary and other ministers concerned and other authorities concerned—it is for this reason that I must ask you to be prepared for severest counteraction by the enemy.

Russia In Asia

By Freda Utley

(Author of "The Dream We Lost: Soviet Russia Then And Now.")

What Will Her Status In The East Be?

"Scratch a Russian and you find a Tartar" is an old and well-known saying which may find a modern application. Not only are the Russians a people with a large admixture of Tartar blood. It has also to be remembered that during most of her history Russia has played a part in Asia rather than in Europe. When in the seventeenth century Peter the Great utilized the labor of tens of thousands of serfs to build the city of St. Petersburg on the marshlands of the Baltic, he claimed to be opening a window onto Europe. He did in fact bring Russia into the European diplomatic system, but in spite of all his efforts to whip his Russians into a semblance of Westernization, Russia remained her old backward, slothful, barbaric self. She remained, and still remains today, more Asiatic than the Asiatics.

The Bolsheviks made the ancient City of Moscow once again the capital of all the Russias, not only because of the vulnerability of Leningrad (Petersburg) to attack but also because they wished to isolate Russia from capitalist Europe. St. Petersburg had stood for that stream of Russian life which accepts and emulates the West as against the Slavophils of the nineteenth century and the Bolsheviks of the twentieth century. Lenin and Trotsky were Westerners, but Stalin, as he himself told Matsuoka, is an Oriental. Crafty, cunning, unscrupulous and ruthless, he typifies the Western conception of an Oriental despot far more closely than any contemporary ruler of a purely Asiatic nation.

When, in 1923, the Bolsheviks were forced to abandon hope of a Communist revolution in Germany, they turned their faces toward Asia. The Comintern concentrated its efforts in China where the prospects for a Communist revolution and for the spread of Russian influence were far brighter than in Europe. Chiang Kai-shek destroyed these hopes in 1927 when he broke with Moscow and massacred as many of the Chinese Communists as he could lay his hands on. Russia was once again put back into Europe, where in the ensuing years the Comintern played its sinister role in helping the Nazis to power by uniting with them in destroying German democracy and the Weimar Republic.

WHEN HITLER came to power it was confidently anticipated in Moscow that Germany would prepare to fight France and that good relations between Russia and Germany could be maintained. However, the militant anti-Soviet program of the Nazis destroyed these hopes and forced the Soviet government to seek security by drawing closer to the despised "bourgeois democracies." From 1934 to 1939 the Soviet Union played an active and influential role in Europe, joining the League of Nations, talking collective security, and sponsoring Popular Fronts of Communists, socialists and liberals. Meanwhile, she built up a strong army in Siberia to guard against the ever-present danger of Japanese aggression. But her policy was purely defensive in Asia and she left Japan practically a free hand in China. The Russo-Japanese pact seemed to ensure Russia's orientation toward Europe and the middle East in alliance with Germany. But today Germany is endeavoring to push Russia finally out of Europe, or rather to incorporate within the German Empire in Europe the most valuable European provinces of Russia. Whether she succeeds in doing this by setting up one or several puppet states in European Russia is immaterial. If the Red army is defeated and Stalin's regime destroyed, it is only in Asia that Russia will have the chance to survive as an independent state.

The Russian army in Siberia is perhaps the strongest and best led army in the U. S. S. R. It may have been protected by distance from the debilitating effects of the Moscow atmosphere of intrigue, terror and calumny. Its great Gen. Blucher (alias Galen) is presumed dead in the purge, but some of his officers may still be waiting their chance in the army which he trained. Also in Siberia the peasants have been somewhat less harshly treated by the Soviet government than in the rest of Russia. They have been less heavily taxed and allowed a little more freedom; private enterprise in the great spaces of Siberia was allowed a limited scope. All this is due not only to distance from the capital but also to the more independent and dangerous temper of the sons of the old pioneers and colonists and exiled revolutionaries of Tsarist times. There was also the need to conciliate the peasants in the provinces most likely to be attacked, and that meant until recently in the lands near to Japan.

It is possible that Russia may survive as a power in Asia even if Moscow falls and the European armies of the U. S. S. R. are destroyed or disintegrate. The Siberian army may never be drawn into the conflict and fugitives from the West may join it if and when Stalin's government falls. It is this prospect which frightens Japan. A Russia not merely turned toward Asia but based on Asia and altogether excluded from Europe might well seek prestige and territory to compensate for the loss of most of its European territory by fighting Japan in alliance with China and the Eighth Route army in Northwest China. Such a union of forces against Japan might expect to receive substantial aid from the United States which would obviously decide to see a strong Russia in Asia as a bulwark not only against Japan but also against a German advance to the Pacific.

HISTORICALLY, the balance of forces has shifted in both Europe and the Far East according to whether Russia was exerting her power in one or the other. In the '90s of the last century, Russia and Germany were on the most friendly terms because Russia was involved in Asia. The conflict between Russia and Austria in the Balkans was in abeyance and Germany had taken the sting out of the Russo-French alliance by supporting Russia in her Far Eastern policy. France was forced to support Russia likewise against England lest Russia turn away from her to Germany. In pursuance of her ambitions in China, Russia at the end of the century completed the building of the Trans-Siberian Railway with capital supplied by France. She thus became the only European power able to escape from the dominance of British sea power in the East. Britain feared Russia in those days, not only as a menace to India but because Russia threatened to end the free-for-all scramble for concessions and trade in China by establishing a protectorate over the feeble Manchu government of China at Peking. Britain abandoned what in those far-off days was called her "splendid isolation" and tried to win Germany as an ally against Russia. But the Kaiser refused, saying that his army was not going to fight Britain's battles for her, and that he was very well satisfied to have Russia expand eastward. As he then expressed it: "The more Russia is involved in Asia, the quieter she is in Europe."

Failing to obtain an alliance with Germany, Britain in 1902 took the unprecedented step of allying herself with an Asiatic power. Japan, opened up by the battleships of the United States a half century before, had been rapidly copying the West and transforming herself into a modern military and naval power. No other nation except England, however, realized that Japan might be strong enough to defeat the decaying Empire of the Tsars.

In 1904 Japan defeated Russia and in so doing altered the whole European situation. Russia, pushed back into Europe by her defeat, soon abandoned Germany for England; her erstwhile friend for her erstwhile enemy. And Russia's renewed struggle with Austria for hegemony of the Balkans was the immediate cause of the first World War. Without both Russia and Japan on her side Britain might never have won that war. Today Japan is on the other side, and Russia is a victim of German aggression rather than an ally of Britain's.

IN NOVEMBER, 1936, Germany, like Britain in 1902, had called Japan in to redress the balance of Europe. The anti-Comintern alliance of that date was directed not only against Russia but also against the British and French Empires. The purpose of this pact from the German point of view was to crush the U. S. S. R. or immobilize her; from the Japanese point of view it constituted a cloak for the conquest of China.

By 1939 it had become obvious that Japan, bogged down in China, was useless as a counterweight to Russia. Hitler made his pact with Stalin as the alternative method of immobilizing Russia while he fought France and disposed of the other nations of the continent. When Britain failed to make peace after the fall of France, Germany turned again to Japan hoping to get the Japanese fleet into the war on her side. Once again Japan failed Germany. She had neither the strength nor the national unity of purpose to challenge the British Empire and the United States. It seemed that she could not even achieve the conquest of China. The uselessness of Japan as an ally must be recognized as among the causes which made Hitler turn on Russia, although England is still undefeated.

Can Britain and the United States bring Japan in on their side to redress the balance which will be so severely weighted against England if Russia falls? Or is the survival of Russia as a power in Asia the best that can be hoped for?

There are optimists who believe that Japan is so shaken by Hitler's latest turn-around, and so fearful of either Germany as her neighbor in the Far East, or of Russia as a state in Asia that she can be induced to change sides. This seems a slender hope. Britain and the United States cannot offer Japan any concessions except at the price of a betrayal of China and of their own security. Japan for the past ten years has been busy proving that her signature to a treaty is worth no more than Hitler's. And there is little doubt that any peace she might make with China through American mediation would only be the prelude to aggression elsewhere. And no Japanese government dares face the prospect of a withdrawal empty handed from China. It is not easy to see how any Japanese government—in particular the kind of "moderate or businessmen's government" upon which hopes of a Japanese-American entente are based—would dare to bring back to Japan the million men in China who have been spending a large part of their time for the past four years terrorizing and robbing the civilian population of China. Such men would not peacefully accept unemployment or a return to the conditions of life and labor of the Japanese factory workers and peasants.

THE ONLY PLACE to dispose of the Japanese army would be Siberia. To let the Japanese loose there against what survived of Russia would also be contrary to American aims and policy. But if Russia disintegrates, the situation will be changed. There might then be some faint hope of disposing of the Japanese army. One recalls in this connection Mussolini's remark about his soldiers in Abyssinia, to the effect that they should die as heroes, or stay there as colonists, only never return to Italy.

Fair Enough

The Question Of Immigration

PROBABLY nothing will come of the proposal, but it was worth while to suggest the other day that the people of this country close the books to further members for an indefinite time, because the very idea has aroused such angry dissent that I now perceive something which I never realized before. It is argued, and very scornfully, too, that any American who would entertain such a thought is obviously no American himself, and this contention plainly shows that we have made a sort of public links of our place which was organized in the first place as a private outfit. This isn't our country at all, but just anybody's and everybody's country, and it is outrageous and un-American to think of closing the rolls to new members or limiting the privileges of the new ones until we can police up the premises, assimilate those who now gather in alien clusters around the place and weed out those who either do not understand the game and our rules or refuse to play our way.

PEGLER

BY CUSTOM we have encouraged this belief so long that probably most of us now actually do have some vague idea that some fundamental writ of ours intended that we must never refuse to admit to citizenship all applicants who could stammer through a certain rigamarole and present witnesses, themselves not necessarily reliable, as to their character.

As to the sincerity of the naturalization process, I was impressed by the proceedings in the case of a dirty criminal named Mike Carrozzo, who had acquired control of about 25 local unions of the crooked Common Laborers' International. Mike was turned back twice by quiet warnings when he applied for citizenship, but finally got by, nevertheless, on his third attempt, and died a citizen owing the American people a quarter of a million dollars in income taxes on money grafted from the poor, dumb white-wings, garbage men and their like and from the public purse. This evil man never should have been admitted to citizenship, but he finally got by, notwithstanding the knowledge of Government officials that he was a crook by trade. If such a man could get by in such circumstances, then it would seem to follow that naturalization and American citizenship, conferring every right except the right to become President, are to be had for the asking. But mere ignorance and criminality are not the only undesirable traits to be sought in applicants for American citizenship. In a large batch of Nazis picked up recently for spying on this Nation's defense for Adolf Hitler, all of them presumably quite bright and without criminal records, a considerable number were naturalized citizens. And, of course, we know throughout from long experience that politicians manipulate blocs of naturalized, but by no means Americanized, aliens voting as citizens in American elections.

BUT I AM edified by the indignant rejection of the very idea that the native American is un-American in suggesting something that has been summed up derisively as "America for Americans?" cans?" If America is not for Americans, whose country in this? Certainly the native American, with few exceptions, grows up knowing and believing in his country. He has the feel of America and, confidentally, he grows weary of hearing of his duty to make things pleasant for the foreign born and to accept the leadership and teachings om men who came here from abroad, not all of them merely to be free but many of them to dirty up this land, abuse its privileges and impose on its hospitality.

If citizenship were restricted to the native citizen, then, in time, we should at least be able to conduct an American country by and for Americans only. The guest status of the alien would be established, and there would be no responsibility of his interfering in American politics. If public offices were restricted to native Americans, we undoubtedly would continue to elect some very bad public officers, but they would be American bad men, anyway, and our mistakes and failures would be our own. Our native crooks and traitors are no worse than our import jobs, and we know better how to deal with them.

AS TO THE foreign born who have borne arms for the United States, there seems to be undue emphasis. For recognizing fully the devotion to the U. S. A. and the sacrifices made in war by Americans who were born abroad, the fact remains that the American forces always have been mainly composed of native Americans. They never have been, as might be inferred from this argument, a foreign legion of the U. S. A.

Today's News Sidelight

Helsinki Building Boom Blasted by Raids

When Soviet bombs began raining down on Helsinki a few weeks ago, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society, Finland's capital still was repairing damage wrought during the attack by Russia in 1939-40. Finnish officials have estimated that it would take a decade to replace dwellings destroyed throughout the country in that conflict.

"Helsinki had been experiencing a building boom until the nation went on a war footing, for the second time in two years, after Germany invaded the U. S. S. R.," the bulletin continues. "Low-cost apartment buildings had been under construction for families that had left Karelian territory ceded to Russia by the 1940 peace terms. Helsinki officials also were reported considering building a $2,000,000 electric power plant.

Swedish Influence Declines

"The capital stands on a rocky promontory along Finland's southern coast, directly across the 50-mile wide Gulf of Finlnd from Tallinn, capital of Sovietized Estonia. Normally Helsinki is the country's principal port and commercial center, but since the European War began in September, 1939, the Baltic Sea and consequently the Gulf of Finland have been virtually closed to shipping. The harbor is protected by a group of heavily-wooded islands.

"Although cosmopolitan in its makeup, Helsinki is the focal point of Finnish life and the center of strong national feeling. Its pre-war population was about 300,000. The Swedish influence formerly was marked, but recent years have seen a decline in the use of the Swedish language and customs.

Architecture Shows Modern Trends

"Helsinki has essentially a twentieth-century appearance. The city is well laid out, with wide streets, parks and gardens. Most of the public buildings are quite new, and modern architectural trends have been used freely in their construction. The light-colored stone of their facades has given Helsinki the name of 'White City of the North.'

"The railroad station is often referred to as the most famous example of Finnish architecture. It is built of native rose granite, and its high entrance arch is flanked by giant figures holding lamps. The new Parliament building, with a colonnaded front, is extreme in its simplicity.

"Educationally, the capital ranks high. The university attracts some 5,000 students. There is a widely known art gallery, the Athenaeum, where one of the most popular statues is a larger-than-life bronze figure of Paavo Nurmi, the famed Finnish distance runner."

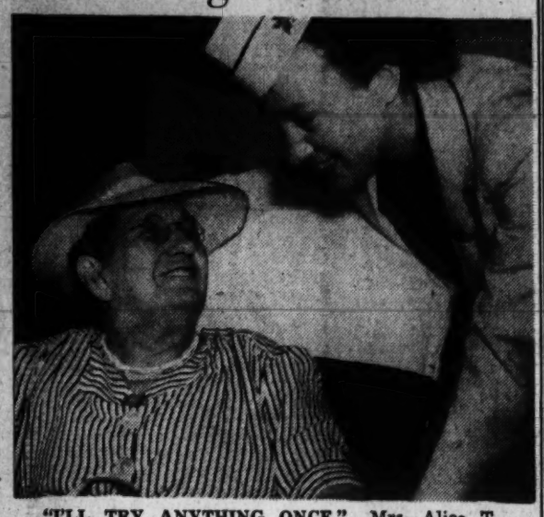
Mother of 20 Makes Maiden Flight at 80



"I'LL TRY ANYTHING ONCE." Mrs. Alice T. Meador, of Richmond, Va., mother of 20 children, is settled in her plane seat by Stewardess Dorothy Irwin preparatory to taking the first flight in her 80 years

Flying, especially amid the comforts of a modern transport plane, is today a commonplace but it was an utterly new experience yesterday for Mrs. Alice T. Meador, who is the mother of 20 children.

At the age of 80, she took her maiden flight, climbing aboard an American Airlines ship with the nonchalance of a seasoned aerial voyager.

Mrs. Meador lives in Richmond, Va. For the last few weeks she has been visiting a son, Roy, in Alexandria. When another son, S. W. Meador, flew up the other day from his home in Charleston, W. Va., he induced his mother to fly back with him. She didn't require any coaxing.

"I guess I can make it if other people can," said the octogenarian, who looks scarcely 65. Eighteen of her 20 children are living, scattered over Virginia and West Virginia.

Quite hard of hearing, she hoped the flight would relieve this condition.

Clubwoman's 'Melting Pot' To 'Boil' for Servicemen

History is repeating itself.

Back in World War days, Mrs. Clara Wright Smith, clubwoman and civic leader, installed a "melting pot" in the show window of Galt's jewelry store. The public was invited to come in and drop old gold and silver, unused jewelry, etc., into the pot. The precious metals were extracted and proceeds turned over to the Red Cross.

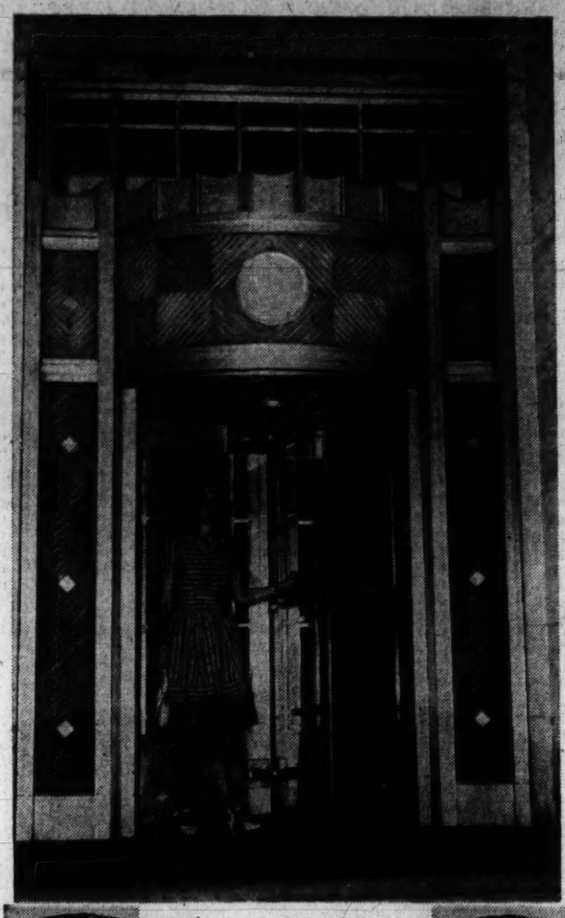
Yesterday Mrs. Smith placed another "melting pot" in Galt's window. The shop is in a new location now, at 607 Thirteenth Street Northwest, and the beneficiary is the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

True, Mrs. Smith is 24 years older, but the idea is the same as before. People are urged to rummage through bureau drawers for obsolete stickpins, rings, watches and anything else containing gold or silver, then bring the collection to the melting pot.

"We filled up three show windows last time," she said yesterday, "and we expect to do as well, or better, now."

Mrs. Smith started off the drive by dropping her wedding ring into the pot, an ancient relic from the household of Mrs. Julian L. Schley, president of the service men's club. Mrs. Smith launched the World War collection with 17 pieces of silver.

Tons of Now Precious Aluminum Decorate Government Buildings



ALUMINUM SETTING—Nice and modern, but nice and expensive, too, is the aluminum door (above) of the Justice Department through which Jessie Harmon swings. You can lift the gargantuan ring-handle on the aluminum door below with your little finger. Audrey Rubert demonstrates. A whole courtyard of the department is surrounded by aluminum urns just as this caption is

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia,
Director, Office of Civilian Defense,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Mayor: Your experts estimate that your Nation-wide scrap aluminum collection campaign will bring in 20,000,000 gross pounds of aluminum—just from the donations of householders. But if you don't mind sending your trucks to just a dozen or so more doorways—all but one of them in downtown Washington— you can raise your take from 2½ to 5 per cent.

That's right, there's anywhere from 500,000 to 1,000,000 pounds of aluminum, almost all of it in the form of trim or in other ornamental use, pasted on Government buildings here. That means 100 or 150 pursuit planes, or 25 to 35 four-engine bombers.

Your getting it, of course, is contingent on whether its present owners will give it up. But if housewives will, Government officials ought to be equally willing.

You better hit the new Attorney General first, whenever he's appointed, because he has the largest part of it in one place. The cost of the aluminum in the Justice Department Building was about $213,000, Procurement Division figures show. Using the estimate of one of the country's largest Government contractors, about half the cost of the trim is represented by the raw material, and figuring aluminum at its then cost of 22 cents per pound, that one building should net you 400,000 pounds alone.

Nine thousand pounds of the metal went into the Gravelly Point Airport, Procurement figures show. That stuff is so new and has had such little wear that it's hardly second-hand.

There are quantities more in the Federal Trade Commission Building—prettiest grill work on the glass doors you ever saw—and there are scattered amounts in the new Postoffice Building, Municipal Center buildings, Labor Department and the like.

Incidentally, the boss of the defense program ought to have some scrap for you. New aluminum screens have just been installed throughout the first floor of the White House.

Even down at the new Social Security Building, where OPM officials are figuring on how to turn out more aluminum, almost every overhead light fixture in the place is what you're after. There are literally thousands of 'em, and each weighs a couple of pounds.

Ripping all this trim and the fixtures and ornaments out would require replacements, but there's lots of plywood in the country and even lots of steel not needed directly by the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission.

Of course, the trim and ornaments, as now placed, are awfully pretty, but then, a bomber is awfully pretty, too—especially right now.

And if you just hold up your collection campaign a few months, until a new Washington hotel is built, you can get another 45,000 pounds of scrap, provided the hotel will give up the aluminum window frames it's about to install.

How's about it?

Sincerely,
ALFRED FRIENDLY.

Bill Cunningham's Column:

Old Man Quinn—Baseball's Martyr With His Braves

By Bill Cunningham

Them as has gets, and them as hasn't usually get it in the neck.

If current major league baseball has a personal martyr, it's probably Mr. Robert J. A. Quinn, venerable president of the Boston Braves. For nearly a quarter of a century he's been clamped in its pillory and has been wearing the hair shirt as well.

He's had 'em always when nobody else wanted 'em, and has kept 'em alive on nobody could see what. As the late Maj. Frank Cavanaugh once said of his football career, "It was always my fate to coach the grimy when they were at their grimiest." That's been the baseball career of dogged and indomitable Mr. Quinn. He's always had 'em just before they got good, just before their story turned sweet.

He took the Boston Red Sox after Harry Frazee had wrecked the once-valuable property and held it together with mucilage and picture wire until the wealthy young Tom Yawkey eventually came along and took over. Then he took the Brooklyn team, which, due to the factional wars between the heirs of two once powerful partners, had been allowed to run down so completely that it wasn't even first-class junk. He kept this one going and even made a little progress with it leading up to the now grandiose era of Mac-Phail and first place.

Then he took over the most hopeless looking derelict of the three, the defunct and all but deceased Boston Braves. This one looked tougher than a life sentence because the only recognizable money in it was horse track money, which Judge Landis had ordered to cash in and get out. His was, therefore, not only a job of rebuilding on the baseball end, but a seemingly insurmountable task of refinancing, too.

The age of miracles apparently isn't finished. The world on every horizon is red with flames of war. People with money aren't looking for places to spend Taxes are climbing like the tides before a hurricane. it. They already know where most of it's going. Expensive professional sport plants and sports teams are a questionable investment, anyhow. Who can tell whether young men will even be free to play baseball in another year or two or three?

But the old gentleman made it. He came through topside, doing his community, the league, the entire game a notable service. He got the horse track out, sufficient new money in, all this without the sacrifice of anything too valuable on the playing end, with the possible exception of Al Lopez,? an elderly but smooth and useful hind snatcher.

He had, and still is entitled to have, reason to believe that if the world holds together and things go along, the long deferred reward is now on its way. It isn't hunger for money that drives him. He has no personal fortune, but those who know him know it isn't the vulgar compendium that keeps him in there pounding away after most men have retired.

Baseball is his life. A successful team is his dream. This was his hardest shot and he deserves the support of all those who admire the game and who want to see it prosper, as well as of those who admire a fighter who won't concede the odds an inch, whether it's baseball or band music.

This honorabl gentleman and his commu ity enterprise were struck as dirty and out-of-bounds a blow as mugs ever conspired when a story was deliberately planted in pale and immature hands to the effect that there was raw, red revolution in the ranks of the Boston Braves and that Casey Stengel has started pinching pennies until the Abe Lincoln on each one can be heard yelling from his pocket, "Make the guy turn loose. He's choking me to death." The charge was flatly made that the manager has lost his charm, his elasticity and even his brains since he was permitted to buy a piece of the stock, and the principal proof projected was that he sold a noble athlete named Babe Dahlgren, a magical fielder and a pile of poison at the dish, primarily to unshoulder Dahlgren's salary, and thus save himself personally a percentage of the vulgar but necessary commodity known as dough.

I not only presume to challenge the truth of any such statement, but its honesty of purpose as well. The insurrection theory came mostly out of a bottle. A club in the spot the Braves have been has to gamble in part with the rag-tag and bob-tail, the likes of Mr. Dahlgren and similar cast-offs. They had three drunks on the roster. Stengel cracked down on them and even bawled out in no uncertain terms a newspaper man he caught nipping out of the bottle with them.

Certainly they don't like Stengel. Neither does the newspaper man Stengel told to quit drinking with his players or stay away from his ball club. That was the extent of "the revolt."

It cost poor Old Man Quinn two sleepless nights in that heat wave and had him down there conferring earnestly with his ball players. He invited any of 'em who had any grievances to come upstairs and talk 'em over. They didn't seem even to know what he was talking about.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Taught as a Child to Say 'Ma'am' and 'Sir,' When Addressing Elders, Woman Lived to Rue It in Adult Social Interchange; How Train Her Children?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a child in North Carolina, I was taught to say "ma'am" and "sir," in conversation with my elders. Later, as a young adult, I found it hard to eradicate these two words from my speech. In consequence, I embarrassed myself a number of times by saying "ma'am" to women only slightly older than myself, who were annoyed by the implication of marked seniority in being so addressed. As a young matron, I find myself, likewise, slightly taken aback nowadays at being called "ma'am" by boys and girls in their early twenties.

Therefore, I have determined that my own children will be taught to say, for instance, "Yes, mother," or "Yes, Mrs. Jones." So far, that is what I have tried to teach. My eldest child is not yet 4,—but she succeeds quite well in saying, "Yes, mother," and "Yes, daddy." However, when she meets strangers, or even the mothers of her little friends, it is just too much to expect her to add the name of the person she is addressing.

Hence, on being asked, "Is this your baby sister?" or any similar question, she replies simply, "Yes," or even (too often for my comfort), "Uh-huh." And I don't like the way it sounds. Yet neither do I know what to teach her, unless to say the old-fashioned, "Yes, ma'am." I am wondering whether the simple "Yes" actually does sound disrespectful to adults, or whether I have been "conditioned" to think so,—having been accustomed to hearing children say, "Yes, ma'am."

I want my children to be well-mannered and I think the inculcation of good manners is an important part of the mother's job in the children's early years. Since I am a faithful follower of your column and think you do an excellent job, I would like your views on the subject, please.

CONSCIENTIOUS MOTHER.

'Ma'am' Is Obsolete; Mannerly Boys Say 'Sir'

DEAR C. M.: It is considered a breach of good manners for a child to make a monosyllabic reply—such as "no," or "yes," or "what?"—in conversing with his elders. And while "ma'am" has gone out of style, a boy, in speaking with a gentleman, still uses the old-fashioned "Yes, sir," "No, sir," "I think so, sir," etc. A girl (trained in gentle manners) when speaking with a gentleman, says "Yes, Mr. Smith," rather than "sir."

Both boys and girls, in addressing women of adult years, should say, "Yes, Mrs. Smith," or "No, Miss Brown." In the family circle, all children should speak thus: "Did you call, mother?" "Yes, father." "Thank you, Aunt Jane." "Sorry, Uncle John." However, they are not required to insert the name in a long sentence; nor when saying "please" and "thank you." "Yes, please," or "no, thank you," is considered sufficient. Also, in making detailed reply to an elder's question,—as, "Where's Junior?"—the child does not need to add, "Mrs. Smith," after saying, "Junior just went down to the corner."

Now, about your 4-year-old: I am not in accord with your theory that "it is just too much to expect her to add the names" of persons outside the family whom she may be addressing. My experience with children leads me to believe that children of normal intelligence, who are old enough to speak in sentences—and most children around 4 years of age will chatter endlessly if encouraged—are likewise old enough to get a grip, as it were, on the names of adults who are habitues of their environment, and even to grapple charmingly with the names of "strangers" to whom they are presented.

If the adult who has charge of the child's training will pronounce new names for him with meticulous clarity, as, "This is Mrs. John-son,"—at the time of their meeting,—and thereafter will casually impress the name, perhaps by saying, "Mrs. Johnson was kind to give you the ice cream," and "Mrs. John-son has a big collie dog," etc., the child in turn will carefully try the name on his tongue, in pursuing the conversation. The same procedure can be followed for (let's say) "Mr. Ben-ton," the grocer; "Mrs. Cas-wel-der," whom you see at church; "Mrs. Ruth-erford," who is 3-year-old Ben's mother, etc., etc.

Talkative children take readily to the attempted pronunciation and confident usage of so-called "big words" and polysyllabic surnames if their parents (1) habitually offer them such words in an offhand way in leisurely conversation: (2) enunciate slowly and distinctly, and (3) encourage the child's imitative efforts (however wide of the mark they may be at first) by nodding approval and repeating the word after him, correctly, rather than by wet-blanketing his initiative with such tactless remarks as, "No, dear. Not that way. THIS way——"

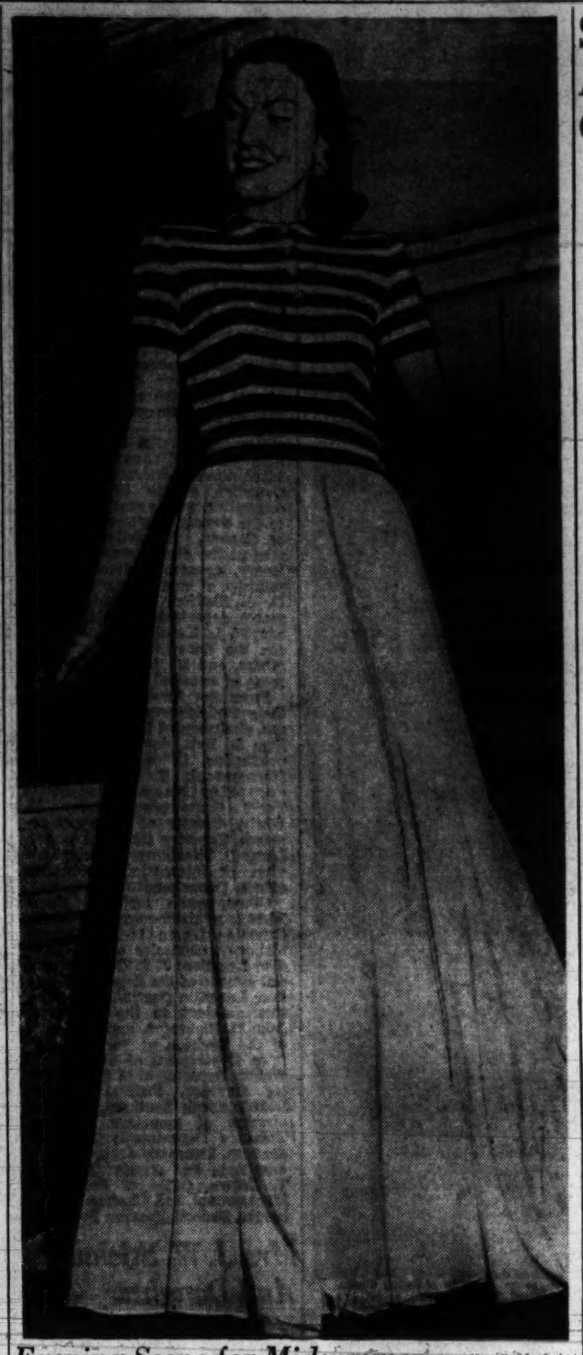
Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Molly Pitcher

A type of drop leaf table familiar in Colonial American use was called by the name of Moll or Molly Pitcher. Sometimes it had a deep squared leaf that dropped almost to the full depth of the leg, sometimes it had a smaller rounded flap.



Evening Scene for Midsummer

When you are tired of the fluffy bouffant of early summer and yearn for something sleek and simple, then is the time to choose utter sophistication in a dinner dress. Right now you can give yourself a change by selecting a dress that can be worn on into fall. Something different from the bare-back summer gowns is the combination above. The sports shirt top of red-striped cotton jersey is joined onto white voile. The skirt is full-gathered—the type in which you like to dine and dance

Defense Brides Should Buy With Discretion

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE RUMBLE of war drums keeps wedding bells busy. And defense brides have very special furnishing problems. They want these little new homes of theirs to be charming, yet they dare not load themselves up with too much heavy stuff that will be hard to move. For certainly they can't regard themselves as in any way settled. Will we make suggestions, several of them have written, on what to buy? They want ideas for homes that will be gracious, with furnishings that will be easy to take along when they move and that will suit in the home they may have some day in the future.

Our advice is for them to live in furnished quarters if possible so they won't have to buy heavy goods. Then they can put their furnishing budget on "packables" that will make this impersonal furnished place seem like home and will be at the same time treasures for their future permanent abode. Such things as small fine rugs, beautiful silver, lovely fabrics and hangings, the best of linens and blankets—that's where the money should go. There's nothing in that list that will break and all of it can be packed in trunks, yet with such things almost any spot could be made attractive. The fine fabrics can be used as couch covers and bedspreads, for cushions and curtains and wall hangings. The nice rugs will cover up a multitude of sins on a rented floor. The silver will make a party out of the most casual get together, enable young couples to entertain graciously at tea and coffee when they're not equipped for dinners and such. The exquisite table linens will help there too, while luxurious bed linens and blankets will spruce up the most ordinary housekeeping layout.

If you must buy furniture, get one fine piece for each room and use make-shifts for the rest. That way you need only plan to pack and move the one treasure. As for china and glass—don't buy things to break your heart over if they get smashed in packing. We advises economy there—ware you can leave behind when you move.

This same advice, by the way, applies to purchases of home furnishings by career families in the Army, Navy and Diplomatic corps.

Special Diet Aids Health, Cuts Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

THE NEWS about reducing is that the low-calorie diet can be the best in the world—if the menus are planned according to the new dietary yardstick. Your diet can be so perfectly balanced that you actually improve your health as you take off two or even three pounds a week. Isn't that good news?

You can cut down to 800 or 1,000 calories a day and be on a diet that measures up to the recommended nutrition allowances and is abundant in every respect except in calories. For the calorie deficit you draw on stored fat. But all the repair and regulating materials can be included.

What does this mean to those of you who are trying to reduce? It means that you will not get tired, weak and discouraged as you have other times when you tried dieting. You can have optimal amounts of the morale vitamins B1 and B2, vitamin A, which keeps up your resistance; vitamin C, which increases your feeling of well being; the essential minerals and the protein needed for wear and tear.

Get Rid of a Load

It means that even though you are from 50 to 100 pounds overweight, you can get rid of the load and be a happy, healthy person while doing it. You won't really appreciate this until you try balancing your menus according to the new yardstick. Then you will be amazed at the increase in pep along with the steady decrease in your weight.

I am not going to buttonhole you with too much scientific data. You are interested in the results—and you'll get them! But I do want you to know something about the scientific principle which is being applied to the overweight's reducing diet. An understanding of how it works will help you to stick.

Well Being Enhanced

Numerous experiments have shown that by increasing a single dietary factor in an apparently adequate diet, the sense of well being may be markedly enhanced. For this reason, the adequate diet is no longer good enough for the reducer. After all, reducing is something of a strain. It entails turning the excess pounds back into energy. So it is important that the reducer's vitality be kept at a high level—and that calls for an abundance of the protective elements. To assure optimal amounts of these elements, the following magic list of foods should form the basis of your daily diet:

BASIC BALANCED MENU

PROTECTIVE FOODS	Calories
Orange juice or grapefruit, ½ glass, 3½ oz.	50
Egg, 1 boiled or poached	80
Wholewheat bread, or Vitamin B1 bread, 3 thin slices	75
Butter, 2 pats, each ½ in. thick	100
Lean meat, fish or fowl, 6 oz. (trim off every particle of fat and boil broil or bake)	300
Cooked vegetables, 2 (1 a green leafy)	100
Green vegetable salad of watercress, escarole or some other green	25
A second fruit	50
Skim milk or buttermilk, 2 glasses, or 1 glass and serving of cheese, 1 oz.	160

Note—To bring that menu up to optional level in Vitamin B1, supplement daily diet with one milligram of thiamin chloride, which furnishes 333 international units of this vitamin.

'Beanie' Caps Stage Return

Hollywood, Calif.—"Beanies" are popping up for all occasions. Once this lowly cap was worn only by school girls to football games—but you'll see them everywhere now. Joan Fontaine wears one of these fitted caps made of gray felt, with a gray flannel jacket, deep purple skirt, in one sequence of her new picture, "Before the Fact." The "beanie" is trimmed on either side with tiny wigs of purple feathers, the effect similar to the winged cap of Mercury.

Simone Simon returned to Hollywood from New York with several new ensembles, including a "beanie" made of navy blue soutache braid topped with bright red popples; Simone wears it with a blue and white striped afternoon frock of sheer summer silk.

Science Aids Summer Skin Smoothness

Many Methods Evolved for Hair Removal

By Carolyn Abbott.

SUMMER'S abbreviated bathing suits, scanty play togs and sheer hosiery call for satin smooth arms and legs. That means no unsightly superfluous hair.

So, before donning your swim suit or shorts, remove all excessive hair. There are many methods—both temporary and permanent—for safe removal. The three permanent hair removers are: electrolysis, diathermy and X-ray. The temporary ones are chemical and mechanical. Chemical methods comprise depilatories of various kinds and the mechanical ones include abrasives, depilatory waxes, shaving, tweezing or plucking.

Of the three permanent methods of hair removal only two are safe. They are diathermy and electrolysis. Electrolysis is first choice. The X-ray method is considered dangerous and unsatisfactory. Avoid it by all means.

All permanent hair removers are expensive and none should be used for destroying hair of the arm pits. The skin in this area is too sensitive. Shaving or a mild depilatory are the best methods for removing this superfluous hair. "Sleek"—a new depilatory put on the market this spring is recommended by the makers for removing under-arm hair. There is no unpleasant odor for the creamy substance has been sweetly scented.

Use of depilatories is probably the easiest and most satisfactory method of removing hair on the legs.

However, shaving and the combination method of bleaching and pumice stone rubbing may be substituted for depilatories. For the bleaching, make a mixture of six parts baking soda, four parts strained lemon juice and one part peroxide. Use just enough water to dissolve the ingredients. After cleansing the arms and legs at night, apply the mixture and let it remain on until the next morning. Then wash it off with hot water and a mild soap. Repeat the process for a week, then gently rub away hairs with a fine pumice stone.

In an all-out daintiness program for summer, the model above quickly removes all new fuzz with a pumice or wonderstone. This method is called mechanical.

Huddles Assigned to Post At Legation in Bern

Expect to Leave About October 1; William C. Trimbles Going to Lima; J. M. Soubys to Vacation in Mexico

By Patricia Grady

Though wars may rage and diplomatic relations be severed on all sides, with the men of the American foreign service it's "business as usual." In fact, it's "more business than usual" for with so many nations at war, United States diplomats are sometimes the only foreign representatives in a belligerent country and on the basis of international decency take over many of the problems of other countries' nationals.

One of the most recent switches in foreign service personnel is that of J. Klahr Huddle from his post here with the State Department to Bern, Switzerland, where he will serve as counselor of the American Legation. Washington will be sorry to see the Huddles leave, for they have been here four years, during which time Mr. Huddle has been director of the Foreign Service School.

Of her plans, Mrs. Huddle says: "They are indefinite, of course." She plans to accompany her husband to Bern, probably by way of Portugal, but cautions that much can happen to things personal and international between now and October 1, when they hope to leave. Being stationed on the continent will be like returning home to the Huddles for Mr. Huddle's career in the foreign service has been exclusively in Europe—his last posts have been in Poland and France, and he recently made a two-year inspection tour all over Europe.

Mrs. Huddle Expects To Travel Light

Excited about the prospect of being in the center of things again, Mrs. Huddle hopes that the State Department will not change its mind between now and October about letting wives accompany their husbands on European missions. She will travel light, leaving both her household goods and daughter, Carolyn, in the United States. Carolyn, who is spending the summer here with her parents at their Wardman Park apartment, will go back to her junior year at Oberlin College in the fall.

Mrs. Huddle feels that Switzerland is a fascinating place from which to watch world affairs at this time, as the sole surviving neutral in the middle of the European maestrom, and that it would be even more interesting following a peace treaty. Though the remnants of the League of Nations have taken refuge in the United States and Canada, the spirit of world organization still survives in Switzerland with the silent buildings at Geneva a nucleus around which to build another world order. In any case, the Huddles should have many a tale to tell when they return to this country.

Trimbles Are Sent To Post in Peru

Another foreign service change is that of William C. Trimble who has been serving as Third Secretary of the American Embassy and American Vice Consul at Paris. He, Mrs. Trimble and their three children, will leave about the first of August for Peru, where he will serve in the same dual capacity in Lima. Mrs. Trimble and her children have been staying in Baltimore, while Mr. Trimble was with the American Embassy in Vichy. He returned to this country recently.

CAPITAL TOURISTS: Mr. and Mrs. James M. Souby will leave tomorrow night with their daughter, Margery, for a three weeks trip to Mexico. Their first stop will be the Reforma Hotel in Mexico City. The day of their departure, Margery will entertain at a luncheon at their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue in honor of Mrs. George Richard Gottschalk, of Syracuse, N. Y., who was a classmate of hers at Bennett School. Mrs. Gottschalk, the former Miss Henrietta Hiscock, of Syracuse, will make her home in Washington with her husband, who will be working in national defense. They are expected to arrive today.

A letter from Lucy Marbury, who is with Donald Watt's "Experiment in International Living Group" in Mexico, tells of the marvelous trip she had driving South of the border with Peggy Houghteling, Charles Minor, Lindsay Crawford and about 20 other young internationalists. Learning Spanish as they motored, the group picked up enough of the language to tide them over until they become more fluent as a result of living with native families. Lucy describes the Mexican home she is living in at Guadalajara as "very luxurious and much more modern than anything I've ever seen before." Her brother, William, jr., is on a like tour to Peru. A note from him from Panama tells of the group's plans to visit Lima, live with Peruvian families and pack-trip into the Andes. He will be home in time to start his senior year at the University of Virginia.

Mrs. J. B. Wright Entertains House Guests

Mrs. J. Butler Wright entertained yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party in honor of her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Richardson, of New Orleans. Mrs. Wright received her guests informally in her apartment at 2029 Connecticut Avenue.

Mrs. Richardson, who was formerly Miss Mary Sutherland, is Mrs. Wright's sister. She and her husband will be Mrs. Wright's house guests for several days.

Miss Edith Wright, who recently returned from a visit to Newport, has left for California, where she plans to spend the remainder of the summer. Her sister, Mary, now a career woman, will stay at her Government desk during the summer months.

Among other informal parties is the dinner Mrs. Arthur Woods will give tonight before the Starlight Concert at Meridian Park. She will take her guests on afterward to the concert. Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler are also planning on taking a group of friends to tonight's concert as are Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

Visiting at British Embassy

Mrs. David Wood arrived here several weeks ago en route from India to England. She is the daughter-in-law of the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax, whom she is visiting at present at the embassy on Massachusetts Avenue. She has been visiting her husband, Lieut. Wood, who is on duty with the Household Cavalry in the East. She plans to remain here several more weeks before leaving for England

Daughter Born To the Former Junia Culbertson

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Luckenbill, of 27 East Seventy-ninth Street, New York, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Sunday. The child will be named Mary Louise.

Mrs. Luckenbill is the former Miss Junia Culbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, of 2101 Connecticut Avenue and Charmian, Pa. Her marriage took place November 19, 1939, in the apartment of her parents. Since that time the couple have made their home in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson are now at their summer residence in Pennsylvania.

Doris Pendergast To Wed Saturday In Batavia, N. Y.

Miss Doris Pendergast, daughter of Mrs. William L. Pendergast, of this city, has chosen Saturday as the day of her wedding in Batavia, N. Y., to Charles Veltz, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Veltz, of Batavia.

The wedding will take place at 9 o'clock in the morning at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Miss Pendergast will have as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Joseph M. Barker, of Petersburg, Va. Stewart Veltz, a brother of the bridegroom, will come from California to serve as best man.

The young couple will make their home after August 1 at 26 Bank Street, Batavia. Miss Pendergast is a graduate of Georgetown University School of Nursing and has been working with the Veterans' Administration in Batavia.

Smyths, of Scarsdale, At Wardman Park

Craig Hugh Smyth, of Scarsdale, N. Y., who is connected with the National Gallery of Art, has arrived in Washington with Mrs. Smyth and they are staying at the Wardman Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Smyth came here from Berkeley, Calif., where they were recently married. Mrs. Smyth is the former Miss Barbara Linforth, daughter of Prof. Ivan M. Linforth and Mrs. Linforth, of Berkeley.

Notables Join Capital Exodus

Several attractive Washingtonians who have been lingering on here through the early summer are about to leave at last for a vacation—showing that finally the town is going into its seasonal slump, as more and more people depart for cooler climes.

Mrs. Sidney Lee will be off this morning by motor for a stay of a week or so in New York. Early next month she will go West with her sister, Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of the New Jersey Senator. They will spend several weeks on a ranch. Mrs. Lee will not open her home in Georgetown until October.

Also heading West shortly will be Mrs. Mondell Gregg, who plans to go to a ranch in about two weeks. She has been busy getting settled in the house on Thirtieth Street which she recently leased. Mrs. Gregg returned to town the other day after a week's vacation in New York and Virginia.

Dr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin are planning a vacation in August. They will spend some time in New Jersey with his mother and then hope to motor to a New England resort for a week.

At Wardman Park

Maj. and Mrs. William I. Shuman are here from Groton, Conn., and are stopping at the Wardman Park Hotel during their visit.

Dr. and Mrs. Julia Stop in Capital En Route to Home

After a vacation in Mexico, Dr. and Mrs. Mario Julia stopped briefly in Washington yesterday at their Wardman Park apartment to pick up their baggage and set off again. With their three children, Maria Lina and Stephen, they are en route to their home in Puerto Rico for the summer.

Adolf Berle, Jr., Host at Dinner For Canadians

The Assistant Secretary of State, Adolf A. Berle, jr., entertained at dinner in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower Hotel last night in honor of the Canadian section of the joint economic committees of Canada and the United States. The committee, which is meeting in Washington this week, was organized to speed up the war effort of the two countries by means of a study of their respective resources, and also to minimize economic disorganization at the conclusion of the war.

Heading the list of the Canadian guests of honor was W. A. Mackintosh, chairman of the Canadian section of the joint committee, who is special assistant to the deputy minister of finance of Canada. His fellow-countrymen at the dinner were R. A. C. Henry, economic adviser to the minister of munitions and supply; D. A. Skelton, chief of the research department, Bank of Canada; H. L. Keenleyside, counselor for the department of external affairs, and H. F. Angus, department of external affairs.

From the American section of the committee were Alvin H. Hansen, chairman of the section; William L. Batt, deputy director of production, Office of Production Management; E. Dana Durand, commissioner, United States Tariff Commission; Harry D. White, director of monetary research, Treasury Department, and Leroy D. Stinebower, assistant adviser of international economic affairs, Department of State.

Other guests included Hume Wrong, minister-counselor of the Canadian Legation; Merchant Mahoney, counselor of the Canadian Legation; J. E. Coyne, financial attache of the Canadian Legation; Lauchlin Currie, administrative assistant to the President; John D. Hickerson, assistant chief of the Division of European Affairs, Department of State; E. T. Wailes, Department of State; Walter Gardner, Federal Reserve Board; Frank Southard, assistant director of monetary research, Treasury Department; Carl Goldenberg, Canadian department of munitions and supply; Douglass V. Brown, Office of Production Management, and Charles Kindleberger, Federal Reserve Board.

Mrs. J. W. Stickney And Daughter Visiting Davises

Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis have as their house guests Mrs. J. W. Stickney, of Havana, Cuba, and her daughter, Katherine. Another daughter, Mrs. Boniphan Carroll, of Pittsburgh, and her small son, Bonny, also are staying at the Davis home in Arlington.

Mrs. Stickney and her daughter, who have been here since Sunday, plan to leave Washington next Sunday. Mr. Stickney, who is vice president of the United Railways of Havana, will join his wife and daughter in Washington toward the end of the week. From here they will go on to Detroit, where they will pick up a car.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

ON TRAINS, boats and in hotel rooms from Moscow to Washington, Ann Bridge has been putting the finishing touches to her latest novel. The Wife or Owen O'Malley, until recently British Minister to Hungary, was in Washington over the week-end en route to New York.

Dudley Harmon

"See this fountain pen?" said Mrs. O'Malley, author of "Peking Picnic," "Four Part Setting" and other well-known books. "I bought it in 1925 and have carried it all over the world. Every article and book I've done since then has been written with this platinum nib. Now the pen's beginning to leak a bit, but I've patched it up, for I honestly don't think I'd be able to do any writing without it."

THE O'MALLEYS left Hungary in March and are still en route back to England. In normal times Budapest is only 48 hours from London, but after eight weeks the O'Malleys are still journeying. They went to Moscow and then to Vladivostok, embarking there for Japan. Minister O'Malley and their teen-age daughter will leave for England as soon as they can get transportation, but Mrs. O'Malley plans to linger on here to complete her novel. Then there's the possibility of a lecture tour.

Though Mrs. O'Malley started scribbling at the age of 13, her first book didn't appear until years later. This was the famous "Peking Picnic," which caused a sensation in the diplomatic colony of China, for everybody immediately claimed to recognize the characters as being drawn from real life.

"Even now," says Ann Bridge, "people are constantly coming up to me and saying they've met a Col. Scoggins, or Toggins, who says he was one of the characters in my novel. As a matter of fact, the colonel wasn't even in Pekin when I lived there and I never laid eyes on him. The only true life characters in the book were two sisters. Before writing it I asked if they'd mind being in it, and they were delighted. They used to motor over every day to see how their characters were developing in the manuscript."

THOUGH SHE HAD an American mother from New Orleans, this is Mrs. O'Malley's first visit to the United States. She has just come from the Louisiana city, where she visited several newfound cousins. What strikes her most about America is the friendliness and hospitality.

"In New Orleans I got to talking with a taxi driver who'd seen an interview and picture of me in the paper. When he left me at the door he refused to take his fare money, saying hed be happy to make tht contribution to England."

YOUR REPORTER interviewed Mrs. O'Malley as she sipped her early morning tea in her hotel room the other day. She drinks tea and writes from 7 to 9 every day, then breakfasts and goes on working until lunch time. Her new novel, which she expects to finish in about three weeks, will be called "The Frontier." It is a thriller type of novel and will show war as seen from across a frontier. Mrs. O'Malley got her material at St. Jean de Luz, just across the Spanish border, where she went for safety during the Spanish civil war. Her husband was in Madrid as charge d'affaires of the embassy.

Mrs. O'Malley's American publisher, Ellery Sedgwick, has turned over his home in Beverly, Mass., to her for the duration of her visit. "Do you think it will be cool there?" she asked anxiously. Summer time stays in New Orleans and Washington have made her suspicious of the American climate.

Oelrichs Villa of Gilded Age Goes on Block at Newport

Another chapter in Newport glamour appears to be closed with the sale of Rosecliff, the $2,500,000 estate of the Hermann Oelrichs family. The place and its fabulous appointments are being put on the auction block this week, and the United Service Organizations and the Navy are both reported interested in bidding for the property.

Many well known in Washington are expected to be present at the sale. They include Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, now in residence at Beaulieu, her villa; Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Luce, Countess Laszlo Szechenyi and her daughter, Nandine; Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Commander and Mrs. Charles Lee Andrews, jr., and the Roger Firestones. Stage and screen stars are also expected to attend, including Meyer Davis, who hopes to add to his collection of cloisonne vases; Edward G. Robinson, noted for his collection of art works; Dancers Paul and Grace Hartman, who have entered bids for several terra cotta pieces, and Edward Trevor, the new glamour hero who succeeded Victor Mature in "Lady in the Dark." Bizarre is the fact that representatives of the Moscow Museum of Art are in receipt of catalogues of the estate and are expected to be among the bidders.

Three thousand separate items will be auctioned, ranging from the crystal chandelier in the grand ballroom to the last stick of furniture in the servants' quarters. Featured items will be five seventeenth century Gobelin tapestries, Sevres Bisque groups, Renaissance statuary, Jacobean furniture and cloisonne enamel plaques and figurines.

Rosecliff was built at the turn of the century according to the specifications of the late Mrs. Theresa Oelrichs. Determined to outshine the Astors, the Morgans, the Belmonts and the Fishes, she commissioned Architect Stanford White, who was later murdered by Harry K. Thaw, to create a residential gem for her, regardless of cost. While they were executing her bidding, her agents were ransacking the finest private art and antique collections of Europe for furniture and decorations suitable for the showplace.

When it was completed, it had cost $2,500,000 and, though a villa, rivaled the finest mansions in the world for richness. It was a major contribution to the Gilded Age. Lavish parties such as the $30,000 Bal Blanc, which was conducted under the aegis of Social Arbiter Ward McAllister, made it the most talked-of residence in the country. It was one of the brightest gems in the Newport diadem.

The first floor included the loveliest ballroom in Newport—two stories high with walls and ceilings decorated by hand, antique crystal chandeliers and sconces, and a handsome pipe organ. The villa also had 22 bedrooms with their own private baths, dressing rooms and fireplaces; large reception rooms and salons, libraries with invaluable first editions and art works, and immense dining quarters for grand banquets.

But Mrs. Oelrichs' favorite spot was the court facing the sea. Designed by August Saint-Gaudens, it was patterned in marble after the Petit Trianon in Versailles, which had been ruled over by another great social leader, Marie Antoinette. It is ironic that the sale of the Oelrichs' estate should begin on July 14—Bastille Day!

Chevy Chase Women To Study Auto Routes

By Lucia Giddens

The Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., Thursday will launch a course in map study and experimental motor routing as a feature of its defense program, it was announced yesterday.

The group will figure out how to reach important objectives—such as hospitals and clinics—by the most practical routes for avoidance of traffic congestion and for conservation of gasoline.

Mrs. Harry F. Lowe, a member of the club, will conduct the class which will organize at 10:30 a. m. Thursday at the clubhouse, Connecticut Avenue and Dunlop Street.

Mrs. Lowe, a native of Washington, has become acquainted with motor routes in and around the city by driving a car for ten years.

The class will start by learning the Chevy Chase section, and then will pick out Washington objectives for further routing, Mrs. Lowe said.

Meeting weekly, the class will be stationary for part of the period to discuss assignments made at the previous session. Then the members will form a portable class, filling a little cavalcade of cars to traverse the routes to strategic points.

Mrs. Edgar Fowler, chairman of the club's defense committee, said that considerable advance interest has been shown in the course—as an opportunity to learn one's community better, to stand ready to help with transportation problems in an emergency, and to fit into the schedule of women who have to devote much of their time to homemaking.

Mrs. Fowler has called a meeting of the coordinating committee on defense today at the clubhouse, to plan further projects for the summer.

A news-sheet, to be mailed out every two weeks to members, to inform them about defense courses, is in prospect, Mrs. Fowler said.

Women Voters To Hear OPM Aide at Rally

Stacy May, chief of the Bureau of Research and Statistics of the Office of Production Management, will take part in the panel discussion at the District League of Women Voters defense rally at 8 p. m. tomorrow at Palisades Park auditorium, it was announced yesterday.

Others who will discuss defense and morale will be Richard L. Stokes, Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and three league members, Anne Hartwell Johnstone, former program chairman of the National League; Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. C. S. Duncan.

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, will give the keynote speech. Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president of the District League, will preside.

The rally was planned as a part of the league's national campaign for the "Battle of Production" to stress the individual citizen's responsibility in the emergency. The league's statement of the problem was: "For a war, people naturally unite. For a miracle of production, the battle our country has chosen to fight, they do not naturally unite. Therefore the league will work to create unity and loyalty as war creates them, and to make production understood as something fraught with fate as war itself would be."

Altrusans Visit Capital Today

The local Altrusa Club will be hostess today to several dozen fellow-members of the international organization, coming here from the convention in Roanoke, Va.

A tea from 4 to 6 p. m. at the Dodge Hotel will climax a day of sightseeing for the visitors, mostly from the Middle and Far West.

Miss Olga Steig, president of the local club; Mrs. Arvilla Merrill, vice president; Miss Helen Harrington, secretary, and Miss Ruth Cornman, treasurer, will receive the guests.

A group of club members will accompany the visitors to Arlington and Mount Vernon this morning, and to the Capitol and the National Gallery of Art in the afternoon.

Among local members who attended the convention were Mrs. Merrill, Miss Cornman, Miss Bertha Neinburg, Miss Hester Hood, and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist.

Pilot Club to Hear Convention Report

Miss Helen Hoffman, governor of the Eleventh District of the International Pilot Clubs, will give a report on the national convention held recently in Houston, Tex., at a dinner meeting of the local club at 6 o'clock tonight at the Silver Bowl. Miss Hoffman was formerly president of the local club.

Mrs. Ina Russell Stacy, first vice president, will preside at the business meeting.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

Leaders in the movement for a children's museum here have an eye on an "elegant stable" which they hope to borrow for headquarters, in time for a fall opening.

Miss Matilda Young, secretary of the Children's Museum and sister of Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, jr., says that gifts already range from sound movies on Chile and snapping turtles—to a peacock's egg wrapped in cotton batting.

The gifts have practically overflowed the storage space which was given in the home of museum enthusiast. An album of 20 dramatic recordings on the growth of America and books on costumes, with many color plates, are included among the gifts already in hand. And many more items have been promised as soon as the museum has a home, Miss Young said.

Miss Young, who was formerly Washington representative of the Children's Theater of New York, had her enthusiasm for children's museums considerably heightened after a visit to the pioneer one in Brooklyn. Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury and Miss Portia Oberly were among the others in the initiating group which decided that Washington had waited long enough for a children's museum.

Now plans have advanced enough for visualization of an opening in October and November. Funds are being raised by memberships.

The stable, which the group hopes to get, was built in "the heyday of horses" in Washington and is a spacious building two stories high, Miss Young said.

Huston Thompson is chairman of the movement, with Slocum Kingsbury as treasurer.

The organizing committee includes Mrs. Lyle Campbell, Mrs. Kingsbury, Mrs. La Follette, Miss Oberly and Mrs. Thompson.

Sponsors include Mrs. Cordell Hull, Representative Frances P. Bolton (Republican), of Ohio; Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Vail Coleman, Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Senator and Mrs. La Follette, Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Charles Seymour, jr., Mrs. Corrin Strong, Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Mrs. Charles McNary, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Willard Boyd, Miss Mary Winslow, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Gen. and Mrs. Henry Clay Newcomer and Mrs. J. L. Hougheling.

Aluminum Shower Held in Chevy Chase

An aluminum shower, the results to be turned over to the Office of Civilian Defense, was held by the Woman's Democratic Club of Leland, Chevy Chase, Md., last night.

Mrs. Philip J. Fischer, president of the club for the last five years, conducted the meeting at her home, 510 Ridge Street. She appointed the following committee to nominate new officers, whose terms will begin in September: Mrs. Carl Plitt, Mrs. Clayton Langer, Mrs. Francis Gray, Mrs. James Knapp and Mrs. Archibald Smith.

Five to Select Catholic Centers Of Recreation

Five women have been appointed secretaries to survey industrial defense areas to determine the location of National Catholic Community Service recreation centers, it was announced at national headquarters here yesterday by Miss Anne Sarachon Hooley, diretcor of the women's division.

Miss Anna Rose Kimpel, who has served as field secretary for Youth of the National Council of Catholic Women, Washington, was named field research secretary in connection with the defense survey. She has been activities secretary of the National Catholic Community House, Toledo, and national president of Theta Phi Alpha, national social sorority for Catholic students in secular colleges and universities.

Other new field research secretaries are Miss Frances Engel, Miss Weltha Kelley, Miss Rita Fleming, Miss Grace Keefe.

Miss Helen Potter, of West Lafayette, Ind., was appointed field resource secretary. Among her previous posts was that of social economist in the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington. She has served also as field worker for Consumers League of New York, business and industrial girls' secretary and director of adult education, Y. W. C. A., Hamilton, Ohio, and instructor of economics, Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., and Western College, Oxford, Ohio.

Miss Engel has been director of the Volunteer Bureau of Buffalo Catholic Charities and was instrumental in establishing the Buffalo Labor School.

Miss Kelley has been assistant director of St. Louis University's Social Service School. She has also served as case supervisor in the Buffalo Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Miss Fleming has had social work experience in Philadelphia and in New York, having been supervisor of intake at New York City Catholic Charities.

Miss Keefe's experience includes physical education teaching in Washington and New York City, community recreation work in Springfield, Mass., Edgewater, N. J., and Brooklyn, N. Y.

The National Catholic Community Service is cooperating with the United Service Organizations in planning welfare and recreational facilities for service men and defense industrial workers.

Miss Fassett Gives Piano Concert At A. A. U. W. Tea

Miss Christine Fassett, teacher at Woodrow Wilson High School and member of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University women, played piano selections yesterday at the club tea, on a program which was one in a series of musical entertainments to follow the Monday teas throughout the summer.

Miss Dorothy Cook, soprano of the Calvary Baptist Church choir, sang, accompanied at the piano by Miss Fassett, who also played with William N. Petterson, jr., violinist, in his program.

Mrs. Hugh M. Adams was hostess, assisted by Mrs. E. Northrup Read and Mrs. George T. Fillius. Mrs. Maris M. Proffitt, chairman of the hospitality committee, is assisted by Mrs. Agnes Nelson Arnold in planning the programs.

Good Pitching Arm Essential To Java Bride

Soekaboemi, Java (AP).—The marrying month has arrived again in Java, and all over the flowery island pretty little July brides are tuning up their pitching arms.

Down here below the Equator, it's important for a girl to be able to throw 'em fast and straight—straight at the bridegroom.

Here's what happens at an Indonesian wedding:

The marriage has been arranged by the parents. Boy may have met girl, since the native villages are very small, but neither has had much to say about choice of mates.

Reversing Western procedure, the bride is at the altar first. Together with the relatives and guests, she stands facing the doorway. There, waiting on top a large, flat rock, is a handsome duck egg.

The bridegroom arrives. He slips off his sandals, steps up on the rock, and, in crossing the threshold, crushes the egg with his bare foot. It squidges in between his toes, and sometimes splatters all over his legs. The bride hurries to his side with a cloth, kneels and carefully removes all the egg stains.

This has a double meaning—fertility and wifely obedience. But her turn is coming.

After the orthodox religious rites (usually Mohammedan), the couple turn their backs to each other, like duelists, and march to the opposite ends of the room. There, each is given three missiles—betel nut leaves rolled into hard little pellets.

This is the bride's big moment. The guests are tense with excitement. At a given signal, bride and bridegroom start throwing the leaf-balls at each other.

The bridegroom winds up and lets go a fast one right down the groove. If his beloved has been well instructed by the older women, she ducks and fires at the same time, trying to hit him while he is off-balance. The native girl usually is just as athletic as the boy, so she is at no disadvantage in this battle.

Before the ammunition is all gone, one of them has been hit, and, in the native view, it means that the other party will be boss of the house.

Furnace Oil Hearing Here Set Tomorrow

Fuel oil for home and commercial heating plants was added yesterday to the District's gasoline conservation program and a public hearing on the question has been called for 2 p. m. tomorrow at the new Municipal Center Building.

At the request of Federal Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes, steps to seek voluntary curtailment of fuel oil were ordered by Maj. Beverly C. Snow, assistant Engineer Commissioner and head of the local petroleum conservation group.

Maj. Snow instructed Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, chairman of a program subcommittee, to hold the hearing. "Oil dealers, distributors and other interested persons have been invited to attend the meeting in the Police Department's squad room.

Suggestions offered will be submitted by Van Duzer to the full committee and recommendations will then be made to the Commissioners, Maj. Snow announced.

Owners of heating plants, said Maj. Snow, will be asked to see that their furnaces are adjusted properly for minimum consumption of fuel and to take other steps necessary to hold down usage.

Meanwhile, six more motorists were cited over the weekend by Park Police for excessive burning of fuel and were ordered to appear at one of the city's automobile test stations for inspection.

Exhibitors Now Will Peep Before They Risk a Leap

THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH, giving way to the new "Consent Decree" system of booking. Which is to say, as Miss Louella O. Parsons said yesterday, that the Hollywood columnists, commentators and critics no longer will get first crack at the new films weeks, and sometimes months, before they are released to the motion picture exhibitors of the country and through them to the public.

PAUL LUKAS

Under the new system, which supplants the old method of block booking of a studio's entire yearly product in one lump—so long the bone of bitter contention in the industry—the exhibitors, who actually have to market the pictures and collect at the box office, will be the first to see them—in groups of five prospective releases at a time. After they have spent all summer viewing films and making up their minds, they will buy such of the celluloids as strike their fancy and, as nearly as they can judge, their public's.

The new method gets under way this week, and the first of the 32 key cities, where the producers maintain territorial film exchanges, to try it out will be Washington. The first company to put on its own show this week, without benefit of critics, will be RKO-Radio. When they have corraled all the exhibitors in the Washington territory, R. J. Folliard, Washington manager for RKO-Radio, will squirt Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane," "Father Takes a Wife," costarring Adolphe Menjou and Gloria Swanson; William Dieterle's "Here Is a Man," from Stephen Vincent Benet's famous story of "The Devil and Daniel Webster"; a new aerial drama, "Parachute Battalion," built around Uncle Sam's new sky soldiers, and "Lady Scarface," starring Judith Anderson, onto the screen to facilitate the exhibitors' difficulty in hitting the bull's-eye of mass preference.

All of the other major producing companies will pursue the same course until the boys and girls operating the theaters have seen everything they will be asked to buy for 1941-42. How it will work remains to be seen. But that is what they wanted and that is what they got.

There is still time for the youth of Washington of both genders, between the ages of 16 and 19, to try out for "Young Man's Fancy," the new musical comedy soon to be produced by George Abbott. Auditions for singing and dancing roles are being held in the rehearsal hall of the Earle Theater by Hugh Martin and Ralph Blane, of "The Martins," singing quartet now featured in the Earle's stage revue. For an appointment to be heard, it is only necessary to call RE. 0800 and make a date. Tryouts will be continued up to and including Thursday of this week only.

That Song Is Catching On

As we prophesied recently over the air on one of Kay Norman's "Previews and Reviews" broadcasts, the new patriotic song, "Wave That Flag, America," is going places. Fred Waring has asked for Sam Jack Kaufman's orchestration to make his own arrangement for the Pennsylvanians, and Gene Buck, president of ASCAP, is seeking a copy for professional publication.

The history of the tune is interesting. When the National Press Club decided on May 10 that it needed an original patriotic number for its spring minstrel show, Howard Acton sat down at his piano one evening and fingered out the melody. Within 36 hours Phelps Adams had fitted it with lyrics. Bill Coyle then was auditioned and scored a hit with it in the minstrel show. Carter Barron grabbed it for a stage finale that ran two weeks at Loew's Capitol and New York began to take notice. In the meantime Mrs. Roosevelt had selected the song as the inspirational number for a White House party to the Fourth Estate, it was chosen as the graduation song for Jefferson Junior High School, selected for a patriotic interlude at the annual meeting of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, sung for the members of the Police Boys Club, and put on in so many spots, as a matter of fact, that Bill Coyle practically wore himself down to nothing racing around town to sing it.

Surprise! Surprise! At the Little

The Little Theater is uncorking another of its surprise, public previews tonight, immediately following the final presentation of the "Chaplin Film Festival," when Washington picturegoers will have their first peek at "Mutiny on the Elsinore," a Jack London masterpiece filmed in England. The star of the picture is Paul Lukas, now making Broadway history with the finest performance of the year in Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine." Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!

Hollywood, Calif., July 14. Max Milder, Warners' English representative, who Clippership over for two weeks, is wildly enthusiastic over "The Prime Minister" they made over there with John Gielgud playing Disraeli and Diana Wynward his wife.

BING CROSBY

Owing to the constant blitz, they were 14 weeks completing it. He says every member of the studio, after putting in long hours on pictures, goes out and does night service for his country, either as telephone operator, fire warden, nurse, secretary, or anything to help.

He's going back to do the life of Winston Churchill. Hasn't signed him yet, but hopes to get Robert Morley for the role. They were afraid to release "The Fighting 69th," so put it on the shelf for a year. Finally decided to take a chance, and it broke all records for six days. Theater was blitzed on the seventh.

Roz Russell says the first person she'll tell when she does intend to get married will be her own mother. There'll be no mystery about it. "When I get the license, they can photograph me from any angle, and mine will be a church wedding."

Bing Crosby finds himself behind the eight ball, put there by none other than Crosby. Seems he asked for and received a long radio vacation. They hired Don Ameche for his spot. Now Bing's Del Mar race track doesn't open 'til August and he finds time hanging heavy on his hands, and wants to sing the three remaining weeks in July.

If cows have a sense of humor, Jack Oakie certainly got a cow laugh yesterday when he dressed up in a suit that would have shamed Gene Autry, Tom Mix and Leo Carrillo. Oakie welcomed five cows on his new farm.

I don't know whether you know it or not, but Buddy Rogers' fans have remained loyal through it all, and they're writing letters to RKO demanding better parts for him. They don't want him to grow up, and are they singing that old song, "Stay as Sweet as You Are!"

Bianca Holmes' horoscope of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor was so enchanting they've invited her to the Bahamas to visit them. A national magazine offered a heap of cash for a copy, which she's turned down . . . Incidentally, her chart of Babs Hutton, made over a year ago, predicted no marriage with Cary Grant. Twould seem she's right, 'cause he's again dating Phyllis Brooks.

Hailed as One of Screen's Most Promising Starlets

formerly songstress with a "name" band, is being acclaimed on all sides as one of the future stars of the cinema. Justification for this enthusiasm is said to be most eloquently expressed by the quality of her work opposite Gary Cooper in the Warner Brothers production of "Sergeant York," to be given its Washington premiere later this month

"—Tails, You Lose!"

New York, July 14.

REALTY DEPT.: The stepfather of the late Phil Plant once wanted to purchase a rare pearl necklace for his wife's birthday. Cartier, the Paris jeweler, owned such a necklace, but wanted $1,200,000 for it . . . "Let's toss a coin" was the proposal made to Cartier. "If it turns up heads, then I'll pay you the sum you're asking, in cash. But if it turns up tails, then I'll only give you, in return for that necklace, my town house at Fifty-second Street and Fifth Avenue . . . The coin was tossed, and it turned up tails. Cartier received the house in which the famous jewelry establishment he founded now operates. The value of that property has leaped into the millions . . The pearl necklace is now valued at less than one-fourth its original valuation.

VICTOR MATURE

POLITICS: Recently, Oren Root, jr., who organized the Willkie clubs last year, sent letters to the 14,000 people who had contributed to the clubs' campaigns. The letters informed that 7 per cent of the total contributions still remained in the treasury. Root offered to return this unexpended money to them—or, if they preferred, to use that money for the future work of the Willkie clubs. The response was a forthright disapproval of the Old Guard insistence that Willkie's leadership in the Republican Party had disintegrated because of the support of the President in the current crisis . . . For all, but 175, of these 14,000 replied: "Keep the money for the future work of the Willkie clubs.". And the funds returned to those 175 were more than compensated for by additional contributions sent by 167 others.

BOOK DEPT.: In 1932 Edward Trevor worked his way through Prof. Baker's drama workshop at Yale by illustrating a book about Simon Bolivar, called "Dauntless Liberator," written by John Crane and Phyllis Marshall. Trevor then came to Broadway and recently substituted for Victor Mature in "Lady in the Dark" . . . M. G. M. now has purchased the movie rights to that Bolivar book, and John Crane is on his way to Hollywood to help in the adaptation.. And Trevor, who once had drawn the illustrations for that book, is going to Hollywood to be screen-tested for a role in that picture.

MUSIC DEPT.: Groucho Marx was shooting pool at his home with Harry Kurnitz, the M-G-M screen writer. In an adjoining room someone began to play the piano—badly . . . Groucho cocked an appreciative ear, and then shouted: "Who is that—Horowitz?" . . . "Do you really think that sounds like Vladimir Horowitz?" asked the amazed Kurnitz . . . "I didn't mean Horowitz, the pianist," said Groucho. "I mean Horowitz—who runs the delicatessen on Labrea Avenue."

LOCAL NEWS: Floyd Odlum, the head of Atlas Corporation, may be called to Washington soon—to become alien property custodian . . . Henri Torres, the Paris lawyer who defended Herschel Grynspan, has finished his book about Laval.. He's in New York., writing his next book, about Petain, Darlan and Weygand . . . A special dinner party is being given for the ailing Chick Endor, of Endor & Farrell, at Toots Shor's tavern Wednesday night . . . The "Sergt. York' 'electric sign has 15,000 lights in it—which is ten times as many lights used in all the homes in Sergt. York's native valley of the Three Forks, in Tennessee . . . Alexander Woolcott will broadcast on the "Millions for Defense" program . . . A movement soon will be started making the study of American History compulsory at all colleges.

'Insured at Lloyd's' Drives Roadsiders Saltwater Daffy

By Richard L. Coe

Ring out the cowbells, dance in the glen
At Roadside the're hissing the villain again;
Virtue triumphs o'er treachery bald
—There's also a song by Miss Osterwald!

Yes, good news about the Roadsiders this morning. "Insured at Lloyd's" or "Perils of the Sea" is a laughable tear-jerker and Bibby Osterwald has a jolly, jolly entr'acte chanson, "Yankee Doodle Girl." For the hiss-that-leering-man clique, the Roadside will be a happy place to abide the next two weeks.

That abide business slips neatly into a report on this 2-ton "Melo" of the 1860's. "Insured at Lloyd's" seems to be a drama by T. A. Palmer based on English blockade running during the American Civil War. It seems, too, to have dozens of dastardly villains or varying shades of moral laxity, not the least of which is Rose, "a girl with ambitions above her station."

But Mr. Palmer was a playwright to bring his characters back alive. If you think that bloody scene in the teeming hold of the ship puts finis to several of the more exemplary persons of our story, wait 'till the third act when earth-crushed truth rises again in all her glory!

There are some top-notch pieces of Roadside melo-acting in "Insured at Lloyd's." The inimitable Milton Freedman is back to play a darksome villain and he leers and releers more than ever like a demon possessed. Then the invaluable Betty Gray is back on the red barn stage to play an orphan "with a heart of gold."

Dick Sykes is the stalwart fellow who braves the unknown deep for his undeserving sweetheart and a right well-spoken hero he is, too, reeling off a final speech originally uttered in the 60's by a member of Parliament. Theodore Tiller 2d is broadly funny as "a rover never meant for the sea," a comic of assurance and verve. Abraham Knox shows proof of versatility in his handling of a semi-demi-rogue.

Abetting Miss Gray on the distaff side are the serene Edna Evans and the volatile Miss Osterwald. Bernice Isaacson is the sorrow-notted mother. They're all royally amusing. Jack Salamanca, Ralf Nicholson, James McKechnie, Charles Johnson and John Ferguson complete the cast. Henry C. Pearson's sets are particularly amusing, with special gasps for the sea water he sends trickling into the doomed hold. And Ralph S. Fowler's direction is shrewdly effective.

But even should you be unmoved by what happens to the fiends who strive to rob the great insurance firm of a pirate king's ransom, you'll be cheering your lungs out for Miss Osterwald's stylish rendering of "Yankee Doodle Girl," assisted enormously, and not without effort, by that trio of dead-panners, Messrs. McKechnie, Tiller and Sykes. It's respectfully patriotic and a lot of fun as well. And to the piano's ever-busy Florence Small a special bow all on her own.

Yes, there's a lot of fun to be had in joining the Roadsiders in their red, white and blue salt-water daffy.

Feeding Greece Is Hard Task For Italians

By Allen Raymond

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, July 14.—One of the most difficult jobs which Italy has confronted since the start of the war will be the feeding of that part of Greece which is now occupied by Italian troops, according to American consular officials from Athens who arrived in Rome today to entrain with American consular officials in Italy for Lisbon tomorrow.

Greece, the arriving officials said, is on the verge of starvation.

Benito Mussolini, in his address on June 10, commemorating the first anniversary of Italy's participation in the war, warned his compatriots that Italy's food problem, which was then already a minor irritation if not in a critical situation, would be intensified by the need to help feed conquered Greece.

"We will try to alleviate as far as possible," Mussolini said, "the misery inflicted on the Greek people by rulers bound to London, remembering that Greece is entering into the vital Mediterranean space of Italy."

Nazis Like Locusts

Alleviation of the misery of the Greeks, according to the American consular officials who have arrived in Rome, will be quite a job. As long as the sea lanes were open, Greece got wheat for bread, and sometimes even a little canned meat, from Australia. During the British expeditionary force's stay in Greece, the food which arrived was not only ample for that force but helped to supply a civilian population which has sent practically all its available man power into the army to fight the Italians.

After the Germans arrived, according to the American officials, the Nazis ate heartily, and remembering their folks back home, and being plentifully supplied with what passed for money as between conquerors and conquered, they bought what they couldn't eat.

Today, according to the American consular officials, Greece is as stripped of food as if a horde of locusts had worked across it inch by inch.

Italy has undertaken the job of policing a people which, according to the American officials, has gone in for sabotage in a big way. Italy is not alone in the policing job. Units of the German armed forces have remained there and today, the American officials believe, there is about one German to each three Italians in supervisory functions. In Athens the Italians take care of the traffic.

Collapse in Streets

Greece used to export tobacco as one of its main crops. Today, it is reported here, persons have to stand in line for hours to obtain four or five cigarettes. Olives and olive oil were normally exported from Greece. Before the American consular officials left, they could buy neither. Here and there in the streets, from time to time, they said, they could see people collapsing from hunger, or from lack of resistance to other ailments, far more frequently than they can see them here. To these Americans who have come from Athens, Rome is like a city untouched by war, with food plentiful, since they can pay the prices.

News from Athens now, they said, is in the hands of two governmental agencies, German and Italian. Under conduct of governmental propaganda agencies, a small group of American newspaper correspondents from Germany have been taken on 24-hour tour of Athens.

From the governmental news agencies the following paragraph appeared today in the Rome newspapers under the headline, "Gratitude in Greece for Italian Interest in Food Problems."

"The press at Athens is lashing out against speculators and hoarders of foods of prime necessity and against those persons who traffic clandestinely in these products. The newspapers take note of the thankfulness expressed by the metropolitan of Athens for the lively Italian interest in the food problem of the country."

Britain Refuses To Release Nazi

By International News Service

London, July 14.—Britain was revealed tonight to have rejected a German proposal, made through the United States, to exchange a mysterious "Herr X," now a prisoner in England, for Sir Lancelot Oliphant, British diplomat held in Germany.

The identity of "Herr X" was kept a deep secret, but he is not believed to be former Deputy Party Leader Rudolph Hess, who landed in Scotland by parachute May 10 and has been confined ever since.

Months before the arrival of Hess the German government through the United States Embassy in Berlin launched negotiations for the exchange of "Herr X" for Sir Lancelot, who was appointed deputy foreign secretary of Britain in 1936.

Oliphant was captured by Germans when he followed the Belgian government into France on May 18, 1940. When last seen by his comrades he was shouting "Long Live England" as a Nazi plane crashed in a nearby field.

FINE FOR KIDNEY AND BLADDER WEAKNESS

Stop Getting Up Nights—Feel Younger or Money Back

Keep your blood more free from waste matter, poisons and acid by putting more activity into kidneys and bladder, and you should live a healthier, happier life.

One efficient, harmless way to do this is to get from your druggist a 35 cent box of Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules and take them as directed—the prompt results should delight you or your money back.

Besides getting up nights, these symptoms of kidney trouble may be backache, rheumatic pains, puffy eyes.

Don't be an EASY MARK and accept a substitute—Get Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules—the original—the genuine. Look for the Gold Medal on the box—35 cents.

Flood Complaints Heard by Council At Takoma Park

The controversy growing out of the proposed draining system in Takoma Park, Md., flared anew last night at the monthly meeting of the mayor and town council.

Several residents complained bitterly about damage done to their property in the recent storm on Dogwood, Willow, Allegheny and Spring Avenues.

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, said he had written to the Maryland Health Department for aid but was told the State had no authority to act. He said he was advised to ask aid of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and in the event that was unavailing, to employ a civil engineer.

The council approved a new subdivision to be known as Hampshire Knolls on the Beale tract property. It is planned to build 85 houses there.

Col. Thompson's Burial Tomorrow

Funeral services for Col. Edgar Hall Thompson, 56, of the Coast Artillery Corps, U. S. Army, who died yesterday at 5:30 a. m., will be held at his home, 1609 Buchanan Street Northwest at 1 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will follow at Arlington Cemetery. Col. Thompson had been ill for more than a year.

His survivors include his wife, Mrs. Elsie Brock Thompson; a daughter, Mrs. J. Lanier Jordan, who is residing in Chester Heights, Pa., and two sons, Paul Brock Thompson and Capt. Edgar Hall Thompson, jr., of the U. S. Army.

In the World War, Col. Thompson served one and a half years in France as a member of the Fifty-ninth Artillery Regiment. He was a member of the Elks Lodge, of Newark, N. J., and a Mason.

Col. Thompson was graduated from Harvard in 1907; later he received a masters degree from Columbia University. After a few years Army service, he was graduated from the Command General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Cyrus Kehr, Patent Lawyer, Is Dead at 85

Cyrus Kehr, 85, patent lawyer, who was a pioneer in municipal, regional and national planning, died yesterday. His residence was at 1423 Allison Street.

Mr. Kehr, senior partner in the patent law firm of Cyrus Kehr & Swecker, was widely known for his activities in civic projects here and in other cities. He was author of a book on planning entitled "A Nation Plan, a Basis for the Coordinated Physical Development of the United States, with a Suggestion for a World Plan."

Funeral services will be conducted at 10 a. m. tomorrow (Wednesday) at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteeth Street Northwest. Buiral will be at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Born in Log Cabin

He was born March 30, 1856, in a one-room log cabin near Goshen, Ind. At the age of 9 he was taken by his family to a farm on the prairie near Sterling, Ill. He was educated in Illinois schools, at Knox College and Cornell College, Iowa, and began his law practice in Sterling. In 1886 he set up his own practice in Chicago. That year he married Miss Anna M. Witmer, of Sterling, who died in 1924.

Active in the civic affairs of Winnetka, a town north of Chicago, Mr. Kehr was president of the community's first board of education.

He moved his family to Knoxville, Tenn., in 1899 and was widely known as the only patent lawyer in that region for 20 years. Interested in good roads he served as president of the Tennessee Highway Association. He moved to Washington in 1920, where he continued his patent law practice until he was 80.

Belonged to Masons

Among the planning organizations in which he held memberships were the national conference on city planning, the International Garden Cities and Town Planning Federation, the American Civic Association, the American Association of Port Authorities, and the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

He was a member of the Cosmos Club in Washington since 1928. He received the thirty-second degree of Scottish Rite of Freemasonry in the Tennessee Consistory in 1908. He was a charter member of Albert Pike Blue Dodge, No. 36, and was affiliated with Albert Pike Consistory, both in Washington. He was an active member of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

He leaves three daughters, Dr. Marguerite W. Kehr, of Bloomsburg, Pa.; Mrs. Florence Kehr Ioannou and Miss Elizabeth M. Kehr, of Washington, and a son, Raymond W. Kehr, of Washington.

Burial Tomorrow In Arlington For Maj. Washburn

Funeral services for Maj. Slater Washburn, 45, United States Marine Corps Reserve, will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at Fort Myer Chapel, with his uncle, the Rev. Henry D. Washburn, officiating. Capt. R. D. Workman, U. S. N. Chaplain Corps, will assist.

On active duty here since last September, Maj. Washburn served as assistant to the Director of the Marine Corps Reserves. He also had been on duty in Washington in 1939, shortly after being appointed a major. He served as assistant to the commander of the First Reserve District in Boston from 1939 to 1940 and as a member of the Joint Army and Navy Selective Service Committee. He was born in Providence, R. I., and was graduated from Harvard University.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Lylla J. Washburn, 1911 R Street Northwest.

Funeral Services Today for Father Of Mrs. Randolph

Funeral services for Frank H. Babb, 67, father of Mrs. Jennings Randolph, wife of the chairman of the House District Committee, will be held at 2 p. m. today at his Keyser, W. Va., home.

A frequent visitor to Washington, Mr. Babb died Sunday at University Hospital, Baltimore, after an illness of one week. He served as vice president of the board of governors of the University of West Virginia, from which he was graduated, and as mayor of Keyser for several terms.

At the time of his death he was a leading figure in Keyser business and real estate affairs. Besides his daughter, he leaves his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Babb; a son, Arnold, a Tennessee Valley Authority engineer; a sister, Mrs. Walter Scherr, of Cincinnati, and four grandchildren.

Mrs. McCumber, Senator's Widow, Dies Here at 75

Mrs. Jennie M. McCumber, 75, widow of Senator Porter J. McCumber, of North Dakota, died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harrison Brand, jr., 3231 Woodland Drive Northwest. She had been ill for several months.

Mrs. McCumber spent her early life in Ulm and Rochester, Minn. She married Mr. McCumber in 1889. They made their home in North Dakota until 1899, when Mr. McCumber was elected to the Senate, serving until 1923.

Surviving, besides her daughter, are a son, Donald R. McCumber, and a grandson, Harrison Brand 3d, both of Washington. Funeral services will be held Wednesday at the home.

New Zealanders Lost In Greece Replaced

Copyright by New York Times

Wellington, New Zealand, July 14.—Growth of the empire's military power is seen in the fact that the New Zealand Expeditionary Force, which lost a third of the men sent to Greece and Crete, according to official disclosures, is now at full strength again and is receiving fresh training.

It is also reported that the heavy equipment lost in Greece has been largely replaced.

Virginia Wheat Growers Protest Penalty for Excess Grain

Special Dispatch to The Post

Harrisonburg, Va., July 14.—Rockingham wheat growers—at least a group of them—are literally up in arms over the workings of the wheat-marketing quota laws under which they have to pay a penalty for their excess grain before they can obtain a card to sell their product.

A meeting of 300 protestants here several nights ago named a committee to call upon Secrtary of Agriculture Wickard at Washington and asked that the regulations be amended. Senator Harry Flood Byrd will be asked to arrange for the conference.

Aside from the payment of the penalty for the excess, one of the chief complaints is that the farmer cannot feed his excess grain to his own stock. Other complaints deem the referendum as unfair and that the law should not have been made retroactive to this year's crop.

Chairman Joseph Pence, of Port Republic, has petitions bearing the names of 550 farmers which will be presented the Secretary of Agriculture. This number will be augmented by several hundred from Augusta County. Mr. Pence said the farmers are more aroused over the workings of this law than anything in years.

Considerable feeling is said to exist against the members of the local committee, which issues the marketing cards, but Pence advised the rally that the local officials are merely carrying out the law.

County Agent S. M. Cox has stated that the protestants represent a compartively few of the 1,800 enrolled in the AAA program in Rockingham and that the average excess, including those who did not sign in the program, will not be over 5 acres. Under the law, the farmer must pay 49 cents per bushel for his excess grain before he can market his grain at the price prevailing, which now is $1.10 a bushel. The program advocates point out that wheat would be selling close to 50 cents a bushel were it not for the AAA program.

Prince Georges St. Wins Lottery, Will Be Paved

Edmonston, Md., town officials last night designated Prince Georges Street as the lucky thoroughfare that will be paved this year after a 10-year-old boy had pulled the name of the street from a hat at a public "street paving lottery."

The drawing was made by Buddy Brown, son of Cliff Brown, 103 Wells Street. He reached into a hat containing 20 street names and drew out one.

William F. Carr Dies in Alexandria

William F. Carr died late Sunday at his residence, 1119 Duke Street, Alexandria. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Agnes Proctor Carr; two daughters, Mrs. James A. Brown and Mrs. James A. Wingfield; three sons, Franklin L., William H. and Malcolm P. Carr, and one brother, Enos L. Carr, all of Alexandria.

He was an active member of the Potomac Lodge, No. 38, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Fraternal Order of Americans.

His funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence, with burial in St. Paul's Cemetery.

Road Denounced As 'Death-Trap'

Laurel, Md., July 14 (AP).—Addressing a meeting of the Independent Order of Good Templars at Highland, Theodore R. McKeldin, Baltimore attorney, asserted tonight that talk of a new Baltimore-Washington highway should cease and action begin.

"This road (present Washington Boulevard) now is and always has been a death trap," McKeldin declared. "It was obsolete before it was completed.

"When we consider the millions of dollars that have been spent on Maryland roads, we should certainly have a decent highway between Baltimore and the Nation's Capital, instead of this treacherous and antiquated thoroughfare.

"We have been talking a lot about correcting this situation," the attorney continued, "by construction of a new road between Baltimore and Washington. As yet we have done nothing but talk.

"The time has come when a new Washington Boulevard should be constructed. Talk should cease—action should begin."

James S. Vawter presided.

Stephen Maury Rites Are Held In Albemarle

Charlottesville, Va., July 14.—Stephen Price Maury, 90, a cousin of Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury and a former engineer with the English and later the American Navy, died yesterday at his home here.

Funeral services were held at 4:30 p. m. today with burial in the family plot at Piedmont, the old family home in Albemarle County.

Maury was born October 1, 1850, at Piedmont. He was the son of Lucy Jane Price and Jesse Lewis Maury and the great-grandson of Dr. Thomas Walker, of Albemarle County, the explorer of Kentucky, and the Rev. James Maury, teacher of three Presidents—Jefferson, Madison and Monroe.

Commodore Maury, "pathfinder of the seas," procured for his cousin a commission as ship's engineer in the British navy. Later he became city engineer at San Antonio, Tex., where he married Elizabeth Stribling, daughter of Judge Thomas H. Stribling, of San Antonio. A few years ago, after various engineering commissions in Philadelphia and other places, he returned to Charlottesville and lived in retirement at the family estate.

He is survived by the following children: Mrs. Frederic Lendrum Tice, of Roanoke; Mrs. Fontaine Maury Thraves, of Virginia Beach; Mrs. Ralph Smith, of Dallas; Eleanor Maury, of San Antonio; Mrs. Lola Maury Gravely and Col. Lewis Alexander Maury, of Kentucky.

Bumper Crops In Prospect For Defense

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

The rains came for Uncle Sam when needed most.

Probably thousands of new automobiles, washing machines, new Sunday suits and tickets for the movies will be bought, especially in the North Central States, informally described now as a "Garden of Eden" since so much rain came.

Reports from there and elsewhere indicate that 1941, if present favorable growing conditions continue, should be a year of record crop production, such required by the defense program and the Government's citizen nutrition program.

The year's wheat crop has been estimated by the Agriculture Marketing Service at 923,600,000 bushels, more than 100,000,000 bushels above last year, ranking the crop as the fifth largest produced. Yield of wheat per acre was expected to average 16.3 bushels, "a yield which has been exceeded only twice in 75 years," the report commented.

"Gamblers" Hit This Year

So unpredictable is the one important element—rain—that farming in the Dakotas and Nebraska, particularly, is called a gambler's game. But this year the gamblers hit.

In South Dakota farmers got an average of .8 inch more rain than normal last month. In North Dakota the average was about the same. In Nebraska, the average was more than an inch above normal.

Corn was expected to show the best yield since 1920, the crop being estimated at 2,549,000,000 bushels. Oats and barley, the report showed, promise good yields. Indicated crops are 1,212,800,000 bushels of oats and 338,400,000 bushels of barley. Hay crops are short in the Northeast and in Virginia and Tennessee, but heavy from central Ohio westward and total tonnage should be nearly as great as a year ago if it can all be harvested, the report disclosed.

North and South Dakota, which have the notorious weather ups and downs, are bristling with spring wheat. Production in the former State in 1940 totaled 69,972,000 bushels, while 87,346,000 bushels are indicated for this year. South Dakota's total in 1940 was 18,851,000 bushels while 25,875,000 are in prospect now.

Hens Busy, Too

Spring wheat in Montana, another area with frequent weather troubles, dropped this year from the 1940 total of 36,950,000 to 35,322,000. Only its average amount of rain has fallen. There was indicated, however, a wide gain, possibly of 8,000,000 bushels, in winter wheat.

The hens have worked hard for national defense, the report showed. On the basis of eggs produced per 100 layers at the start of this month, the far-flung henhouse situation is: Maine, 1940 55.9, 1941 56.5; Georgia, 1940 39.2, 1941 40.5; Virginia, 1940 42.8, 1941 43.8; Maryland, 1940 44.3, 1941 44.6; North Dakota, 1940 47.6, 1941 48.2; South Dakota, 1940 46.4, 1941 46.9; Oregon, 1940 51.3, 1941 52.8. The Vermont fowls swung in behind the Democratic nutrition campaign by raising their output from 56.5 to 57.6.

Informal opinion yesterday of the Agriculture Department and the Maryland University Agricultural Extension Service was that all this might be pretty disturbing to Eastern and Western farmers if the times were normal. The times aren't. Demands on foodstuffs in America and abroad were expected to offset any possible surpluses.

Reynolds, Austin To Study Hankin's PUC Appointment

Senators Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, were appointed yesterday as a special subcommittee of the Senate District Committee to consider the renomination of Gregory Hankin to the District Public Utilities Commission.

Hankin, counsel for the Federal Power Commission, was renominated for the PUC post by President Roosevelt. He would replace Richmond B. Keech, now corporation counsel.

Hankin was first nominated by the President in March, but the Senate failed to take action and his nomination expired June 30. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, new chairman of the Senate District Committee, was chairman of the subcommittee which failed to make recommendations on the previous nominations.

The PUC has been shy two members since the death of Chairman Riley Elgen and with the Engineer Commissioner the sole member has been unable to transact important business. No nomination has been made to fill the vacancy created by Elgen's death.

Gov. O'Daniel Defeats Johnson for Senate

Austin, Tex., July 14 (AP).—Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel defeated Representative Lyndon B. Johnson by 1,311 votes in the special Senatorial election, June 28, the official canvass showed today.

The Governor will take the seat long occupied by Senator Morris Sheppard, who died in April. The term expires January 1, 1943.

Representative Martin Dies, who finished fourth in the field of more than two dozen candidates, last week urged an investigation of the election, charging violations of the Hatch Act.

Talmadge's Regents Oust Two Educators

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, July 14.—Recently named regents shifted the balance today and brought Gov. Eugene Talmadge belated victory in his weeks-long fight to remove a university dean and a State college president.

By identical votes of ten to 5, the reorganized board of regents declined to renew the expiring one-year contracts of Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the College of Education at the State University in Athens, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, president of South Georgia College at Statesboro.

Recently named regent, James S. Manchester, with frequent promptings from Talmadge, sought to show that Dr. Cocking is closely identified with the Julius Rosenwald Foundation's work in Georgia, that this philanthropic group is committed to full racial equality, including intermarriage, and that, therefore, Dr. Cocking favors such equality.

Dr. Cocking denied categorically that he favored any such equality, charged that he had been made the victim of the "filthiest sort of concocted evidence" and had refused to resign because "my fight . . . was a fight for decency and democracy in Georgia."

In pique at his first reverse, Gov. Talmadge criticized employment of many "foreigners" by the State—Dr. Cocking was born in Iowa, Dr. Pittman in Mississippi— and hinted at a general purge in favor of native-born Georgians.

Shaw Suggests Pact Against Bombing Cities

New York, July 14 (AP).—George Bernard Shaw, English playwright, says he does not believe the British should bomb Rome or Berlin in retaliation, suggesting instead a British-German agreement to stop the demolition of cities. In a signed article in Look magazine published tomorrow Shaw wrote:

"Our main point is that no military advantage is gained by bombing cities and that such bombardment may even be of positive disadvantage to the attacker, by stiffening the resistance of the attacked."

C. I. O. Head Reported In Fair Condition

Pittsburgh, July 14 (AP).—C. I. O. President Philip Murray, who collapsed yesterday while on an outing with his family, was reported in a fair condition today at Mercy Hospital. An associate of the union leader said Murray had suffered an attack of appendicitis in Washington last spring, adding:

"He has been working hard and hasn't taken time out to go to a hospital and take care of that condition."

Defense Sales Party Is Over, Business Told

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., July 14.—Leon Henderson asserted bluntly today that "the party is over" as far as the retail sales boom occasioned by defense spending is concerned.

The administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply said in a speech prepared for a meeting of the New York Housewares Manufacturers Association that defense needs would require rationing of the materials which go into manufacturing articles the public has been buying in ever-increasing amounts.

It already has become apparent, he said, that practically no aluminum would be available for civilian use after military needs were met and "it is becoming evident now that the amount of copper, steel, nickel, zinc, chromite, manganese and a number of other materials required for armaments is going to be so great that we won't have enough left over for consumers' durable goods."

Means Rationing

This, he continued, "means rationing, not by cards at the stores but at the raw materials line, and rationing means that someone is going to get hurt."

"Before long now," he said, "there will be more purchasing power running around hunting something to buy than there are goods available. If that occurs to substantial degree, no power on earth can prevent inflation.

"For that reason the Government must sop up some of this extra purchasing power, and it can do so in many healthful ways. It must increase taxes, thus helping to pay for defense. It can stimulate savings—thus providing a back-log for the future when first attention is not being given to merchandise of death. Consumer credit must be kept from expanding."

Defense Demand Raising

More of America's working time must be devoted to the business of defense, Henderson said.

The price administrator also told the convention that "prices are going up" and some housewives already were complaining.

"We will deceive ourselves if we believe that the cost of living will level off shortly and everything will be all right."

Three New Works In Art Window

Olin Dows' "Nearly Autumn" shows wooded hills. Elizabeth McIntosh's "The Cape" pictures sand and bushes on a beach, with the sea in the background. Gerald Davis' "Notre Dame de la Mer" also shows a shoreline with cliffs rising from the sea and a tiny church perched high on the rock.

All three paintings are loaned for exhibition by the United States Section of Fine Arts and are from the Nation-wide watercolor competition.

Pittsburgh Passes Two Laws To Dispel Its Famous Smoke

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pittsburgh, July 14.—Under strong newspaper pressure the Pittsburgh City Council has adopted two ordinances designed to end quips about "the smoky city" where you change a white collar three times a day.

The order requires that soft coal be burned with mechanical combustion equipment, or that smokeless fuel be used. The penalty for each failure to observe the order is a fine of from $25 to $100 or 30 days in jail.

Office and apartment buildings, mills and factories must comply with the order by next October 1. Railroads must conform by October 1, 1942, and river craft and private homes by October 1, 1943.

Fly ash and other pollutants emitted by stacks also will be regulated by the City Council's action.

The Pittsburgh plan is molded on the St. Louis law preventing excessive smoke nuisance. At the insistence of newspapers the city council sent a delegation to St. Louis last February to study results there.

The regulation won the cooperation of coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America. Railroads and steamboat companies attacked the provision that "dense smoke (from locomotives) shall be permitted for a period or periods aggregating one minute or less in any one hour." They were given more than a year's leeway to work out a means of conforming with it.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

If we take both Iceland and Africa we sure are making work for unemployed thermometers.

Africa is hotter than a mail order pistol. Iceland is colder than a society smile.

I guess one balances the other like epaulets on a general.

I know that Iceland is a strategic base of supplies but I can't figure just where Dakar heads in. If it's a short cut to somewhere we had better check our oil, water and gasoline.

There's one good thing about grabbing Dakar. We can take the tariff off cocoanuts without getting North Dakota sore.

Fred Fisher Dies; Manufacturer Of Auto Bodies

Detroit, July 14 (AP).—Fred Fisher, eldest of the seven famous Fisher brothers and cofounder of the Fisher Body Corporaton which figured prominently in the growth of the automobile industry, died today in Henry Ford Hospital. He was 63.

Suffering from a heart ailment, Fisher had been in the hospital several weeks. His condition became critical last Friday. At his bedside when death came were his wife, all his brothers and a number of executives of his company.

Philanthropies of Fisher and his wife, Burtha, were believed to have run into the millions. They gave $100,000 to a campaign fund for President Hoover.

British Labor Pledged A.F.L. Aid by Green

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told British labor by radio last night that they can expect aid "in every possible way" from American labor.

Green made the declaration in a two-day transatlantic talk with Chairman George Gibson, of the British Trades Union Congress. The program was broadcast nationally.

"American workers have fully demonstrated," Green said, "not only their understanding of the need for aiding Britain but they have exerted their own efforts to make that aid effective.

This program has involved many sacrifices by labor," he added, "but I am proud to say that none of labor's democratic rights or social gains has been impaired."

The A. F. L. declared also that Germany's attack on Russia has not confused American labor's attitude toward the war.

"On the contrary," he declared, "we in America feel that Hitler's invasion of Russia affords us and Great Britain a great opportunity to strengthen our defenses while the Nazi armed forces are being weakened on another front."

The broadcast inaugurated "Aid Britain Labor Week," a national campaign to raise funds for the relief of British workers who have been victims of bombings.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Uniform Promotion Plan Approved by Senate

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved the uniform promotion plan that will raise the salaries of more than 160,000 Federal employes in its first year of operation. The bill was sent to conference, where several minor Senate amendments will be considered by House conferees. Final Congressional action is expected this week. President Roosevelt's approval is assured; he O. K'd the promotion plan after it had been drafted by the Budget Bureau. Once the bill is signed Congress will be called on to appropriate around $7,000,000 to make it effective.

Senator McCarran, urging "a livable minimum wage for Federal employes," tried to place an amendment on the uniform promotion plan that would fix the salaries of unclassified employes at a minimum of $1,500 a year. The amendment was defeated by only two votes.

Senator Byrd opposed the amendment on the ground that it would discriminate against classified Civil Service employes. He suggested that McCarran incorporate his amendment in a bill that could be considered by the Civil Service Committee. McCarran pointed out that he had sponsored legislation for several years that would fix the minimum salary of Government employes at $1,500 and that the committee had failed to act on it to this day. The amendment accepted by the Senate would exempt temporary employes in the office of the Architect of the Capitol. Another would exempt officials appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

The uniform promotion bill exempts all but approximately 350,000 employes. It would guarantee an in-grade promotion every 18 months to the employe who is paid less than $3,800 with a good or better efficiency rating. Employes making more than $3,800 would have to wait 30 months . . . Members of the Agriculture employe election committee that will supervise the election of an employe to the board that will settle efficiency rating grievances are Dr. Howard Edson, Fred Stell, Adolph Atkinson, Helen Selvig, and Caroline Sherman.

Herbert Wechsler, on leave from Columbia University Law School, where he is a professor, is the executive secretary of the committee that will recruit Government attorneys. Last week he visited Tennessee Valley Authority and observed its recruiting methods. The committee is working on noncompetitive tests that will be given to approximately 5,000 Federal attorneys. The lawyers will be graded on experience and education. A test for young attorneys will be given in the early fall.

Morris Tepping has appealed his ouster from the Social Security Board to the Civil Service Commission Board of Appeals on the charge that he was "interested in and connected with people, causes and organizations of radical and Communistic tendencies." Nathan Witt, former labor board secretary, has been hired by UFWA, the C. I. O. union, to defend Tepping. The commission ordered Social Security to fire Tepping. The union claims Tepping was ordered fired for union activity. The union claims that the only evidence submitted against Tepping was that he read several left-wing publications.

Lewis G. Maybee, voucher examiner, was retired yesterday from the Veterans Administration. He has spent more than 36 years in Federal service . . . Joe Menehan has resigned from NFFFE's Local No. 2 because of ill health. Henry Nolda succeeds him . . . AFGE has chartered a new lodge in War Department's finance division. William Guiler is president, R. M. Madron and J. H. Cooper are vice presidents, R. N. Stedman is secretary, V. G. Garrall is treasurer, and R. E. McDonald, sergeant at arms.

Jerry Reilly, Labor Department solicitor, has potent support for the vacancy on the National Labor Relations Board that will be created when the term of Edwin Smith expires on August 27. Smith isn't expected to be reappointed. Another official mentioned to succeed Smith is Marshall Dimock, administrative assistant at the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

M. F. McGuire Is Nominated D. C. Justice

Assistant Attorney General Is Named To Succeed Gordon On District Court

Assistant Attorney General Mathew F. McGuire was nominated yesterday as a justice of the District Court, to succeed Justice Peyton Gordon, retired.

The appointment had been under consideration six months when President Roosevelt sent the name of the 42-year-old Bostonian to the Senate, where it was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

McGuire's installation will bring the court to its full strength of 12 justices for the first time in more than a year, Justice Gordon having been ill for eight months before he announced his retirement early this year.

McGuire will be one of the youngest men ever to ascend the bench in Washington. A native of Boston, he was graduated from Boston College High School and served in the Navy in the World War.

McGuire received the bachelor of arts degree at Holy Cross University in 1921 and his bachelor of laws degree from Boston University in 1926. Last month, Holy Cross made him a doctor of laws, the youngest alumnus ever to receive the honor from the institution.

After practicing law in Boston, McGuire came to Washington in 1934 as a special attorney in the criminal division of the Department of Justice. He helped draft the national kidnaping law and other criminal statutes.

McGuire became the third ranking officer of the department by appointment of Attorney General Jackson, being assigned to supervise the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Immigration and Naturalization Bureau and the work of United States attorneys and marshals.

Mrs. McGuire is the former Eleanor G. McCarthy, of Dorchester, Mass. They were married in 1936

Defunct Club Gives $54.72 To USO

A Washington telephone operator made a local phone call and it cost her and a group of her colleagues exactly $54.72!

No, the actual call didn't cost that much—especially for an employe of the telephone company. It simply means that the local United Service Organizations is $54.72 richer by virtue of the call.

It happened this way: A group of 75 telephone operators of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. some time ago formed a social organization known as the Dialette Club. Later they were obliged to disband. The treasurer, Miss Lucy M. Cook, reported a balance of $54.72 and wanted to know what to do with it.

Miss Cook called in Miss Lorena O'Brien, president, and Miss Eleanor Bramhall, secretary, for a consultation. They made a quick decision. Miss Cook dialed the phone and asked: "Is this Republic 1399?" It was the local headquarters of the USO.

So, Miss Cook told a USO official she had $54.72 to donate and would he accept it?

We don't have to tell you what the official said.

Halifax Son's Wife Sees Casey in Action

A member of Britain's official family in this country yesterday saw Police Court Judge Walter Casey sentence more than 180 persons to an aggregate of 9,000 days on drunk charges.

Mrs. Charles Wood, daughter-in-law of Lady Halifax, toured the court again yesterday to study American court techniques more fully. She first visited the courts last Friday with Lady Halifax. Her husband, Lieut. Charles Wood, at present is serving with the British forces in the Middle East.

Mrs. Wood was accompanied by Mrs. O. O. Harvey, a visitor at the British Embassy, and Richard A. Mahar, a local attorney.

By Ray C. B. Brown

Alexander Smallens conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in a concert of compositions by George Gershwin at the Potomac Watergate on Monday night. Soloists: Evelyn Swarthout, pianist; Agnes Davis, soprano; Arthur Kent, barytone. Program: Cuban Overture, Three Preludes, Piano Concerto in F major, Strike Up the Band, An American in Paris, Excerpts from "Porgy and Bess," Rhapsody in Blue.

Under the starry sky of a perfect summer night, thousands of Washingtonians crowded the terrace and the purlieus of the Potomac Watergate last evening when Alexander Smallens conducted the National Symphony Orchestra in a program of music by George Gershwin. While the concert was not an official memorial of the American composer who died July 11 four years ago in his thirty-ninth year, there could be no doubt that the concourse of auditors had in mind the untimely extinction of his talents and an affectionate regret. It was fitting that the remembrance of him should be an occasion not for mourning but for enjoyment of his legacy to the people.

BROWN

No observer could have failed to be impressed by the scene of this gathering in memoriam of a musician whose themes have become an integral part of the folk music of the United States. Not a vacant place could be discerned in the serried ranks of listeners on the wide flight of steps and on the chair-filled sweep of the river bank between the under-passes of the bridge and highway; standees lined the parapets and fringed the roads, and the invisible audience found places on the lawns and on the colonnade of the Lincoln Memorial. Flotillas of canoes and other watercraft flanked the barge, their riding-lights reflected fromthe rippled surface of Alexander Smallens was the ideal conductor of a concert devoted to the music of a man who was his friend. His vitalizing direction was palpable in the rhythmic urgency of the performance, and the orchestra responded with a unanimity that made the readings instinct with spirit. It was not a case of interpretations of classics, but of lively playing of music expressive of American life.

Even the "Cuban Overture" with which the program opened had the glitter of Broadway in its treatment of rhumba rhythm through the medium of jazz. It was on Broadway that George Gershwin began his career and acquired the idiom that became characteristic of his style and his method of musical thought. He perfected that idiom to a point which no other composer has attained and revealed its artistic possibilities as a memorable pioneer.

The three piano preludes, skillfully orchestrated though they have been by Arnold Schoenberg, do not adapt themselves to orchestral magnification without losing some of their essential quality. Gershwin was a pianist himself, and in the preludes he said what he had to say in the language of that instrument.

In his piano concerto, however, he used the instrument most effectively in an adaptation of Lisztian brilliance to the syncopation of a new age. It is his greatest orchestral composition and his most personal expression. The second movement, the poetic application of the "blues" to the romantic tradition, is charming and atmospheric, dreamily wistful and poignantly searching by turns. Evelyn Swarthout gave a most satisfactory performance of the solo part, technically expert and clean in phrasing. She was also a notable part of the stirring performance of the "Rhapsody in Blue," with which the program closed.

The symphonic poem, "An American in Paris," does not show any advance over the piano concerto, nor is it as original and individual a work. Much more vital and important were the excerpts from "Porgy and Bess," the folk opera which pointed in the direction which Gershwin would have followed had he lived. Agnes Davis sang expressively "Summertime," Arthur Kent gave so sonorous and captivating a reading of "I Got Plenty o' Nuttin" that he was obliged to repeat it, and the two singers won a cordial ovation with the duet from the second act.

Legion Guard of Honor to Get Awards After Parade Tonight

A presentation of certificates of award to the National Guard of Honor of the American Legion will climax a parade and band concert to be held at 7:15 p. m. today at Treasury House, Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, will present the certificates as the chief feature of "Legion Day" at the House. The United States Army band is among the six which will present a concert.

Maj. Gen. James A. Drain, retired, past national commander of the legion, will be the principal speaker.

Treasury Day will be observed tomorrow. A program of entertainment and music will begin at noon with selections by the United States Navy Band and a musical climaxed with program at 7:30 p. m.

The feature of the program will be vocal selections by Miss Hazel Arth of this city and New York. Miss Arth, nationally known contralto and radio artist, will be accompanied by Mrs. Dorothy Hutcheson, concert pianist. The evening program will be opened by the United States Army Band.

Others to be heard are: Bob Callahan of station WINX, with a rendition of patriotic piano selections; Mrs. Violet James Featherstone and Byron Roshon, with a group of songs; and the Columbia Opera Co. There will also be accordeon selections by Miss Kate Poppell.

HAZEL ARTH, Washington and New York contralto, will sing tomorrow in observance of "Treasury Day"

New Effort For D. C. Vote Expected

Van Nuys Predicts Bill to Replace Capper's Will Be Offered This Session

Legislation to replace the Capper-Sumners resolution and to give the District self-government with elected officials may be introduced at this session of Congress, Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, predicted last night.

Van Nuys' committee yesterday accepted the report of a subcommittee headed by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, disapproving the Capper-Sumners bill. The measure proposed amendment of the Constitution to authorize Congress to delegate self-governing powers to a municipal government and to give the District national representation.

The full committee voted that the Capper bill should be put on the Senate calendar, but recommended that action on it be postponed indefinitely. The step was taken, Van Nuys explained, to avoid precluding a Senate debate on District suffrage issues presented by the Capper-Summers resolution.

"I am very much in favor of giving the District a municipal government of its own," Van Nuys said. "I would be glad to vote for a bill which would enable residents of the Capital to elect their own officials."

In reaching their decision on the bill, Van Nuys said, members of the committee were strongly influenced by testimony of Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, sponsor of similar legislation in the House, who told the subcommittee during hearings that no Constitutional amendment is needed to enable Congress to delegate its powers to an elected municipal government for the District.

McCarran, who made a verbal report of the subcommittee's action, will file a written report with the Senate Monday.

Dupont Circle Lessees Given Room for Hope

Leaseholding tenants of the Dupont Circle Hotel will not be forced out to make way for Government offices, a reputed spokesman for the management said last night.

Stephen G. Ingham, counsel for Dupont Circle, Inc., was quoted to the effect that no effort would be made to dispossess 47 tenants holding leases which have from a few months to two years to run. The building has 345 apartments.

Whether the Government, which planned to rent the 12-story downtown hotel and convert it into an office building, will accept the property on a part-occupancy basis could not be learned yesterday.

Assured last spring by the hotel ownership, seeking to lease the building to the Government, that complete occupancy could be obtained by July 1, the Public Buildings Administration budgeted a $209,000 yearly rental for the structure's 150,000 square feet of space.

Ingham declared that 35 per cent of the residential hotel's apartments would be vacated by last midnight, 50 per cent by tomorrow (Wednesday) night and 75 per cent by this weekend.

Scant Headway Made in Laundry Strike Negotiations

Negotiations for a settlement of the Arcade-Sunshine Laundry strike which began two weeks ago tomorrow made small headway yesterday. A conference between company and union representatives broke up during contract and election discussions.

Sam Levine, attorney for the Cleaners and Laundry Workers Union, Local 188-B, accused the company of rejecting a proposed contract which last month it had asked the union to submit for study.

Alvin Newmyer, Arcade-Sunshine attorney, denied the company had "rejected" the proposal, but affirmed it was asking that a plant election be held immediately under NLRB sponsorship.

Maryland WPA Rolls Reduced to 5,100

Baltimore, July 14 (AP).—Harry D. Williar, jr., State administrator of the WPA, said today that a gradual tightening of Federal funds, topped by the recent country-wide cut of approximately 40 per cent, has reduced the number of persons on Maryland's WPA rolls from 14,500 to 5,100 persons in the past year.

Peak of WPA employment in the State was 24,500 in February, 1936.

Municipal Phone System Rehearses Its Lines

The District's bigger and better municipal telephone system went into effect yesterday, but enough last-minute details remained to be ironed out to give workers a multitude of wrong numbers.

The new $32,000 phone service operates on an inter-office dial system and each unit of the city government has been given a branch number. Special directories have been provided, but for a while yesterday callers were not sure what they would get when a number was dialed.

Herbert A. Friede, superintendent of the fire-alarm system and in charge of the phone installation work, said the new system will provide 67 per cent more trunk line facilities.

Sequence Numbers Decided For 4,433 New Registrants

Underwood & Underwood

NUMBER OF THINGS—Frances Donovan, of Selective Service Headquarters, places draft numbers in capsules in preparation for Thursday's lottery

Sequence numbers have been completed for the 4,433 young men in the District who registered July 1 for military service, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Washington director of Selective Service, announced last night.

The sequence numbers will determine the order in which the registrants will be integrated among the old registrants who have not yet been called.

Explaining the method of integration, Gen. Cox said, "If a local board should happen to have 100 new registrants and 1,000 old registrants who were not called by June 30, then one new registrant would be placed after each group of ten old registrants."

Meanwhile, other preparations are going ahead for the second National Selective Service lottery tomorrow. The twice-used fish bowl which will hold approximately 800 capsuled numbers, is on its way here from Independence Hall in Philadelphia, escorted by a special police detail and members of the American Legion. The lottery which is scheduled to start at 7 p. m. in Departmental Auditorium, will last about two hours.

Yesterday five girls at Selective Service National Headquarters worked for several hours inserting the lottery numbers into capsules. The capsules are now under guard by special police.

This morning they will be taken to the Treasury Department in a heavily armored truck escorted by a trailer equipped with machine guns. Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, will go with the armed convoy to the Treasury Department and will entrust the capsules to Frank J. Wilson, chief of the Secret Service, for safekeeping in a Treasury vault. They will be kept there under constant guard until they are placed in the goldfish bowl tomorrow night.

Army Flies D. C. Man Home To Wed Girl He Left Behind

The girl was sick in a Washington hospital and the boy was in an Army camp in Texas, so Uncle Sam gave him a lift home in a Boeing bomber and yesterday they were man and wife.

Sterling T. Troutman, 22, of 314 Second Street Northeast, was a carpenter until the Selective Service Act made him a private at Camp Houston in San Antonio. Miss Irene Ferguson, 18, of 239 East Monroe Avenue, Alexandria, Va., was a telephone operator.

They had been going together three years when Troutman left for Texas. A friend said, "She missed him something awful." She became ill and was taken to Sibley Hospital last week.

Her mother decided the best antidote was a sight of Troutman. She dispatched a telegram to him at Camp Houston, requesting him to come home, and signed it "Mom."

Troutman had 15 days' leave due him. Somehow he managed to hitch a ride on an eastward-bound bomber, arriving in time to take his girl home from the hospital.

They were married at her home Sunday by Capt. E. B. Wilcox. Troutman will not return to camp until this weekend.

Last night they were on a boat ride down the Potomac.

"It isn't a honeymoon yet," the friend said. "They're saving that until he gets out of the Army."

Funds Urged For Indexing D. C. Deeds

Thompkins Appeals For $83,940 to Save $500,000 Already Spent on System

Dr. William J. Thompkins, District recorder of deeds, wants Congress to spend $83,940 to save $500,000.

To members of the District Committee he appealed yesterday for assistance in convincing the House Appropriations Committee of the necessity of funds to complete a lot and square system of indexing District land records.

Since 1936, Thompkins pointed out, $500,000 has been spent on the task and what has been accomplished thus far will be next to worthless unless the job is finished.

With WPA funds and workers, Thompkins began in 1936 the task of indexing the history of title changes in every piece of property in the District since 1792. The project was dropped when the District's WPA allotment was reduced June 30.

With $83,940, Thompkins said, the index system can be brought up to date from 1926. He says the job can be finished in one year with 60 clerks or in two years with 30. Regular employes of the office can keep the records up to date after that, he believes.

The index system will enable any prospective purchaser of property to obtain in a few minutes the complete history of transactions involving it. Unless the indexing is completed, title searchers in the District will be required, as at present, to pore through many records, a task that may take "anywhere from an hour to a month."

Index systems are used in New York and other large cities, Thompkins said.

115th Releases J. M. Forbes to Go To West Point

Private John M. Forbes, 21, of Washington, has been released from the 115th Infantry Regiment to accept an immediate appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point, Fort Meade authorities said yesterday.

Forbes is the son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. M. H. Forbes, 3611 Kanawha Street Northwest. Before joining the Maryland National Guard two years ago, he graduated from the Polytechnic Preparatory School in Brooklyn and from Sullivan Preparatory School.

Prior to his assignment to the 115th Regiment, he was with Company I of the 116th Infantry Regiment. His discharge became effective while he was attending an Army school at Fort Benning, Ga.

Nurse Quinlin to Report

Catherine Quinlin, 400 Douglas Street Northeast, will be among six reserve nurses reporting today for a year's active duty with the Army Miss Quinlin will report to Walter Reed Hospital. At the same time, Gertrude Danley, Roanoke, Va., will report to Camp Lee.

Chisox Halt Yanks' Streak, DiMag Gets Hit

Rigney Smashes 14-Game March, 7-1; DiMaggio Hits Safely In 54th Straight Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 14.—The Chicago White Sox smashed the winning streak of the New York Yankees at 14 straight today, but they still haven't found a way to halt the amazing Joe DiMaggio.

The pesky fourth-place club, playing smoothly behind John Rigney's steady pitching, defeated the league leaders by 7 to 1 before 8,025 customers. The great DiMaggio, however, extended his consecutive game hitting streak to 54 games, rounding out two months exactly since he has been held hitless.

He started the string May 15 in Yankee Stadium, and it appeared for a while as if Rigney would end it today. DiMaggio reached first base his first time at bat when Bill Knickerbocker dropped his infield fly, an easy chance which was scored an error. Rigney walked the Yankee ace unintentionally in the fourth inning. Then in the sixth Joe barely nicked an inside pitch and dribbled a roller down the third-base line so slow that Bob Kennedy could not field it in time to throw him out. He flied out in deep center field in the ninth.

The loss sliced the Yankees' lead over Cleveland to four games. The New Yorkers now have lost 2 of their last 20 games and 5 of their last 33.

Chicago took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a walk, Taft Wright's double and Moose Solters' single and were never headed thereafter. The Yankees produced their lone tally in the third when Buddy Rosar singled, went to second on a passed ball, and scored on Johnny Sturm's single.

The Sox added another run off Marvin Breuer in the fourth on an error and Kennedy's triple, the game progressing as a tight pitchers' duel until Breuer was taken out in the seventh for a pinch hitter.

The Sox pounced on Charley Stanceu for three hits and three runs before he was replaced by Norman Branch, who yielded the other tally in the big eighth inning, sewing up the decision. Knickerbocker drew a walk from Stanceu and Joe Kuhel doubled. Mike Kreevich scored both of them with a single and Appling followed with a double scoring Kreevich. Branch then took over and retired Taffy Wright and Solters before Kennedy singled Appling home with the final run.

The 18-hole event, open to all golfers under 21, pro or amateur, was won last year by the present Middle Atlantic junior champ, Eddie Johnston.

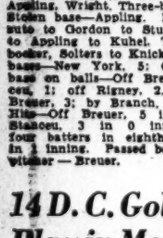
9:42, George Vass; 9:48, Frank Clark; 10:06, Earle Skinker, Fred Bolton; 10:12, Karl Kuster, Edmund Litzau; 10:18, Buster Mrstik, Allen Willett; 10:24, Robert Clark; 10:30, William Waggaman; 10:36, Donald Sullivan; 10:42, Robert Suit, Thomas Cook; 11, William Leapley.

Lou Gehrig's Life in Sport To Be Filmed

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, July 14.—Samuel Goldwyn said today Mrs. Lou Gehrig, widow of the baseball star, had signed a contract covering filming of her husband's life.



MRS. GEHRIG

Also signed was Christy Walsh, sports figure and Gehrig's manager, who worked with both Gehrig and Babe Ruth in movies years ago.

Mrs. Gehrig's contract provides she shall sit in on conferences with writers and producers. The story is not written and no players have been signed. Goldwyn hopes to have the picture in production by November and ready for release in April, after scenes are shot at the New York Yankees' training camp.

DiMaggio Starts Speedy Sprint That Gave Him 54-Game Hitting Streak

Red Grange Files $50,000 Libel Suit

Charges Wendell Wilson, U. of Ill. Athletic Director, With Remarks Damaging Character

By International News Service

Chicago, July 14.—Harold (Red) Grange late today filed a $50,000 suit, charging libel, against University of Illinois Athletic Director Wendell Wilson, the latest development in the bitter battle between Wilson and Head Football Coach Bob Zuppke.

Grange, the famed "Gallopin' Ghost," last Wednesday came to the defense of Zuppke, who has charged Wilson with "knifing" him, with a formal statement in which he charged Wilson plotted to take over the Illinois coaching job himself and offered Grange the job as backfield coach.

Wilson yesterday in telegrams to newspapers from his Wyoming ranch, declared Grange's statement "relative to my seeking coaching position is one of the most contemptible lies ever concocted" and is "consistent with 'Red's' record since leaving the University of Illinois."

It was on the basis of the telegram that Attorneys George Landon and William E. McDermott filed the libel suit in Grange's behalf, holding Wilson's remarks were damaging to Grange's character.

Landon said tonight:

"He didn't waste any time in filing the suit. And in all due deference to the greatest athlete that ever went to the University of Illinois, I think consideration should be given to his (Grange's) opinion of Mr. Zuppke. Red and Zuppke built the stadium down there. I was a classmate of Red's and I know what I'm talking about."

Prior to filing the libel suit Grange was noncommittal concerning Wilson's blast. He said:

"I don't pay any attention to that sort of thing.

"He can deny all he wants, but I've got plenty of people to sub-

Jimmy Clark's 64 Sets Pace In Publinks

By the Associated Press

Indian Canyon Club, Spokane, Wash., July 14.—Blond Jimmy Clark, a 20-year-old aircraft worker from Long Beach, Calif., shattered par, records and the hopes of rivals today with a bell-ringing 64 to set the pace for the first round of the 36-hole qualifying trials of the national public links golf championship.

His game was hotter than the weather as he came charging home to amaze remaining spectators, officials and the rest with a pair of 32's on a course that had proved nothing but a headache to most of the 178 starters.

Clark, who took time off from a stock room job in an airplane factory to get in a few licks at the game, has become a sensation in this year, chalked up a new competitive record for the course. Only "Bud" Ward, former national amateur titleholder and winner of the Western amateur two weeks ago, has equaled the figure and his was during an exhibition.

The 64, according to U. S. G. A. officials, probably set a new record for a first round in a national event sanctioned by the governing body. None could recall a lower score.

Pete Galiano Disqualified In Stolz Bout

Newark, N. J., July 14 (AP).—Allie Stolz, of Newark, won by disqualification in 2:45 of the fifth round of a scheduled ten-round boxing bout tonight over Pete Galiano, of Baltimore, at Meadowbrook Bowl. Both fighters weighed 134.

Referee Anthony Brown disqualified Galiano, who was on the floor moaning, because one of his seconds jumped into the ring during the count to protest the blow. The referee's count reached five when the second began carrying his fighter to his corner, charging Galiano was hit low.

Boxing commission officials ordered $200 of the visitor's purse withheld pending a hearing.

Lee Savold Beats Sarlin in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, July 14 (AP).—Heavier by 13 pounds, Lee Savold, Des Moines heavyweight, tonight methodically pounded out a 10-round decision over Erv Sarlin, Pittsburg light-heavyweight who will be inducted into the Army tomorrow. Savold weighed 189, Sarlin 176.

The Pittsburgher danced away for the first three rounds, but then Savold's hard body punches gradually wore him down. Savold cut Sarlin under the left eye in the eighth.

Pacini Rolls 265 To Win Odd Pin Meet

Ollie Pacini rolled 265 to win the last Odd Pin Tournament at Arlington Bowling Center last night. Cletus Pannell was the runner-up with 255. High game of 105 went to Junior Gordon, Clarendon. Jim Luckett's 1,023 took down first prize for the series of five odd pin events and "Boo" Henson next with 988. Gordon's 105 was tops for game during the event while Jack Witz's 267 led in set.

Fritzie Zivic Wins Decision Over Barbara

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 14.—Fritzie Zivic, welterweight champion from Pittsburgh, punched out a 12-round decision over Johnny Barbara, of Chicago, in a nontitle bout tonight before 5,000 at the Philadelphia Gardens. Zivic weighed 150¼, Barbara 153¾.

Making his first start since administering a decisive beating to Al "Bummy" Davis in New York, Zivic gained a big early lead by flooring Barbara for a nine count in the second round, then staved off the Chicagoan's late rally. The decision was unanimous.

The knockdown came suddenly. They were mauling each other near the ropes when Zivic pulled away and caught Barbara on the chin with a short right punch. When Barbara got up Zivic flung left hooks into the body from all angles, but Barbara weathered the storm and at the end had the champion backing away. It was the fourth meeting between the two. Each has won twice.

Bob Montgomery Decisions White In Slow Fight

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 14.—Bob Montgomery, 134, Philadelphia, won an unanimous decision over Slugger White, 136, of Baltimore in a slow 10-round fight tonight.

Montgomery, who beat lightweight champion Lew Jenkins in a nontitle bout last May, stayed close on his man throughout the 10 rounds, trading punches in close fighting. White showed signs of tiring by the sixth round.

Brooklyn Pilot's Pinch Bunt Wins, 1 to 0; Chicago Pitcher Throws Ball Over Grandstand

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 14.—The Brooklyn Dodgers captured a dramatic 1-to-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs today with Manager Leo Durocher knocking in the winning run with a pinch bunt in the ninth inning after the Dodgers had loaded the bases.

Kirby Higbe, notching his thirteenth triumph of the season, held the Bruins to two singles in a great pitching performance, but for eight innings he was no better off than Lefty Vern Olsen, who had kept Brooklyn scoreless on six hits over this span.

Then in the Dodgers' last turn at bat Joe Medwick opened with a sharp single to left and was sacrificed to second by Dolph Camilli. Dixie Walker grounded down the first base line and was safe on a fumble by Babe Dahlgren, Medwick making third. Mickey Owen was purposely passed to fill the bases.

This was the scene when Manager Durocher left the first base coaching line, picked up a bat, and swaggered to the plate. Everybody expected him to put on the "squeeze play" and he did—a perfect bunt that loitered just to the left of the pitcher's box.

Olsen fielded the ball, looked hopelessly toward home and then toward first, saw he had no chance to catch either runner, and in dis-

Bridges Beats Athletics, 4-2, For Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 14.—Tommy Bridges, aided by the almost-counted-out Charley Gehringer, hurled the Detroit Tigers to a 4-to-2 victory today over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Bridges gave the A's just five hits in registering his fifth win this season, struck out seven and walked four, one of the passes being intentional.

Gehringer, who was supposed to have been replaced today by Lambert (Dutch) Meyer, recalled from Buffalo, went to bat five times, drew three passes and got one hit, a single. He fielded flawlessly and looked more like his old self than at any time in recent weeks.

The Tigers tucked the game away with three runs on three hits and a walk in the seventh.

Ol' Diz Plans New Comeback Trail for 1942

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, July 14.—Ol' Diz Dean will hit the baseball comeback trail again next year.

The pitcher whose career has fluctuated between majors and minors said today he is going to try out once more and if he does not connect he'll continue in radio.

Dizzy stopped here on the way to his broadcasting job in St. Louis after working three innings for Sioux Falls, S. D., Sunday night. Diz admitted he didn't look so hot in the Class D circuit.

He allowed one hit and struck out one, but committed two of four Sioux Falls errors and left the game tied 3-3. He went hitless twice at bat. Sioux Falls defeated Pueblo of the Western League, 7-4.

Joe Wallace Wins Elks' Golf Medal

Philadelphia, July 14 (AP).—Joseph Wallace, of Paterson, N. J., won medalist honors in the qualifying round of the National Elks Golf tourney. He carded a 39-42, 81, in the competition at the Manufacturers Golf and County Club.

Phil Talbot, of Bloomington, Ind., finished second with a 40-42, 82. Other top scorers included Bill Keith, Amarillo, Tex., 40-44, 84; G. A. Dye, Conneaut, Ohio, 42-44, 86, and G. D. Kingdon, Conneaut, 43-47, 90.

WASHINGTON, JULY 15, 1941

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

'You Gotta Be Relaxed . . .'

St. Louis, July 14.—It was murder at first sight when bashful young Cecil Travis was introduced to big league pitching on an August afternoon in 1933. He rapped out five hits that day and has been murdering American League pitching ever since. There is not any doubt, now, after most of eight seasons, that the lanky, knock-kneed Georgian is one of the truly fine hitters of baseball.

POVICH

Rogers Hornsby sat in a box seat today at Sportsmans' Park and pegged Travis' place among big league batters. "Now there's a guy," said Hornsby, "who you can tell is a fine hitter by everything he does. He's relaxed and still tough. You gotta be relaxed up there or they make a sucker out of you. They'll run you out of the league if you can hit only a certain kind of pitching. This Travis is always getting a piece of the ball. I'm not surprised he has hit in 24 straight games."

The only season in which Travis has failed to hit .300 was in 1939 when he was ill. But in poor health he was able to bat .290, a figure that most ballplayers would swap an arm for. At this writing, Travis is banging away at a brisk .375 pace and is the third leading hitter in the league.

Around the league, if you should put the question, "Quick! Think of a player on the Washington team," the answer in 90 per cent of the cases would be "Travis." He's a stand-out on the Nats. Baseball fans around the circuit may be a bit vague about other positions on the Washington club, but they know that Travis is the shortstop. His hitting has made him an important figure.

Cece Hits 'Em the Hard Way

This year Travis is giving the lie to an old suspicion that libeled him for several seasons: The belief that he couldn't hit with men on bases. In sheer desperation Bucky Harris promoted Travis to the clean-up hitting job this season, and only five men in the American League—Charley Keller, Joe DiMaggio, Rudy York and Ted Williams—have batted in more runs. Travis has none of the power of that crew. He drives his runs home in driblets rather than clusters, which is the tougher method.

Del Baker, who managed the American League All-Stars paid some sort of tribute to Travis when he stationed him on third base despite the fact that Travis for two months had been playing shortstop. Versatility is certainly among Travis' virtues. He shuttles back and forth between shortstop and third base without a murmur, gives Bucky Harris a great job at either position, and a few years ago when they moved him to the outfield Travis was no drawback defensively.

Travis isn't the best shortstop in the league, perhaps, but he has some sort of claim on the honor. Lou Boudreau, of the Indians, will outfield him, but Travis is outhitting Boudreau by 60 points. However, there isn't much doubt that Travis could be the best third baseman in the league. It's the position he plays best and there isn't a third baseman around who can carry his bat.

Georgian Is Umpires' Favorite

He's the favorite ball player of the umpires, incidentally. No baleful glare is turned in their direction when they miss a strike on Travis. The other day at Chicago, Bill Summers called a low ball a strike on Travis and apologized, no less. "I muffed that one, Cece," said Summers, "and you're the last guy in the league I'd want that to happen to."

The only time Travis was ever even a little bit bitter was during one period at Griffith Stadium in 1939. Washington fans had taken to booing him. He wasn't fielding well and his hitting was slumping. He was ill enough to be under the doctor's care, but the fact wasn't known. All Travis would say is "Gee, I'm doing the best I can."

Travis probably represents the biggest bargain in contemporary baseball. The Washington club picked him out of an Atlanta baseball school in 1931 for $210. He moved directly into Southern Association ball and slugged away for a .370 average in his first season. He has been a fair country hitter ever since.

There are just about three ball players in the American League who would bring more money in the market than Travis. Joe DiMaggio, Bob Feller and Ted Williams would command higher price tags, but after them Travis would be tops. Without him, the Washington club wouldn't be battling for eighth place. They'd be in it, with no hope of release.

Ken Chase Wild, Nats Lose to St. Louis, 6-4

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, July 14.—Ken Chase, of Borneo, put an end to that three-game Washington winning streak this afternoon. He walked seven Browns before the third inning was ended and enough of 'em scored to defeat the Nats, 6 to 4.

The Browns made only four hits in contrast to the Nats' eight, but they were offering at few of Chase's pitches. All they needed was patience. They scored five runs in the first three innings against the Nats' southpaw, whose control was not even remote. His last act was to wild pitch the Browns' fifth run home.

Vernon Kennedy got the pitching job for the Nats with two out in the third inning and did an entirely creditable job of it thereafter. He allowed only one hit over the rest of the distance, but that one was a home run which George McQuinn bumped over the right field roof in the seventh inning.

Knuckle-Baller Coasts

John Niggeling, a side-arming knuckle-baller, who is two years older than Job as baseball players go, had the Nats in more or less control from start to finish. He was virtually coasting under his 5-1 lead after the third inning.

Cecil Travis was here today, again. He checked in with a hit in his twenty-fourth consecutive game. In fact, Travis did it very emphatically. He made three of the Nats' eight hits, two singles to center, one double against the right center field wall.

Chase was no help to himself in the first inning when the Browns came up with two runs, and George Case was no help to him either. With two out and none on, Chase walked George McQuinn and then messed up a meek grounder off Judnich's bat. The scorer's generosity called it a hit. Then Case, who had taken no part in the proceedings to that point, gave the Browns two runs. He played Cullenbine's drive into left center as if it were something to be avoided, and it fell through his glove for a long single that scored both run-

Herbert-Mahony Duo Upset In D. C. Net Play

Fishburne, Moore Trip '40 Champs

Defending Titlists Bow to Fine Rally Of Underdog Team By 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 Score

Willie O'Steen Herbert and Margo Lee Mahony suffered their first local tournament defeat as a team yesterday when they lost their District Women's doubles title to Sara Moore, the comebacking former District titleholder, and Eleanor Fishburne in an upset at Columbia Country Club.

The second-ranked combination of Miss Moore and Mrs. Fishburne swept from behind to win, 3—6, 6—2, 6—4, mainly on the strength of Miss Moore's booming forehand placements down the alley and frequent errors by Mrs. Mahony. The winners overcame a 1—3 deficit in the last set.

At the outset it appeared as though the match would be decided, as expected, in a straight set victory for Mrs. Herbert, the newly crowned D. C. singles champion, and Mrs. Mahony who won both the City of Washington and the District doubles titles last year. They wiped out a 2—3 disadvantage and rolled through four straight games to take a one set edge.

The tide swung sharply in the second set as Mrs. Fishburne and Miss Moore broke Mrs. Mahony's strong service twice and Mrs. Herbert's once in scoring easily. With Mrs. Fishburne playing surprisingly consistent tennis for a player who is unranked in the District, and Mrs. Moore picking up needed points with forehand drives that drove their opponents from the net, the underdogs looked like champions.

Mrs. Mahony and Mrs. Herbert rallied mildly in the deciding set and forged ahead 3-1 before they were caught unawares by a final and sharp comeback in which Miss Moore and Mrs. Fishburne dislodged them from the net where they had been operating successfully. High, tricky lobs and drives down the sidelines were the shots with which Miss Moore and Mrs. Fishburne took the offensive.

Mrs. Herbert and Mahony barely held Mrs. Mahony's service in the eighth, winning only after they blew a 40—15 advantage, and the match again was deadlocked. The ninth game went to Mrs. Fishburne as Mrs. Mahony committed two errors, and then she and Miss Moore broke through Mrs. Herbert to close out their surprising triumph. The winning point was credited to Miss Moore, whose vicious volley struck Mrs. Mahony's waiting racquet with such force that the ball bounded 30 feet into the air and fell far behind the baseline.—J. Greenbelt Bows As Kavakos Ends 'Grudge' Tune-up

With Jack Smith and Paul Grace dividing the hurling assignment, Kavakos Grill last night finished preparations for its big game with Senate Beer Wednesday night at Griffith Stadium by defeating Greenbelt, undefeated National Night League leader, 4-2, at Washington Softball Stadium.

Smith worked the first four innings, holding the hard-hitting Greenies helpless, giving up but one hit and fanning four. Billy Burk led the Kavakos hitters with three for three. Smith also contributed a home run.

Pepco outscored U. S. Aggies in the National Night League game, 10-8.

Scott Scores K. O. Over Tom Gomez

Tampa, Fla., July 14 (AP).—Buddy Scott, of Washington, D. C., scored a surprise seventh-round knockout over Soldier Tommy Gomez, of Camp Blanding, Fla., tonight in a heavyweight bout scheduled for ten rounds.

Gomez had staggered Scott in the second and sixth rounds and appeared to be having things his own way. Then, in the seventh, Scott poked a left to Gomez stomach and another to the soldier's chin and Gomez, apparently in a daze, was wide open for Scott's right to the chin.

Dot Evans Wins Airport Pool Swimming Feature

Joe LaSalle, Washington Golf and Country Club swimmer, winner of the 60-yard freestyle event for men, and Patsy Palmer, District A. A. U. 60-yard freestyle women's champion who was unable to compete because of wisdom tooth trouble, are shown sitting one out last night during the Airport Pool swim meet

Dot Evans, world's 50 and 100 meter swim champ, emerged from the fourth annual Washington Airport Pool swimming meet last night as the only dual winner of the water carnival. Miss Evans, who swims for the Penn Athletic Club, captured the 60-yard freestyle and came back later to triumph in the 180-yard medley.

The biggest surprise of the show, however, was staged by a diminutive 16-year-old miss, bronzed Marilyn Globisch, who nosed out the heavily-favored Lorraine Fischer, holder of some 35 national titles, in the 60-yard breast stroke, one of Miss Fischer's specialties. This victory meant more than simply a medal to Marilyn, who in three years of competitive swimming has met the champion more than 20 times and trailed.

Miss Fischer, of the Women's Swimming Association of New York, made a spectacular entry to the pool. Leaving by plane after work yesterday afternoon, she arrived at the airport, boarded a small ferry plane and was deposited almost at the water's edge just minutes before her first event. She entered the meet with the hope of taking the team trophy back to New York after a one-woman assault, but these hopes were blasted by little Miss Globisch, and also by Dot Lyons and Prince Nufer, the Goldsboro, N. C., swim sensation.

In the women's division Washington swimmers were nosed out of the money until the nightcap event, the 180-yard medley, when Betty Roland and Jean Dodder, both of the

Feller Takes 18th as Tribe Stops Bosox

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 14.—Fireballing along toward the 30-victory mark, Bob Feller cast a five-hit spell over the slugging Boston Red Sox today for a 4-to-1 triumph, his eighteenth of the season.

The Cleveland Indians quickly gave Rapid Robert a four-run lead and although he walked six, he was tough with men on the sacks.

Today's victory, coupled with the end of New York's 14-game winning streak, put the second-place Indians four games behind the Yankees.

The Tribe got a run in the first when Clarence Campbell's outfield fly tallied Lou Boudreau, who had doubled and advanced to third on a sacrifice.

In the second, the Indians got to Starter Jack Wilson for three more. Ray Mack walked and made second on a sacrifice. One of Wilson's pitches hit Boudreau in the back, sending him to first, and Ken Keltner's single scored Mack. Roy Weatherly walked and at this decisive moment Outfielder Jeff Heath singled to right, tallying both Boudreau and Keltner.

It was Wilson's sixth loss in 14 games.

Overlin Adds Aid To 'Joe Turner Night'

Ex-Middleweight Champ Offers His Services Free Gratis

Ken Overlin, the "Conga Kid" playboy of other days and more recently the world's middleweight champion, opined yesterday that there is no such thing in the fight world as gratitude—and then just to contradict himself he offered his services free on the "testimonial fight night" for Promoter Joe Turner Monday in Griffith Stadium.

Overlin is on the verge of becoming the man behind the boxing throne at Mike Uline's $750,000 ice palace, which next fall will operate in competition with Turner's fight enterprises.

But despite his prospective berth with the opposition, Overlin readily rallied to the cause.

Mentions Abrams

"If they would hold up the fight another ten days to give me a chance to loosen up I'd fight for Joe and not ask for anything," Overlin said matterly of factly. He was sitting at a table in O'Donnells' Sea Grill, where Uline was tossing a luncheon for newspapermen to introduce his new ice hockey coach, "Ching" Johnson, and also Lee Perrin, new general manager of the cavernous Northeast ice arena. Overlin is expected to be put in next fall as comatchmaker with Perrin.

"I think all these local fighters who have come up in the past few years owe Joe Turner a helluva lot—at least enough to go out there and fight free of charge," Overlin said. "That's not asking too much.

"I'm referring chiefly to fellows like Georgie Abrams and Steve Mamakos. Where would Abrams be today if Turner hadn't given him a chance to pick up enough stuff here to put him over in other places? I, for one, would be perfectly willing to fight gratis."

"Knife in the Back"

"But there's no such thing as gratitude in this racket . . . the only gratitude it knows is a knife in the back."

Although Overlin, whose recent loss to Billy Soose created a storm of protest, would donate his services, it's doubtful if Matchmaker Gabe Menendez will postpone the show to permit Ken to get back in shape.

Menendez yesterday signed a third eight-round battle to the Monday night program when he signed Joey Spangler, Richmond, Va., 155-pounder. Spangler will fight Joey

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

The Blankety-Bank So-and-So's . . .

New York, July 14.—A story out of Memphis last week had Bill Terry picking the Dodgers to win the pennant. In the first game Bill managed, after that story appeared, he confused the issue by cold-bloodedly handing a game to the Cards. Now he says that what he told the blankety-blank reporter at Memphis was that he thought the Dodgers, Cards and Giants had good chances to win the pennant. His inclusion of the Giants will come as a hard-to-believe surprise to many irate New York fans who are still growling over Blunt Bill's handling of the once-great baseball property.

CONSIDINE

Most of their beefing is built around Bill's curiously sadistic action in leaving Johnny Wittig in the box so long against the Cards that the Cards belted home five runs and won a rather important ball game. This came immediately after the Giants had tied up the game by scoring eight runs in a single frame—and the Giants have 8-run innings about as often as Lefty Gomez wins the batting title. Maybe Terry didn't believe his club's rally. Anyway, he let the guy stay in there long after it became apparent to the Dumbest Dora in the stands that Wittig couldn't get even his grandmother out. A couple of guys named Hubbell and Schumacher were ready to relieve, but Terry snubbed them. No game was scheduled for next day.

Aw, Will, Say It Ain't True

People we've talked to are convinced that Terry left Wittig in the box to punish him for something, just as he left the other pitcher of a few years ago in there to humiliate him for not keeping in top shape.

If Terry's action was born of petulance, we think the Giants should make a refund to those in the crowd of 35,000 or so who saw the game and can prove they saw it. For they were promised a contest and didn't get one. The ones we've talked to, or who have written their complaints to us, are convinced they got a royal rooking. They deserve some sort of official explanation from the Giants, or rather, from Terry—who runs the Giants. What he did looked like the act of a man so peevish and selfish that he put his own trite obstinacy ahead of the interests of the club and the contest.

Say it ain't so, Will.

Vic Ghezzi, the new P. G. A. champ, made a lot of friends for himself when he rammed home that putt that beat Byron Nelson last Sunday at Denver. Vic has never been accepted as a very great competitor in golf. He's a nice guy, we think, but his peers and contemporaries have been inclined to predict that he'll blow up under stress. Well, he didn't blow up at Denver. He licked the toughest golf field in the world, knocked over one man after another who were expected to cow him. Then beat the defending champion in extra innings. You can't expect any more of a man.

What Manner of Words Burned Basil?

We wonder if the average sports page reader realizes the strain of a big golf tournament. It is far greater than can be sculpted here with the 26 curved implements of the English alphabet. Suffice it to say that a lot of the players can't keep anything on their stomach near the end of a tournament. When they line up a putt, to see which way the green rolls, their overstrained eyes play weird tricks on them. Simple putts become more of a problem than fighting Joe Louis blindfolded.

All thoughtful students of profanity wish there could be some way to record Jimmy Dykes' now famous blast of invective against Umpire Steve Basil. What words, or what inflection, pierced the armorplate of the umpire's hide? Was it something new in the cuss line, or a fancy and imaginative grouping of the old hair-raisers? Whatever it was, it must have been worthy of being placed in the inner sanctum of epithets, for in his day Basil must have heard everything. Words and groupings which would curl the ears of an Army mule, or, if aimed at a lush putting green cause a brown-dirt drought, have been hurled at him. What, then, punctured him and sent him caterwauling to Will Harridge, president of the league, who threw up his hands in horror when Basil whispered it into his pink ear, and banned Dykes for days?

History has been made in profanity. And a measurably large proportion of the public is avid for the details. Dykes lost several hundred dollars by being put into jail. He could make that much plus a lot of ciphers on the end if he'd place what he said to Basil between the thin, asbestos pages of an unexpurgated book for private consumption.

Or, to paraphrase one of Ring Lardner's classics, Dykes might contact a good talking-machine company and arrange to make a phonograph record of what he said.

Andy K. Returns to Racing, Wins Empire Purse With Drive

Ex-Runout King Behaves Very Well

Sungino Second To $5.40 Favorite; Yankee Chance 1st In Second Feature

By the Associated Press

Empire City, N. Y., July 14.—Andy K., America's most famous run-out horse until Whilaway came along, today returned to the races for the first time since finishing a sulking last in the Arlington Classic a year ago. The Millsdale Stable's 4-year-old, at one time Bimelech's greatest rival, drove to a hard-earned victory in the short six furlongs of the Ten Point Purse, a $2,000 overnight sprint.

Showing no trace of his old tendency to tear for the outside on the turn, the Jack High colt held on like a game, fit animal to beat Mrs. C. S Bromley's Sungono by a head under 126 pounds, which included lightweight veteran Nick Wall. Sungino barely nosed out Mrs. Alice F. Sherman's Grey Wolf, which easily topped six other fair-to-middlin' performers.

Favorite at $5.40 to $2, Andy K. ran the distance in 1:09. It was by no means a sensational effort, but it served to show that Andy has not forgotten how to win. Whether he can beat more formidable opposition with this race under his belt is something for the future to decide.

C. V. Whitney's Yankee Chance was supposed to be in a soft spot when he faced three other colts in the mile and a sixteenth fifth race, the secondary attraction. The son of Peace Chance was installed favorite at 2 to 5, and won, but not in the manner indicated by his prohibitive price. The Whitneyite had trouble in the running but managed to score by a head over Abbe Pierre, the rank outsider. The latter beat Sun Eager by four lengths, with Ferocity a distant last.

Sun Eager showed the way most of the trip. Yankee Chance began his move at the far turn as he moved into second position. He became pocketed on the rail around the bend. Abbe Pierre gained command turning for home and looked a winner. Then Arcaro brought Yankee Chance to the outside and his mount finally wore down the long shot.

The day's handle was $804,495.

Whirly Tunes Up Today for Try at $40,000 Classic

By the United Press

Chicago, July 14. — Calumet Farm's Whirlaway, the king of the Nation's 3-year-old horses, will take a tune-up at Arlington Park tomorrow in preparation for the $40,000 Arlington Classic to be renewed on July 26.

The triple crown winner will carry top weight of 120 pounds in a $5,000 allowance event named the "Special," and scheduled for a mile and an eighth. Whirlaway will be coupled with a stablemate, Dandy Fox, 112, and will be at odds-on choice.

Against the Calumet duo will be sent To A Tee, 112; Cadmium, 112, and the entry of Daily Trouble, 112, and Bushwhacker, 115. The track is expected to be fast. The race will mark Whirlaway's first start since he won the Dwyer Stakes in New York last month.

Reagan to Play Bears With College Grid Stars

New York, July 14 (U.P.)—Francis X. Reagan, star left halfback for the University of Pennsylvania for the past three years, will play with the 1941 Eastern College All-Star football team against the New York Giants professional eleven on September 3, Coach Jim Crowley announced today.

Reagan's acceptance brought to five the number of players who have accepted. The others are Charley O'Rourke, Walt Matuszczak, Lou De Fillippo and Hank Toczylowski.

At The Post

Dear Al,

Well, I hope you scraped up a fresh bank roll on that off-day yesterday. Good time last week, better time this week. It has been pretty tough picking winners here due to the conglomeration of horses—from Charles Town, Delaware Park and elsewhere. But we had a few, including Victory Light. Should have a better line on them this week. Received a note from one of Palumbo's friends who hopes Sammy has quit the saddle forever. But he will be back at Bel Air. Jerry Young and Bill Paulsgrove, of WJEJ, are teaming on the air with the races here. Everyone is talking about the performance of Jockey Patsy Grant here last Friday when he fell, caught his mount and led the horse off the track. If you are wondering what has become of Aster Princess, the popular half-mile filly, she broke a leg and was destroyed at the Delaware Park meeting. Apprentice L. Gyzin has two winners under his belt now and should get some work as a result. Jockey Chester Walters is here and wants mounts. For one of the few times in his 20 years as outrider, Happy Gordon misjudged the weather. Last Saturday he forgot to don his oilskins and a downpour drenched him before he got the horses to the post. In contrast, Happy wore his rain coat all afternoon one day last week and it did not rain. With Huppy and Chilly Ebbie getting their names on the entry lists, the half-mile season is definitely in motion. Owner Davis, who forgets he is a "good neighbor," raves everytime somebody brings up the subject of winter racing in Cuba. Second and final week of Hagerstown opens today. All records for attendance and betting seem sure to go by the boards. By the way, Ocean City, Md., may come through with a race track. At least there is a move to build an oval at the resort. Donald Hay is doing a swell job of keeping the local mutuel department on its collective toes. I'm wondering if a certain trainer, successful in winning with freshly claimed horses, knows anything about why these horses generally run a poor race just before they change hands. See you on the rain.

Bill.

First race—ABBOTS CHANT was a handy winner over this track last week. Needs only to repeat that effort. OYSTER BAY raced well at Charles Town. GOOD GRASS was second to top one at this oval.

Second race—FARMLANDS has the speed to set the pace for these and I'm going to try to make him stay there all the way. SCHLEY GOREE is a good one and will be close. DON DASH will be closing fast.

Third race—BALKANESE is suited by conditions in this field. Runs honest races and I'm going to string along. LONG LEGS is a good one from Delaware Park. ASTER LADY would be a threat if taken off the reserve list.

Fourth race—ROMAN BOY is the speed of the entry ad seems well placed at 115 pounds. OWALLER did everything asked at the other town. LAST BET is speedy and dangerous

Lew Worsham Wins Jimmy Roche Golf in Baltimore with 138

Spectacular Finish Tops Baltimorean

Noses Out Beech's Subpar 139 by One Stroke on Last Hole; 2 D. C. Players Tie

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, July 14.—The golfers of this section honored Baltimore's grand old man of golf, Jimmy Roche, with an open tournament in his name here today at Elkridge, but at the end of 36 holes firing Washington's 23-year-old Lewis Worsham, jr., was the man of the hour with a winning 138 total.

The Burning Tree professional, leader at the halfway mark with a three-under-part 68, had to put on a pressure finish which included two birdies in the last four holes to nose out the sub-part challenge of Ralph Beach, the Suburban Club professional, who an hour before finished with an eagle and a birdie for 139.

Standing on the fifteenth tee, or thirty-third, Worsham was told he had to finish one under par to tie. He stepped up to his tee shot on the 290-yard uphill par four and knocked it on the green, two-putted for a birdie and needed par to tie. He parred the next and on the comparatively easy par five seventeenth dropped a 2-footer for a birdie. That left him with par five on the last hole to tie—and he didn't miss.

Worsham collected $125 for his four under par score for the two rounds. Beach, tied for second at the end of the morning round, pocketed second money of $80 for rounds of 71 and 68, finishing four under par for the last four holes of his nightcap.

Two of Washington's co-favored performers, Cliff Spencer, the Maryland Open champ and Al Houghton, the District Open titlist, tied for third with 142 each. Houghton had putting trouble all day, finally breaking his putter by accident late in the morning round and putting with a borrowed implement in the afternoon. Spencer, spraying his tee shots but recovering for pars and an occasional birdie in the first round for a 71, duplicated his round in the afternoon but he was always several strokes behind Worsham. Houghton, with 71-71, trailed at all times.

Brownell a Sensation

The amateur sensation of the day was Bobby Brownell, Manor's Middle Atlantic champion, who had a poor round for himself in the morning, a 75, but in the afternoon poured a 67 at the rest of the simon-pure coatingent and won honors easily with 142, third best score of the tournament. Brownell hit 17 of 18 greens in regulation figures in the afternoon and dropped four birdies, one a 25 footer on the last hole which left him with the best individual effort of the day.

Jimmy Roche, in whose honor the tournament was played and who has been professional at Elkridge for 38 years, believed to be a national record, was a fair golfer himself today. Jimmy, tiring badly at the finish, played his course in 72, 73—145 to tie for fifth with Levi Yoder, the Annapolis Roads pro and former District amateur, and Wiffy Cox, the Congressional mentor who was a threat until he took a seven on the par four seventh in the afternoon, driving out of bounds.

'Ching' Johnson Bows to Local Press Before Hockey Ivory Hunt for 'Ulines'

Veteran Ice Star, to Coach New A. L. Team Here, Guest at Luncheon

By Jack Munhall

"Ching" Johnson, who was the Babe Ruth of major league hockey when this city didn't even have a rink, bowed to the press here yesterday as coach of the Washington Ulines of the American League.

At a luncheon at O'Donnell's, the large, florid-faced veteran of 20 years of rough and ready action on the ice, revealed his plans for the coming season and predicted that in a few years the American League and not the National League would be the big league of ice hockey.

Johnson, called one of the greatest guards of the game when he played with the New York Rangers in the booming 20's, and respected by all rivals until his retirement in 1937, will leave soon on a player recruiting trip into Canada. With Manager Lee J. Perrin, he will scour the cradle of ice hockey in an effort to uncover about 100 promising youngsters. These he will add to a dozen or so seasoned campaigners whom he has lined up as the nucleus for the squad.

Like Eagle Stars

Though neither Johnson nor Perrin had much to say on the subject, by implication they disclosed their keen interest in a couple of stars of last year's Washington Eagles team of the Eastern Amateur League.

Norman Burns, leading scorer of the Eastern League, and Paul Courteau, colorful and bellicose French-Canadian star, are the two Eagles who may be seen here in different uniforms next season. Burns, though the property of the Cleveland Barons, a rival American League club, probably can be purchased at the right price. Paul Courteau, the Eagles' bellicose center and also a proficient scorer, was another locally known player who commanded attention from Johnson and Perrin.

Johnson, born in Winnipeg, Canada, December 7, 1896, has been active in ice hockey as player or coach since June, 1919, when he returned from overseas action with the Canadian army, Third Division Trench Mortars, and started playing with the Winnipeg Monarchs. From Winnipeg, Johnson was plucked by the mayor of Evaleth, Minn., who built a team around the stalwart 211-pound Johnson.

Stardom Began

That was the real beginning of his stardom. His next step up the ladder was with the Minneapolis team in the American Association. It was there he first teamed up with Tuffy Abel, who was to be his defensive partner for years. Johnson and Abel were so outstanding at messing up the opposing team's forwards, that it was only natural that they should soon land in the big-time. And they did in 1926 when Connie Smyth, in organizing the New York Rangers, signed the pair of them. During the 11 years he was with the Rangers, Johnson won great recognition as a rough and ready battler who spent a large part of his time in the penalty box or in the hospital with a varied collection of broken bones.

ners. In the second inning, Chase's first act was to throw a double to Lucadello. Then he walked Rick Ferrell and a bit later he walked Don Heffner to fill the bases. Clift got a run home with a fly to Cramer.

The third inning was Chase's worst. He got one man out and then walked Laabs, Lucadello and Ferrell in succession. Niggeling squeezed one run home with a bunt, and when Chase wild-pitched a ball to Heffner another run scored. Bucky Harris got him out of there at that point, and Kennedy fanned Heffner to limit the damage to two runs.

Travis' first hit, a dribbler over second, led to a run for the Nats in the second inning. George Archie moved him to third with a single to center and he scored when Jake Early hit into a force play at second. The Nats didn't get another run until the sixth.

Cramer opened that sixth with a double to center and Travis got him home with a single to center. Mickey Vernon doubled off the right-field wall and Travis moved to third. The Nats had a chance to get back in the ball game at that point, but Archie and Early grounded out, Travis scoring with a run that cut the Browns' lead to 5 to 3.

Travis tried to inspire some more runs in the eighth when he doubled to center and Shortstop Lucadello offered some encouragement when he muffed Vernon's grounder. Travis went to third and scored on Archie's long fly. Early grounded out to end the inning.

The Nats couldn't get to first base in the ninth, which is no way to wipe out a two-run deficit.

Redskins Offering All-Star Tickets

The Washington Redskins yesterday placed tickets for the Chicago Bears-College All Stars game on sale at their offices at Ninth and H Streets Northwest. The Redskin office received 150 $3.30 tickets for the game, scheduled for August 28 in Chicago's Soldiers Field.

McNeill Stops 3 Tennis Foes In Short Order

By the United Press

Forest Hills, N. Y., July 14.—Don McNeill, Oklahoma City's National Tennis champion, got out of a plane from Dayton at 5 p. m. today and exactly three hours and three opponents later rested in the fourth round of the New York State Clay Court singles championships.

McNeill, winner of the State crown last year, blasted his way through two opponents with the total loss of three games, after receiving a default from Harry Cotter, of Forest Hills. Ronnie Carroll, Forest Hills, went down, 6—2, 6—0, and Fred Dame, Garden City, N. Y., bowed, 6—1, 6—0.

Eight other contenders accompanied McNeill into the round of 16, and of this group four were seeded entries—Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, Calif.; Gene Mako, of Los Angeles; Sidney B. Wood, of New York, and Ted Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., seeded 4, 5, 7 and 8, respectively.

The other seeded players, Frankie Parker, of Altadena, Calif., No. 2; Jackie Kramer, of Los Angeles, No. 3, and Ladislav Hecht, of New York, No. 6, are a round behind.

Parker, also making his first start in the tournament, received a default from Rod Fielding and then conquered Bradley Slattery, 6—0, 6—1. Both of Parker's rivals were local players. Kramer, also the recipient of a first-round default, knocked off Bill Thompson, of Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—4.

Others who reached the rounds of 16 were Victor Seixas, of Philadelphia, newly-crowned National Interscholastic champion; Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, and Charley Mattmann, of the University of California.

Johnson Wins At Clementon; Walper 12th

By the Associated Press

Clementon, N. J., July 14.—Tying the course record with a two-under-par 68 after a "nightmare" first round of 78, Terl Johnson, of Plymouth, came from behind today to win the Philadelphia Open golf championship with a 36-hole total of 146.

Virtually overlooked in the field of more than 100 professionals and amateurs, Johnson, one of the last to finish, nosed out Bud Lewis, of Spring Haven, by a stroke. Lewis, first-round leader with a par 70, apparently had won by posting a second-round 77 for a 147 total over the difficult Pine Valley course.

Leo Walper, nationally known entry from Washington, shot a 74 in the morning, but took an 82 in the afternoon for a 156 total to finish in a tie for twelfth. Two other entries from the Washington area, Robert Barnett, of Chevy Chase, and Charles Malone, of Indian Spring, shot a 81—84—165 and 90—84—174, respectively.

J. Wood Platt, of Philadelphia, was low amateur a year ago, shot 162.

Grange said tonight that he will not be a member of a committee of University of Illinois football lettermen which will appear tomorrow before a meeting of the board of trustees at which the turbulent athletic situation will be considered.

"I'd just rather not go out there," Grange said. "I'm for Zup. I want him to stay at Illinois. That's why I told my story."

Arlingtonian Makes Child's Hobby Pay Off

Calm and collected, "Miss Arlington," William T. Tompkins' prize carrier pigeon, rests in her master's hands for the photographer. "Miss Arlington" was responsible for Tompkins winning the old bird best average speed diploma in the Arlington Racing Pigeon Club

William T. Tompkins Wins Speed Diploma For Arlington Club

A child's hobby that he developed into an adult's pastime has paid off in dividends this year for William T. Tompkins, of 2338 North Fillmore Street, Arlington, Va.

Tompkins, member of the Arlington Racing Pigeon Club, became interested in pigeons when his young son started building up a loft several seasons ago, delved into the pigeon business to such an extent that he became a dyed-in-the-wool racing fan and this year came up with his fourth best average speed diploma.

It's not a long jump from "just raising pigeons" to breeding and raising carrier pigeons in which the mysterious homing instinct has been bred for thousands of years, Tompkins admits, but his lofts entitle him to that expert's place in the inner circle of Washington's legions of pigeon-racing fanciers.

For four straight years, birds from Tompkins' loft of 150 birds have won speed diplomas awarded by the American Racing Pigeon Union. Tompkins has just been awarded the 1941 "old bird" diploma—largely because Miss Arlington has been carrying the load.

Miss Arlington is his 2-year-old blue check hen which beat out 600 other birds in the 500-mile race from Cleveland, Tenn. Tompkins also was the only man to turn in a clock on a bird in the 600-mile race from LaGrange, Ga.—a flight which weather setbacks turned into a smash. Officials of the Racing Pigeon Club have not yet computed his speed in yards per minute.

Seven Races On Midget Card Tonight

Seven of the first ten ranking point scorers in the American Racing Drivers' Circuit will be included in tonight's starting field when midget automobile competition is continued with a seven-event program at the West Lanham (Md.) Speedway at 8:30 o'clock.

Statistics released yesterday reveal that the leading point scorers throughout the circuit are ranked as follows: Henry Banks, 1,778; second, Mike Joseph 1,320; third, Len Duncan, 1,318; fourth, Bill Holmes, 1,249; fifth, Ernie Gesell, 1,232; sixth, Ted Tappett, 1,066; seventh, John Sweir, 958; eighth, Bill Schindler, 879; ninth, Henry Steiger, 847, and tenth, Johnny Ringer, 827.

All save Banks, Sweir and Schindler are expected to compete tonight in West Lanham's final tune-up test prior to the Atlantic States Championship Derby of 40 laps a week from tonight at 8:30.

Prior to Gessell's spectacular stretch finish that brought him victory in last week's feature race, Joseph and Dickey each had scored in a main event. Joseph also brought 5,200 fans to their feet in the first semifinal race last Tuesday when he hit an average of 69 miles per hour over a 12-lap route to get a new track record. Banks bounced right back to hit a 60-mile hourly pace while bettering Joseph's time in the second semifinal, but this performance failed to dim the splendid driving of Joseph, a big favorite among Lanham fans.

Joseph, Dickey, Duncan and Tappett all will be making a mass attack on Banks' speed record at the starting signal tonight, and added experienced gained through driving on the new track is expected to strengthen their respective bids.

Tonight's prize money will be hiked from $1,000 to $1,500 and one of the largest crowds yet assembled at West Lanham is the prospect. Tickets remain on sale at the Standard Capitol Servicenter, between Second and Third on Constitution Avenue Northwest, until 6 p. m. today after which they will be placed on sale at the Speedway.

Palisades Wins

Agriculture Net Team Wins

Agriculture's tennis team increased its Departmental League lead yesterday on the Mall courts when it shut out Farm Credit, 5 to 0.

In individual matches the team of Mather and Myers defeated Allen and Brownell, 6—1, 6—0; Doyle-Waymack defeated Foster-Slemmons, 6—3, 6—1; Landers-Joy defeated Lydle-Flannery by default; Medlin-Larsen defeated Hulburt-Hulburt, 6—3, 6—4, and Thompson-Seay defeated Tomson-Weatherly, 6—1, 6—0.

Reliance Beats O'Donnell's Nine, 6 to 1

The upsetting Reliance Insurance nine hung up its second victory in three days over O'Donnell's Grill yesterday, a 6-1 decision in a Washington Post-Industrial League game on the Ellipse. Saturday Reliance downed the Grillmen, 4 to 3.

With Warren Erhardt tossing steady ball, the winners went into the fourth inning on the short end of a 1-0 count yesterday and settled the issue right there. They hung up all six of their runs in one frame.

Three hits, three of Bill Liggett's four bases on balls, and an error accounted for the big spree.

Today's Post League action finds Cameo Furniture, the leader which is being pressed by Reliance, facing its old nemesis in the Heurich Brewers. The game at the South Ellipse will start at 5 p. m. Frank Deavers and Art Lacey are slated to hurl for the respective clubs.

Softball Body Warns Kavakos, Senate Players on Rough Play

Bitter Rivals, to Meet Tomorrow, Must Avoid 'Unpleasantries'

A warning that any unpleasantries which may arise tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium when Kavakos Grill and Senate Beer meet in their softball battle at 8:30 p. m. would be severely dealt with by the D. C. Softball Association was forthcoming from headquarters yesterday.

Both "Big Bill" Kavakos and Tom Clark, managers of Kavakos Grill and Senate Beer tens, respectively, have been warned that they would, as pilots of the contesting teams, be held directly responsible for the conduct of their players.

The game which was arranged through the D. C. Softball Association for the benefit of the United Service Organizations and softball funds, the latter to be used to help send the D. C. championship ten to the National Tournament at Detroit in September.

"Cannonball" Jack Smith, youthful fireball hurler for Kavakos, and Abe Rosenfield, veteran Senate pitcher star, will oppose on the mound. Three times this year they have opposed when Smith was a member of the L. B. M. ten, Rosenfield winning two decisions and Smith one, all three games.

In a special feature, starting at 8:30 p. m. half-hour before game time, a special 100-yard dash for local softball players will be held. Already entered are "Pie" Juliano, of Senate; "Butch" St. Lawrence and Bill Trench, of Fat Boy; Fred Manning, of Evening Star; "Pheasant" Baldwin, of Pepco; "Battling" Brown, of May Hardware, and "Jockey" Quill, of Kavakos. All team members of the District of Columbia Association desiring to enter a player are eligible and may do so by contacting Charley Reynolds, president of the District of Columbia Softball Association. In case of a field too large, Reynolds said entries would be restricted to one man per team.

Tourist Travel Reported 20% Heavier in D. C.

Tourist traffic to and through Washington is running now at the highest level in the city's history, according to George E. Keneipp, manager of Keystone Automobile Club's touring bureau.

Travel to Washington is fully 20 per cent above last year's, he reported yesterday, and the rate of increase has been rising from week to week. He stated that all indications point to continued increases with a peak being reached in August.

June Gas Sales Spurt

The Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported that sales in June totaled 881,749 m.c.f. (thousands cubic feet), as compared with 755,941 m.c.f. in the same month last year.

Gas sales in the first six months aggregated 8,453,419 m.c.f., against 8,106,952 in the same 1940 period.

Mrs. Laura S. Pester, agency cashier, was the only woman member of the honor group.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. Has the Government set a quota to be raised through the sales of Defense Savings Bonds?

A. No; there is no quota and no time limit. The Defense Savings program is to be a continuing effort, and both Defense Bonds and Stamps should be purchased steadily and regularly.

Q. Are "Baby Bonds" still available, or have they been replaced by Defense Savings Bonds?

A. The Series E Defense Bond is substantially the same as the previous series popularly known as "Baby Bonds."

Q. Can I authorize my employer to allot portions of my salary each pay day until enough is accumulated to buy a Defense Savings Bond?

A. Yes. More than a million workers and salaried people have already asked that their money be saved in this way.

Q. Does the Treasury provide systematic savings facilities for individuals not employed by those aganizations which have payment-allotment plans?

A. Yes. The Treasury has a regular purchase plan under which especially designed reminder envelopes are mailed at intervals of your choice. Nearly 100,000 people are already using this plan to save systematically.

NOTE.—To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest postoffice or bank, or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, for an order form.

Two J. & L. Investors Sue to Enjoin Plan

Pittsburgh, July 14 (AP).—Two preferred stockholders of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation today asked the Federal District Court for a preliminary injunction to restrain the corporation from holding a stockholders meeting July 22 to act on a proposal for revamping the firm's capital structure.

The stockholders, Bertha H. Hubbard and Norman Johnson, declared the plan was "unfair, inequitable and unlawful" and would deprive preferred stockholders of valuable rights. Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker set Wednesday for a hearing.

The plan, as outlined June 10 by the corporation, provided for the merger into the corporation of two subsidiaries, Vesta Coal Co. and Shannopin Coal Co., conversion of the present 7 per cent preferred stock and conversion of present common stock into new securities.

Rails Buoyant in Irregular Market; Steels Cling to Moderate Advances

New York, July 14.—Rails put on a little rallying excursion of their own in today's stock market but most other departments failed to get aboard.

The list showed considerable reluctance at the start to emulate the drive of last week, best in more than a year. Trends then turned irregular and maintained this course to the close. Revival in the carriers after midday proved a moderately steadying influence.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 43.5. Dealings dwindled as prices hesitated and transfers of 563,830 shares were smaller than for any full session in the preceding week. They compared with 806,525 Friday.

Brokers reported lightening of commitments here and there on the theory a "corrective" reaction might be in the offing because of the sharp advance. Business news was a stimulator for individual issues. Conflicting war bulletins and other foreign happenings provided scant speculative inspiration. Price Administrator Henderson's warning that higher living costs were coming served to keep the inflation bee buzzing mildly.

United States Steel, Bethlehem, Republic and Youngstown Sheet clung to minor gains as this week's mill operations were estimated up .4 of a point at 97.2 per cent of capacity.

Transportation stocks were bouyed by bright earnings prospects and the fact the majority were believed "behind the market." Atlantic Coast Line and Southern Railway posted new 1941 tops. Ahead also were Santa Fe, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Great Northern.

Wright Aeronautical, a 10-share trading unit, jumped 10 points on meager turnover to 111, a new year's high. Modest advances were held by Consolidated Aircraft, Allied Chemical, Texas Corporation, Socony-Vacuum, Sears Roebuck, Union Carbide and United States Gypsum.

On the losing end were Douglas Aircraft, Johns-Manville, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Telephone, Western Union, Pepsi-Cola, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Chrysler and General Motors.

In a ragged Curb a forward slant was exhibited by Humble Oil, American Cyanamid "B". United Specialties and Raytheon Mfg. Under water were Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, Electric Bond & Share and Gulf Oil. Volume here was around 106,000 shares against 166,000 in the previous five-hour session.

A selected group of railroad bonds advanced fractions to more than a point in today's market as the general corporate list moved narrowly with the trend mixed.

The action of stock exchange bond brokers in lowering the commissions on Government bonds had the immediate effect of stimulating business in this division considerably. Total sales of Governments on the big board were $947,000, par value, an amount high in relation to the meager turnover of late months when a major part of the business was handled over the counter. Prices ended 18-32 of a point higher to 11-32 lower. A similar trend prevailed in the outside market.

Better than average performers among corporates included Bush Terminal 5s at 54½, Laclede Gas 5½s at 78½, Lehigh Valley 4½s at 33¾, Central of Georgia 5s at 16¼, St. Paul 5s at 12½, International Mercantile Marine 6s at 89 and Southern Railway 4s at 62½.

Transfers of $9,496,850, par value, compared with $8,778,900 on Friday.

Cotton Strong, Other Staples Move Lower

By the Associated Press

Cotton took the lead in commodity futures markets that moved higher yesterday, but some staples failed to follow the trend.

At New York cotton closed 70 to 95 cents a bale ahead on optimistic buying that followed naming of a textile price advisory committee and reports of unfavorable weather and crop conditions.

Cottonseed oil gained .10 to .19 of a cent a pound in sympathy.

In the import list, coffee ranged .03 of a cent lower to .06 higher, and rubber was .05 to .2 of a cent higher. Silk gained 5 to 6½ cents a pound on increased worry over the Far Eastern situation.

Expectation that Britain would buy sugar from Cuba and nearby sources boosted world contract sugar .04½ to .05½ of a cent.

The Associated Press index of 35 staples traded in cash markets slipped to 89.21 per cent of the 1926 average from 89.27 per cent Saturday.

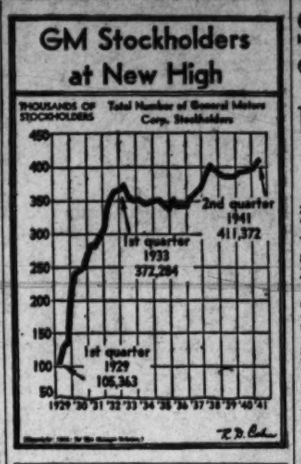
Grains Close Lower

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—Rapidly accumulating terminal market wheat supplies, increasing threats of serious congestion at some points, and German claims of successes in Russia were major factors in today's wheat price decline of a cent a bushel or more.

Reports were current that increasing restrictions against wheat shipments to some terminals for storage will be necessary. Although most of the weekend accumulation of grain arriving today was for storage, there was enough hedging pressure to give prices a downward trend, and prices at Minneapolis were 1½@1⅞ cents lower, reflecting large receipts of old grain.

Wheat here closed ¾@1⅛ lower than Saturday, July 1.04@1.03⅝, September 1.05½@1.05⅝; corn ⅛@⅜ down, July 73½, September, 75½; oats ¼@¾ off; soybeans ⅜ lower to ¼ higher; rye ⅛@½ down, and lard 5-10 lower.

Chicago received 503 cars of wheat, largest so far this season, and spot prices were ½@1 cent lower. Kansas City had 1,342 cars, St. Louis 271 and Omaha 421. Receipts at the 12 principal interior terminals totaled 6,415,000 bushels, compared with 6,667,000 a week ago, when the season's peak apparently was established, and 6,217,000 a year ago. Receipts at Kansas City and St. Louis, where partial embargoes against grain for storage are in effect, were smaller than a week ago.



U.S. Armament Seen Entering Third Phase

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 14.—The United States is entering a munitions production stage that will test transportation to the limit and create labor and material shortages which will be seriously felt by other industries, the Cleveland Trust Co. declared today.

"Our defense effort is entering into a third phase, which will be quite different in its impact on business from the two phases that have preceded it," the bank said in its monthly business bulletin.

"The first phase was one in which the placing of contracts for munitions constituted the main defense activity of the Army, the Navy and other defense agencies. Of course that work still continues, but it was the dominating defense activity from early in 1940 into the final quarter of last year.

"The second phase was one which may be termed the tooling-up period. * * * It has been going forward at such speed that the number of machine tools put into production lines in the second quarter of this year will probably prove to have been about three times as great as those that were placed there in the final quarter of last year."

The bank added that large-scale munitions production "will progressively affect almost every kind of business activity, and in innumerable instances in ways as yet quite unforeseeable."

"What is sure," it concluded, "is that we have now really said goodby to business as usual."

Steel Users' 'Panic' Held Unjustified

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 1.—The magazine Steel asserted today that "mild hysteria which developed last week on the part of many civilian steel users is in large measure unjustified."

"So far the worst suffering among consumers has taken the form of pinches and inconveniences, with but very few cases where steel shortage has halted production lines," the trade publication said in its weekly review.

"Pinches come mostly from alloy steel shortages. Aggravating the apparent strain on civilian needs is the fact that some consuming plants are working at 100 per cent of capacity, contraseasonally, making products which would normally be made next winter. Often such full operations are due to insistence of suppliers that the material be taken into consuming plants immediately.

"Meanwhile the civilian situation should become better as various adjustments are made. Rationing on part of steelmakers becomes stricter and juster; many less essential porducts are being abandoned.

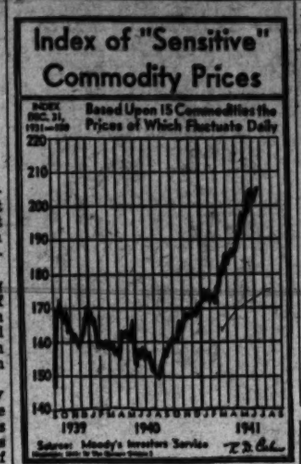
"Substitutes for steel are often being made for the duration. Taxes and other Government impositions will tend automatically to restrict civilian uses. Part of the hysteria is reflection on possible distress of the future rather than conditions of the present, as well as to false rumors circulated."

Steel said ingot production for the first half of 1941 was 40,911,886 net tons, within 20 per cent of production for all of 1917, and a gain of nearly 40 per cent over the first half of 1940.

The national production rate advanced 4 points last week to 7⅛ per cent of estimated capacity in recovering from the July 4 holiday. The Chicago district was down 1 point to 100½ per cent, and three districts were unchanged, Birmingham and New England at 90 and St. Louis at 98. Advances were: Buffalo 17½ points to 93; Cincinnati, 6½ to 88; Detroit, 13 to 96; Eastern Pennsylvania, 5 to 97; Pittsburgh, 2 to 99½; Wheeling, 4 to 91; Youngstown 8 to 98, and Cleveland, 4 to 96½.

Week's Steel Output Rises to 97.2% Rate

New York, July 14 (AP).—Steel operations for this week today were estimated by the American Iron and Steel Institute at 97.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 96.8 per cent in the previous week. A month ago the mills were operating at an average of 99 per cent and a year ago at 86.3 per cent.



Parley Today May Clarify Textile Jam

By the Associated Press

New York, July 14.—Cotton goods traders stood wistfully on the market sidelines today, as they have for the two weeks since Price Administrator Leon Henderson fixed maximums on six kinds of wholesale cotton cloth, but they saw hope in the appointment of a Textile Industry Advisory Committee that will meet tomorrow.

The general feeling was that the price fixing order paralyzed the market by leaving mill men "so completely in the dark that we don't know what we can do legally or how to do it if we did know."

They were emphatic in declaring: "There is no sellers' strike, no collusion; we're just stymied."

The price schedule's designation of six "standard constructions" of cloth left mill men confused, they said, as to just how much a weave could vary from them and still come under the rule.

They expressed the hope that Price Chief Henderson and the committee of textile experts would revise the order.

"Prospects for clarification seem better," one mill representative commented.

There was some trade in styled fbrics which mills felt weren't covered by Henderson's edict. A few mills, too, were reported taking orders at prices to be adjusted to any future action by Congress or the Office of Price Administration and Consumer Supply.

The mills would like for Henderson and the committee to check on the cost of all types of goods, then decide what a reasonable profit would be.

Then, they feel, a differential between the multitude of varieties of the same general type of cloth could be established. Patterns, the threads per inch—which vary from a dozen or so up to and above 150, and the quality of raw material ought to be considered, they said.

In the meantime, mills were reported on full schedule, working on orders written before the price action. One Worth Street trader said he believed all the cloth being made was going to manufacturers, and none into inventories.

Rail Expansion Program Seen Falling Down

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 14.—Ralph Budd, transportation member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, declared today that the railroads' equipment expansion program is falling down because needed materials can not be obtained.

Speaking before the American Short Line Railroad Association, Budd said that a year ago he had set 100,000 new cars, including 40,000 replacements, as the goal railroads should reach by October 1, 1941, but he predicted they would fall 20,000 cars short.

"The orders were placed for these cars and also for necessary locomotives," Budd stated, "but I regret to say that the program has fallen down and is falling down."

He said that car manufacturers do not lack capacity or the willingness to build cars, and attributed the present "rate of interruption" to the shortage of material and to delays from strikes at car building and supply plants.

Budd added that unless material is released for railway use the program will fall down worse in the future, because the railways had hoped to add 120,000 cars to their ownership.

He said the average freight car is in transit only about 10 per cent of the time and suggested that through faster loading and unloading of freight cars the carrying capacity of existing railway cars could be lifted as much as 25 per cent.

U. S. Bond Brokers Reduce Fees to Win Back Trade

New York July 14 (AP).—Commissions on the buying and selling of United States Government bonds on the New York Stock Exchange have been halved in an effort to bring back to the Big Board a substantial part of the business now transacted by telephone in the over-the-counter market, it was disclosed today.

The Association of Bond Brokers of the exchange devised the charge for buying a $1,000 obligation of the Government to 15.6 cents from 31.2 cents.

The rules of the exchange provide only that commission charges of brokers for Governments shall be "by mutual agreement," so that the action was not an official one of the exchange, which itself has been studying for months the question of revising upward its service charges on stocks to compensate for dwindling business.

The Association of Bond Brokers also agreed to cut their charge for transactions in New York City bonds to 62½ cents per $1,000 face value from $1.25.

ODD BODKINS — By FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

DON'T WORRY, GWEN! I'LL SEE THAT NOTHING HAPPENS TO HIM!
REMEMBER MY VOW ABOUT BEING KIND TO ALL DUMB ANIMALS? WELL, I GUESS YOU COULD CALL SYLVESTER DUMB!
HERE THEY COME BACK!
WE'LL STAKE THE GOAT IN YOUR NORTH MEADOW AND TEST MY NEW EXPLOSIVE. THERE! REMEMBER, THIS IS OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT BUSINESS, MR. O'VEER!
I'M STILL SCARED!
ALL I COULD HEAR WAS "NORTH MEADOW!"
WELL, I'M GONNA HIDE RIGHT OUT IN THE MIDDLE OF IT AND SEE WHAT HAPPENS!

JOE PALOOKA — Pals — BY HAM FISHER

GOSH JOEY WHEN YA THINK HOW WE HATED ONE ANOTHER AN' NOW YOU'RE THE BEST FRIEND I EVER HAD.
I NEVER HATED YOU RED. I WAS KINDA SORE ONCE--BUT NEVER HATED YOU. LET'S NEVER REFER TO IT.
OKAY KID. WE'LL CLEAN UP IN THAT BOXIN' CARNIVAL AN' JERRY'S THE HAPPIEST GUY IN THE WORLD BECUZ WE'RE LETTIN' 'IM BE OUR SECOND.
NOW DON'T YOU TWO GO BETTIN' YOUR NEXT SIX MONTHS PAY.
THEY'LL BE WANTIN' A LATER FIGHT BETWEEN YOU AN' ME, BUT THAT I'LL NEVER DO. I'LL D'FAULT T'YOU.
LOOK YA BIG BOO--I MEAN YOU KIN LICK ME THE BEST DAY I EVER LIVED. I WON'T FIGHT YA. I'LL DEFAULT--SEE!!
LOOK OUT HEY!

WINNIE WINKLE — Ins and Outs — BY BRANNER

THIS HUNTING A JOB IS DISCOURAGING - I'M GETTING TO THE POINT WHERE I'LL TAKE ALMOST ANYTHING--
WELL, I SHOULD SAY NOT! I DON'T WANT THAT JOB!
GOSH - A JOB - I'LL TAKE IT!!
AHHHH - YOU'LL DO FINE FOR MY MODEL!
NOT ME! I DON'T WANT THAT JOB!!
WHAT! A JOB?? I'LL TAKE IT!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

JANE ARDEN — Rec. U. S. Pat. Off. — Three Guesses — BY MONTE BARRETT AND RUSSELL ROSS

LET-ME OUT OF HERE!
OF COURSE NOT - I TELL YOU I FLEW HIM DOWN HERE TO COVER THIS FLOOD STORY!
THEN HE REALLY IS A REPORTER? HE'S NOT CRAZY?
BUT THAT GIRL - AND THE SHERIFF - THEY SAID YOU WERE CRAZY!
THAT JANE ARDEN DID THIS TO ME -
COME ON - I CAN STILL BEAT THEM WITH MY PICTURES - THEY CAN'T GET THEIR PLANE OUT OF THE WATER!
LOOK - THERE GOES OUR PLANE!
YEAH - AND I'LL GIVE YOU THREE GUESSES WHO'S IN IT!
THAT MUST HAVE BEEN JANE ARDEN WHO SENT ME TO FIND YOU!

SUPERMAN — Looks Bad! — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

AS YOU KNOW, SUPERMAN BATTLES FOR THE LAW--- NEVER AGAINST IT!
NO MISTAKE AT ALL!
YOU CAN ASK ANY OF A DOZEN EYEWITNESSES, AND THEY'LL ALL GIVE YOU THE SAME ANSWER.
IT WAS SUPERMAN!
NO DOUBT ABOUT IT!
(I DON'T BELIEVE THEY'RE LYING. CAN IT BE POSSIBLE I WAS GUILTY OF THIS OUTRAGE WHILE OUT OF MY MIND? NO, THAT EXPLANATION IS OUT... THE ANSWER, I'M SURE, IS EVEN MORE SINISTER!)
THE PUBLIC DEMANDS THAT SUPERMAN BE CAPTURED BEFORE HE COMMITS FURTHER OUTRAGES!
NICE WORK, "LIPPY"--BUT YOU MUST RAISE THE PUBLIC'S INDIGNATION EVEN HIGHER!
JUST LEAVE IT TO ME, COKER! BEFORE I FINISH, SUPERMAN'S NAME WILL BE SO BLACK, YOU'LL BE ABLE TO RENT IT OUT AS A BLACKBOARD!

One thing that can be said definitely about radio is that it brings families together. And we can prove it.

On one program over WJSV today, for instance, a mother and daughter who haven't seen each other for something like 38 years are to meet again. And, by coincidence, on another program, entirely unrelated, two brothers and a sister who have been separated for a mere 39 years are to be brought together.

The mother and daughter are to appear on "We The People" at 8 p. m. The mother is Mrs. Sue Gordan, of Dallas, Tex. The daughter is Mrs. Glen Cannon, of Russell, Kans. Together they'll tell the story of their separation and how they happen to be getting together again.

The other family group have been brought together through the efforts of "The Court of Missing Heirs," which found that they all were due some money left them by a maternal aunt. Their names are Mary Schultze, of New York City; James Schultze, of Stroudsburg, Pa., and Henry Schultze, of Ozone Park, Long Island, which is only a few miles out of New York City.

It all makes radio seem pretty much like a family affair.

Contract Bridge

Fear of a double made J. D. timid in the South cards of this deal, which took place in a rubber bridge game when neither side was vulnerable:

North
♠ A 8 6
♡ 9 8 4 2 3
◇ Q 10 7 5
South
♡ K
◇ A K 8 6 2
♣ K Q 8 7 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
2 ◇	Pass	3 ◇	3 ♠
4 ◇	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

The four-spade contract was made, but five diamonds also would have been successful. I told partner he should have taken me to five diamonds; he insisted I was strong enough to get there under my own power. What do you think?

South could jump to five diamonds directly after East's three-spade bid, but at this point four diamonds is a fine call. It tells North that South requires a first-round trick to make game, the ace of hearts, clubs or spades. The king, queen of spades, for example, will do him no good. Holding the spade ace, North would go to game in diamonds but for the intervening bid.

With the decision passed around to him, South is squarely faced with the question of trying for a game at diamonds or possibly letting the adversaries score at spades. To prevent an adverse game is well worth the slight risk at five diamonds. South's duty to his side is clear.

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

I SAY, I FEEL LIKE A ROTTER, DRAGGING YOU ALONG ON THIS EXPEDITION TO THE ARCTIC, KING—YOU HAVEN'T BEEN TO BED FOR THIRTY HOURS!
YOU'RE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR THAT, MR. NELO—BUT SOMETHING TELLS ME THAT RECORD'S GOING TO BE STRETCHED!
IT'S UP TO YOU NOW, COUSIN QUILL. THE SOONER YOU ARRANGE FOR UNCLE NELO'S DEMISE, THE SOONER YOU'LL SHARE HIS WEALTH! GOOD HUNTING!
JUST LEAVE IT TO ME, JUDY!
COME ON QUILL! WELL, KING, AT LEAST WE CAN RELAX ON THIS FIRST LEG OF OUR LONG JOURNEY!
I HOPE SO, MR. NELO!

They Get Up at Five

Navy Life Begins With 6-Week Instruction

This is the second of several articles by John O'Reilly, a staff correspondent who is touring United States naval training bases. In this article Mr. O'Reilly discusses how the raw recruit is initiated into Navy life.

By John O'Reilly

Norfolk, Va., July 14.—At 4:45 a. m. the master at arms in the Naval Training Station here calls the guard. At 5 a. m. the guard turns on a phonograph. From the phonograph record the bugle notes of reveille are amplified and ring out over the detention area. The day has started for recruits who have been in the Navy less than three weeks. Those who have been in more than three weeks get to sleep longer. Their reveille recording is not turned on until 5:30 a. m.

By 5:20 a. m. hundreds of new sailors are jogging along the streets or going through setting-up exercises on the drill field. Back from a 2-mile run, they make up their bunks. Seabags containing their clothes and personal belongings are hung in rows on iron pipes. Each bag is tied to the pipe with the same knot. After the floors of the barracks have been swept, the recruits wash themselves and march to the mess hall for breakfast. Here a sample breakfast consists of hash, eggs, an orange, cereal, coffee and bread. It must be good food, because Ship's Cook First Class James Greer Frizell, who eats his own cooking, weighs 315 pounds.

After breakfast the training area bustles with the numerous activities of the six-week basic training period. Sailors scrub their own clothes. They learn to march and they learn the manual of arms. Boxing is required. Much of a new sailor's time is devoted to learning the necessity of cleanliness. They are always scrubbing something.

"NAVAL OPERATIONS"—Sailors and their dates dance at a weekly party held in the Hostess House, main social center of the Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va.

While the recruits are going through the routine of their training, groups of young men are arriving at the recruit receiving unit. The corresponds to the receiving stations which have been set up for the handling of selectees arriving in the Army.

The young men who arrive here are recruited almost entirely from the Southern States. The most noticeable thing about any group of new arrivals is their youth. About half of them are 17 or 18 years old. They are all volunteers for a six-year enlistment period or a minority enlistment. The latter means that if a boy is 17 years old he may serve until he is 21.

Most of them come from farms and small towns of the South. They have had little or no experience in anything that the Navy requires. But the Navy prides itself on its schools and its ability to develop men both physically and mentally. They are marched into the receiving building, shed their clothing and issued a pair of skivvies (Navy term for shorts), a towel and a piece of soap.

Then they start through the first steps of becoming a sailor. They undergo a physical examination. Besides blood tests and numerous other tests, each man has his chest X-rayed. They have a machine with which 90 men can be X-rayed in an hour. Their teeth are examined and records are kept for future dental work.

Many recruits are dismayed when they take their place in the barber chair. Navy regulations call for hair no longer than an inch and a half. It is an old Navy joke to ask a recruit, who is obviously proud of his long locks, just how he wants his hair cut. The recruit gives elaborate instructions only to get a haircut just like all the rest. In the days when the heads of recruits were clipped, they were asked where they would like their hair parted. If the recruit said he would like the part in the middle, the barber would take the clippers and clip a swathe across the top of the head. Then he would proceed to clip the rest of the recruit's hair.

After his examinations a recruit is issued his clothing. His sizes are taken and marked on a slip, which is presented at a window. Then he is handed a mattress cover and another sailor helps him hold it open like a large bag in front of the issuing window. Then a shower of hats, shoes, trousers, leggings, toilet articles and all the other things a sailor needs start dropping into the mattress cover. The list totals 89 articles and comes near to filling the matress cover.

A recruit receives a salary of $21 a month. After he has been in a week he receives $5 with which to buy a few things and ship his civilian clothes back home. During his six weeks of training he is not given any leaves. At the end of the six weeks he receives the rest of the money coming to him and is given a leave of nine days. Upon returning from this recruit leave, he either goes to sea or starts going to one of the Navy's service schools.
